(N.B.)—(1) This publication embodies Cases from the Reports marked above with asterisks.

(2) In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, the cases are known by their numbers and not by the pages where there are printed; (e.g.) 4 P.R. 1911 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1911. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

(3) For Cases from Reports other than those published in India, the volumes and pages are printed exactly in the manner they are to be found in the original cases wherein they are referred to.

OF

INDIAN CASES, 1914.

FINAL PART.

SECTION I—(CRIMINAL CASES).

Abetment.

- (1) Abetment — Presence — Inaction — Criminality—Probability compatible with innocence—Conviction, justification for.

Where, in a murder case, a co-accused stated that she remained an unwilling spectator while the offence was being committed by the other accused.

Held, that the alleged omission of a co-accused to intervene or raise an alarm did not constitute an abetment of murder, inasmuch as her inaction did not constitute criminality.

Where the circumstances of a case point to the conclusion that the accused committed the offence, but there is also a reasonable probability compatible with his innocence, there is no sufficient justification for the conviction of the accused. Sarju Prasad v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 617=25 Ind. Cas. 625.

STUART and KANHAIYA LAL, A.J. CS.

(2) Appellate Court whether entitled to alter conviction for principal offence into one of abetment—Abettor present at commission of offence whether can be convicted of principal offence. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 313, 15 Cr. L.J. 694.

(3) Abettor of forgery—Whether can be convicted of the offence of using the document as genuine. See PENAL CODE, No. 30, 15 Cr. L.J. 568.

Accomplice.

- (1) Accomplice, competency of, as witness—Corroboration required, nature of.

An accomplice is a competent witness and there is no absolute rule of law which enacts that the conviction on the evidence of an accomplice is bad, but there is an established practice, founded on the judicial experience of generations, which requires corroboration by some untainted evidence and that in a material particular pointing not only to the crime but to the participation of the accused in that crime. Siar Nonia v. The King Emperor, 18 C.W. N. 550=15 Cr. L.J. 438=24 Ind. Cas. 174.

JENKINS, C.J., and SHARFUDDIN, J.

- (2) Evidence—Accomplice — Corroboration—Conviction thereon.

Though it had been held in recent cases that a conviction based upon the evidence of an accomplice or even on the confession of a co-accused is not illegal, it has been also repeatedly and uniformly laid down that it is quite unsafe to convict a man on such testimony unless there is reliable corroborative evidence in material particulars. P. S. Narayana Iyer v. Emperor, (1914) M.W.N. 863=15 Cr. L.J. 417=24 Ind. Cas. 153.

WALLIS and SADASIVA IYER, J.J.

(3) Suspected participator in crime appearing as prosecution witness—Weight to be attached to his statement. See EVIDENCE ACT, No. 29, 15 Cr. L.J. 410.

Accused.

(1) Prosecution against one of two accused withdrawn—Such accused if competent witness—Confession and prior statements of such accused if should be produced for cross-examination and contradiction. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 372, 18 C.W.N. 1213.

(2) Right of accused to cross-examine prosecution witnesses after charge framed—Duty of Magistrates. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 245, 11 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

* (3) Sessions trial for murder—Application by defence counsel for postponement of cross-examination till next day—Refusal by Sessions Court—Effect—Accused prejudiced—Re-trial by another Sessions Court ordered. See CROSS-EXAMINATION, No. 1, 41 C. 299.

THE CURRENT INDEX, 1914.

Accused—(Concluded).

(4) Re-calling of warrant after acquittal of co-accused—Jurisdiction of District Magistrate to issue fresh warrant on same materials. See PENAL CODE, No. 10, 18 C.W.N. 580.

(5) Examination of accused before completion of prosecution evidence—Legality. See PENAL CODE, No. 23, 15 Cr. L.J. 486.

(6) Nature of defence which accused can set up—Duty of Court—Deficiency in prosecution evidence—Defence not bound to fill up—Right of defence to comment on such deficiency—Case of fraud set up by defence—Opportunity of explanation to prosecution. See PENAL CODE, No. 118, 18 C.W.N. 498.

(7) Explanation consistent with innocence of accused—Duty of prosecution. See PENAL CODE, No. 55, 1 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

(8) Witness for prosecution—Order to turn the witness into a co-accused in the trial. See WITNESSES, No. 1, 16 Bom. L.R. 259.

Acquittal.

(1) Complaint by servant on behalf of master—Acquittal on death of complainant—Complaint of same offence by another servant—Previous acquittal if bar to Magistrate's taking cognizance of second complaint. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 228, 18 C.W.N. 1211.

(2) High Court when will interfere in revision with an order of acquittal. See ACT IX OF 1890 (RAILWAYS), No. 1, (1914) M.W.N. 124.

(3) Setting aside of acquittal in revision on application of complainant—Powers of High Court. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 248, 19 C.W.N. 184.

(4) Acquittal of accused under S. 247, Crim. Pro. Code, procured by his own trick—Whether a revision or appeal lies against the acquittal—Admission of additional evidence in appeals—Powers of Court—Grounds for setting aside order of acquittal—English and Indian Law. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 229, 26 M.L.J. 160.

(5) Order of acquittal on account of complainant's absence, passed on a date not fixed for hearing of the case—Effect. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 227, 13 C.W.N. 1180.

(6) Fighting in the course of which a person was killed—Accused charged under S. 325, I. P.C.—Compounding of the offence by the relations of the deceased—Order of acquittal—Legality—Revision—Re-trial. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 280, 7 S.L.R. 200.

(7) Order of acquittal set aside by High Court in revision on merits, on the application of the complainant. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 249, 18 C.W.N. 1244.

(8) Summons case—Non-appearance of complainant on date fixed for argument and consequent acquittal of accused if proper. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 230, 18 C.W.N. 584.

(9) Acquittal on charge of murder if bar to trial on charge of culpable homicide—Acquittal on charge under S. 302/34, I.P.C., if bar to Act XIII of 1859 (Workman's Breach of Contract).

(1) Artificer, workman or labourer—Head-carpenter—Whether falls under the term—Liability to prosecution.

A person who is a 'carpenter-contractor' or 'head-carpenter' under whose supervision and direction the house was to be built by journeyman-carpenter, is 'an artificer, workman or labourer' within the meaning of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act, and is not exempted from liability to prosecution under the Act. Seln Yin v. Ah Moon Shooke, 7 L.B.R. 82 = 15 Cr. L.J. 235 = 23 Ind. Cas. 187.

(2) Agreement to convey clay within the Act.

A conveyance of clay by the personal labour of the person who undertakes the same is 'work' within the meaning of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act.

The requirements to make the Act applicable discussed. Mamu Beari v. Emperor, 16 M. L.T. 235 = (1914) M.W.N. 651 = 27 M.L.J. 392 = 15 Cr. L.J. 651 = 25 Ind. Cas. 979.

AYLING and TYABJI, JJ.

(3) Contract to be performed in foreign territory—Applicability of the Act.

An order cannot be passed under Act XIII of 1859 to enforce the performance of a contract, if such performance is to take place in foreign territory. Siana Karuppan, 16 M.L.T. 803.

DIGEST OF CASES.

A contract to the effect that the workman shall work for wages, deducting from his wages a certain sum periodically to make good an advance, is within the Act XIII of 1859. Jelagan Subramania Naidu v. Singara Mudali, 27 M.L.J. 616.

MILLER, J.

References :—7 M. 191 ; 23 M. 209, F.

(5) Contract to work for twelve years.

A contract to work 8 hours a day for 12 years, for wages not shown to be above the market-rate, and to live in any house that may be provided, being otherwise a form of slavery, is illegal.

Where an advance made to a workman is merely a loan, Act XIII of 1859 does not apply. In re Ambu, 15 Cr. L.J. 384=23 Ind. Cas. 752.

SANKARAN NAIR, J.

(5-a) Contract to perform agricultural work—Stipulation to pay penalty in the event of non-performance—Applicability of the Act.

The preamble and the other provisions of the Act show that it was not intended to apply to a contract to perform agricultural services (a).

Where a contract prescribes a penalty for its breach, the remedy prescribed by this Act cannot be availed of (b). Crown v. Khuda Baksh, 38 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

(6) S. 2—Stores received as advance—Inapplicability of the section—Stores not 'money.'

Where a workman received advance in the shape of stores and not in cash, it cannot be said that he received 'money' as required by S. 2, Act XIII of 1859, and that section is therefore inapplicable to such a case. Crown v. Chiragh, 23 P.R. 1914 (Cr.)=15 Cr.L.J. 603=25 Ind. Cas. 515.

SHADI LAL, J.

(7) S. 2—Orders passed under S. 2 (1) part 1 or part 2—No appeal lies against either order.

Where a Magistrate ordered the appellant, under the first part of S. 2 (1) of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, to repay a sum of money received by him as advance, and where, on his failure to comply with that order, the Magistrate sentenced him, under the second part of S. 2 (1) of the Act, to a term of imprisonment. Held, that no appeal lies from either of the orders. Thajiro wd. Faizo v. The Crown, 7 S.L.R. 80=15 Cr.L.J. 372=23 Ind. Cas. 740.

(8) S. 2—Written agreement—Contract of service for two years—No reference to manual labour—Re-payment of advance out of last 2 months' wages—No 'workman' within the meaning of the Act—No 'advance'—Applicability of the Act—Proceeding under S. 2, part 1 of the Act—Not a criminal proceeding—No jurisdiction to interfere.

R entered into a written agreement which made no reference to manual labour to serve S at his butcher's shop for two years on a monthly wages of Rs. 30, receiving Rs. 60 in advance for which he agreed to give credit from the pay of the last 2 months. The only service expressed in the contract was that of sales and rendering account of sales. R left service without lawful excuse in the third month and the Magistrate ordered him to re-pay the advance of Rs. 60 under S. 2 of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act.

Held, that R was not a workman within the meaning of the Act, and that the Act did not apply (a).

Held, also, that the sum of Rs. 60 was only a loan re-payable out of wages and not an advance made on account of any work which the workman shall have contracted to perform (b).

A proceeding under the first part of S. 2 of the Act is not a criminal proceeding and the Judicial Commissioner has no jurisdiction to interfere with such a proceeding (c).

Held, per Kemp, A.J.C. that, in this case, though R might have left service without lawful excuse, there was no 'wilful' refusal by him to perform. Ramzan v. Noor Mahomed Yacub, 7 S.L.R. 100=15 Cr. L.J. 883=23 Ind. Cas. 751.

(9) S. 2—Power of Magistrate—Imprisonment and order for performing the work and repay advance.

A Magistrate has no power to order a workman both to repay the advance made by the employer and to perform the work and to suffer imprisonment. He can only pass an order for imprisonment when the workman neither repays the advance nor performs the work according to his contract. Tirka v. Itwari, 12 A.L.J. 678=15 Cr.L.J. 592=25 Ind. Cas. 844.

BANERJI and CHAMBER, JJ.

(10) S. 2, order under—Right of appeal from the order—Proper orders to be made under S. 2.

No appeal lies to the Sessions Court from the order of the Magistrate under S. 2 of Act XIII of 1859.

The Magistrate, while making an order under S. 2 of Act XIII of 1859, cannot make an order of imprisonment in default, but such an order could be made after there has been non-compliance with the order of re-payment or carrying out the contract. Anukul Chandra Roy v. Kamarali Sardar, 18 C.W.N. 1271=15 Cr. L.J. 697=26 Ind. Cas. 145.

IMAM and CHAPMAN, JJ.

- (11) S. 2—Workman told not to do any more work—Settlement to repay balance advanced—Failure to pay—Workman, liability of.

If an employer tells his workman not to do any more work and arrives at a settlement with him for the re-payment of the balance due, the case is taken out of the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act, the liability of the workman becomes purely a civil liability and his failure to act on the settlement cannot bring the case back under the Act. Jugaram v. Nga Tun Baw, U.B.R. (1914), 2nd Qr., 18=25 Ind. Cas. 990=15 Cr. L.J. 662.

- (12) Ss. 2, 3—Workman, agreement by, to work for a fixed period in lieu of advance made to him by the employer—Contract contemplated by the Act.

Held, that an agreement by a workman at Mirzapore to do work in a certain factory for a fixed period of time and until re-payment in a particular manner of an advance made to him by the owner of the factory, is a contract contemplated by Act XIII of 1859, and the accused must continue to work until he has worked for the period stipulated for and paid up the sum taken in advance; he is also liable to the penalties imposed upon a workman under S. 3 of the Act. C. J. Lucas v. Ramai Singh, 12 A.L.J. 152=23 Ind. Cas. 185=15 Cr.L.J. 233.

KNOX and KARAMAT HUSAIN, JJ.

- (13) Ss. 2, 3—Contract, breach of—Form of order by Criminal Court—Case of Civil nature.

The Magistrate, upon a complaint under Act XIII of 1859, gave the option to the debtor of paying off the debt or working it off.

Held, that the irregularity was one of which the creditor and not the debtor could complain.

The contract provided for re-payment of advance made to the debtor in a period over three years, and the debt was to be worked off by work, and the debtor was not to pay by cash or taking money from any other shop-keeper. And the contract prohibited the debtor from selling his work to any other person.

Held, that the contract bound down the debtor to work for the creditor and for no other person until the loan was paid off, and it could not be enforced under the Act. The Crown

- (15) Ss. 2, 5—Contract to do some work, by a workman earning his living by laying and burning bricks—Criminal breach of contract—Workman—Expiry of the term of contract—Magistrate's power to order refund.

A contract to do some work by one who is a workman earning his living by laying and burning bricks is not a contract to supply bricks and falls within the purview of Act XIII of 1859.

Where a workman, or labourer neglects or refuses to perform the work which he has contracted for, the mere fact that the time for which the contract was entered into has elapsed is no bar to a Magistrate passing an order for the refund of the money that may have been advanced to him by his master or employer. *Bharosa v. Act X of 1873 (Oaths).

(1) Ss. 5, 13—Evidence Act, S. 118—Child's witness—Failure to administer oath—Evidence, whether inadmissible—Insanity of accused, plea of—Time.

A child's evidence is not inadmissible merely because no oath was administered to it. Although S. 5 of Oaths Act is imperative, still S. 13 of the Act governs cases of this sort (a).

Where an accused pleads insanity, the evidence relating to it must refer to the time when he committed the offence and not to the state of his mind long afterwards. Golla Chinna Yenkadu v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 161 = 22 Ind. Cas. 737.

Act I of 1878 (Opium).

(1) S. 9—Crim. Pro. Code, Ss. 239 and 537—Joint trial—Misjoinder of parties, not mere irregularity—Possession, illicit, of opium—Opium found in accused's house during his absence, effect of—Suggestion by accused's pleader, whether Court can in its judgment pass remarks upon.

On a certain day A was arrested and found in possession of a seer of opium alleged to have been purchased by B, A's companion, from C's shop. On A's information D's house was searched on the same day and 6 seers of opium were found there in D's absence. These four persons and D's wife were jointly tried on the following four charges: The first charging all with having on that day engaged in illicit transport of opium, the second and the third charging A and B and D and his wife, with having been on that day in unlawful possession of one and six seers of opium, respectively, and the fourth charging C with having on that day sold opium against the contract terms of the license:

I.—Imperial Acts—(Continued).Act I of 1878 (Opium)—(Concluded).

Held, that the above joint trial was illegal and contrary to the provisions of S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, inasmuch as the accused did not commit the same offence or different offences in the same transaction.

A trial which takes place in defiance of the express provisions of S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, must be held to be a void trial, and a misjoinder of parties thus taking place is not a mere irregularity which can be cured by applying the provisions of S. 537, Crim. Pro. Code (a).

Where a person was convicted on a charge of being in illicit possession of opium, while the opium was found in his house during his absence:

Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, inasmuch as the possession of the opium could not be attributed to him in the sense required by law.

Where the lower Courts described a suggestion made by the accused's pleader as a daring attempt to mislead the Court, and it was found that the pleader was justified in making the suggestion.

Held, that the lower Courts, apart from their own opinion upon it, ought not to have made the remark, which should be expunged from the record. Lachchu v. Emperor, 15 Cr.L.J. 420 = 24 Ind. Cas. 156.

- (1) Ss. 4, 20—"Arms," definition of—Weapon, dangerous and likely to cause death if used—Pole-axe.

The definition of "arms" in the Arms Act is neither exhaustive nor altogether happy (a).

The mere fact that a weapon is dangerous, and, if used, may probably cause death, does not make it "arms" within the meaning of S. 4 of the Arms Act.

A weapon consisting of a plain lathi, a blade and two moveable screws, and so contrived that by loosening the screws the blade may be detached from the shaft made up of the lathi, is not "arms" as defined in S. 4 of the Arms Act, although the weapon may be described as a pole-axe. *Gajja v. A District Magistrate, purporting to act under S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, directed that the names of certain persons specified in his order should be included in a list of 'touts' to be hung up in his Court and in Courts subordinate to him. Held, the Chief Court has no jurisdiction to revise the Magistrate's order.

Proceedings under S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act are neither Civil Proceedings governed by the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, nor Criminal Proceedings governed by the Crim. Pro. Code, and as a result neither the Civil nor the Criminal jurisdiction of the High, or Chief, Court can be invoked for the purpose of revising orders passed under that section (a).

S. 13 of the Punjab Courts Act gives the Chief Court a power of superintendence and control only over Civil Courts, and the provisions of that section are not relevant to a case such as the present where the Chief Court is asked to revise the order of a District Magistrate who has, in that capacity, taken action under S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act. Act VI of 1882 is not precise on the point, but under English Law the mere ceasing to hold the necessary qualification shares involves vacation of his office by a Director, and this is made clear by S. 85 (3) of the new Act VII of 1913. Chandar Bhan v. Pro. Code, Ss. 55 and 439—Revision against acquittal—High Court will interfere only in clear interests of justice.

Although S. 3, cl. (4) of the Railways Act is wide, staff quarters are not part of the Railway.

A summary procedure is laid down, in S. 138, for the recovery, by the Railway, of properties improperly held by the employees who are dismissed or discharged. This section is not concurrent with S. 122 which is intended merely for the administration of the Railway and for removing trespassers on the Railway.

Where there is lawful entry, S. 122 cannot be applied.

S. 27 of the Penal Code is not applicable, as the use by the employee of the premises, as his private residence cannot be said to be on account of his master.

It is wrong to contend that when an act is not a civil wrong, it cannot be a criminal offence. Neither English nor Indian Law supports such a contention.

S. 141 of the Penal Code cannot be read to lay down the measure of violence which a true owner may use in the assertion of his real right. It only provides for a special remedy in

Where a person crossed the railway lines without permission, in order to go to the goods shed after transacting business with the Station Master.

Held, that his entry was unlawful within the meaning of S. 122 of the Railways Act and that he was guilty of the offence specified in the first part of the section.

The word ‘unlawful,’ as used in S. 122, means ‘without the leave of the Railway Administration’ (a).

Section 47 of the Railways Act has no bearing on the question and no by-law properly made under cl. Held (by Richards, C.J., and Banerji, J., Knox, J., dissenting) that a Court of an Additional District Judge is not a Court subordinate to the District Court within the meaning of S. 46 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act and an appeal from the order of the Additional Judge lies to the High Court and not to the District Court (a).

Held by the Full Bench that an appeal from an order of an Additional Judge convicting the insolvent of concealing his account books is a Civil appeal.

(2) Ss. 4 (1) (c), 17, 19—Whole tone and nature of article going beyond fair comment—Government established by Law in British India includes Local Governments—Court not concerned with motives but with results—Professions of loyalty on other occasions immaterial.

Where the whole tone of an article in a newspaper and the nature of the allegations made went much beyond any legitimate comment on the action of Government and was directly intended to bring Government into hatred and contempt:

Held, that under the circumstances the Chief Court will not interfere under S. 19 of the Press Act with the order of forfeiture of security made by the Government in respect of the Press publishing the newspaper.

The terms 'Government established by law in British India' used in S. 4 (1) (c) of the Press Act include Local Government as well as the Government of India (a).

The Court is not concerned with motives, but with results. Whatever the ostensible motives for an article in a newspaper may have been, if the effect of the article would be to excite either hatred or contempt against any class or section of the subjects of His Majesty in British India, the Government cannot be said to have misapplied the Press Act in forfeiting the security of the Press publishing the paper.

No amount of professed loyalty on other occasions can be taken as nullifying the probable effects of the violent writings contained in the particular articles dealt with under the Press Act, and the order of forfeiture must stand or fall by the terms of those particular articles. Ghulam Qadir Khan v. Emperor, 210 P.L.R. 1914=36 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.)=15 Cr.L.J. 490=24 Ind. Cas. 578=27 P.R. 1914 (Cr.) (F.B.).

such articles—Court's power to interfere—Application for interference to be rejected or accepted as a whole.

Under S. 19 of the Press Act, the question before the Chief Court would be, whether the Government, in view of the results which are likely to follow in India from violent agitation in the Vernacular Press, is fairly entitled to take exception to writings in the Vernacular newspapers in India, of which the result is not to allay excitement but to stir up fresh trouble.

Where it appears impossible for the Chief Court to say that the Local Government, with which the responsibility rests for determining how far real danger arises from articles of the kind in question, has acted wrongly in taking those articles as ground for issuing orders of forfeiture, it will not set aside the order under S. 19 of the Act.

Expressions of loyalty used by the paper in previous issues are not relevant as an excuse.

According to the terms of S. 19 of the Press Act it is not open to the Chief Court, even if it should desire to do so, to do anything more than either reject the application or set aside the order of forfeiture as a whole. The Court can make no discrimination between the forfeiture of security and the additional forfeiture of the Press which is permitted by the terms of S. 9. *Ghulam Qadir Khan v. A company under the name and style of the New King Insurance Co., Ltd., was started for the purpose of carrying on business as a provident insurance society. Two of the directors of the company were prosecuted for having failed to apply for registration under S. 6 of the Provident Insurance Societies Act of 1912 and thereby having committed an offence under S. 21 of the Act. The Chief Presidency Magistrate acquitted the accused on the ground that the company was one which had its share-capital divided into shares and the provisions of the Act did not apply to such a company:

*Held (on appeal by the Local Government).—*That the Provident Insurance Societies Act was intended to prevent a company from embarking in the business of life insurance unless and until it had been registered under the Act and S. 2, sub-S. (8) clearly lays down that, whether the society already in existence is a corporate company before or whether its share-capital is divided into shares or not, registration under the Act is necessary before business can be carried on under the conditions laid down in the Act. *The Deputy Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. S. 18-B, cl. (c)—Police officer being in possession of money when on duty—Contravention of order of Commissioner of Police—Order contravened, necessity of proof of—Plea of guilty, qualified.

The petitioner was placed on his trial under S. 18-B, cl. (c) of Act IV of 1866 (B.C.) for being, while on duty, in possession of annas four, contrary to an order of the Commissioner of Police. After the examination of one witness, the petitioner pleaded guilty to having the money in his possession. He, however, stated before the Magistrate that at the time in question he was not on duty, but engaged in the private business of a Police officer and also that he had been on duty the previous night. The Magistrate convicted the accused on this plea of guilty. The order the contravention of which was the subject-matter of the prosecution was not proved.

Held, that a copy of the Government order or an extract therefrom or a reference thereto should have been placed on the record.

That the petitioner's plea of guilty was to be looked upon merely as an admission of the fact that he had at the time in question the sum found upon his person.

The High Court set aside the conviction and sentence and directed a re-trial by a new Magistrate. Gaya Ray v. The Emperor, 18 C.W.N. 1273=15 Cr. L.J. 703=26 Ind. Cas. 151.

Act II of 1867 (Bengal Gambling).

(1) Ss. 10, 11—Gambling—Ring-game—Game of mere skill—Meaning of "mere"—Evidence Act, S. 105—Onus that game is game of "mere" skill.

The words "mere skill" in S. 10 of the Bengal Gambling Act of 1867 import the meaning "pure skill." No form of the ring-game can be a game of pure skill (a).

The games of skill spoken of in S. 10 obviously refer to games where there are two parties pitting their skill against each other. Therefore, a ring-game kept for the profit of a man who does not play himself and does not pit his skill at all against anybody cannot fall within the exception to S. 10 of the Act.

The onus to show that any offence falls within a general exception of the Gambling Act, is upon the accused and it is for him to show, in order to bring the case under S. 10 of the Gambling Act, that the game played is a game of mere skill.

Where in a ring-game it was found that the particular position in which the table was slanted rendered it a matter of almost mere chance whether any ring alighted on the peg or encircled the coin :

A District Board can only take action and acquire right over a zemindar's land adjacent to its road under Act III (B.C.) of 1885.

Where some accused were convicted under Ss. 15 and 19 of the District Board Bye-laws for having encroached upon and cultivated land claimed by the District Board to be their roadside land from which its officers had been taking earth, although there had never been any formal acquisition of these lands by the District Board :

(2) S. 139—Bye-law—Encroachment, what is—Highway—District Board road—Right of user by public—Hanging verandah, if invades right of user of public.

Obiter.—An encroachment is an unlawful gaining upon the right or possession of another man (a).

In the case of a District Board road, the right to the soil ordinarily rests with the owner of the land adjoining the road. But the public have an extended right of user in the road for the protection and control of which the District Boards were created.

A hanging verandah, therefore, would be an encroachment if it amounted to an unlawful gaining upon the right of user by the public.

That right extends to all forms of traffic which have been usual or customary, and also all that are reasonably similar or incidental thereto (b).

The question whether a hanging verandah amounts to an encroachment would depend in each case upon the question whether in the particular circumstances it constitutes an invasion of the public right of user as described above.

The public have a right of user not merely on the roadway, but also on the side lands.

To support a conviction under S. 48 of the Bengal Excise Act, two elements must be established, namely, first, that the spirit is denatured spirit, and, secondly, that the accused has attempted to render such spirit fit for human consumption.

The definition of 'denatured spirit' in cl. (6) of S. 2 of the Bengal Excise Act considered.

The essence of 'manufacture' as defined in cl. (15) of S. 2 of the Bengal Excise Act is, that it is a process. A mere dilution of denatured spirit with water is not a process for the manufacture of an excisable article.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, subject to specified restrictions, is applicable to trials under the Bengal Excise Act, before a Magistrate.

The fact that the trial has taken place as a summons case, does not exclude the application of S. 233 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Manufacturing excisable article seized and brought into Court, bottling it, possessing it, selling from time to time various other articles not before the Court, and attempting to render denatured spirit fit for human consumption, do not constitute one transaction.

He accordingly went with two Sub-Inspectors and a large number of peons, who actually saw the accused and their men removing the distilling apparatus. But before they had time to enter the house and arrest those persons or to make any search whatever, the accused sallied out and proceeded to beat the peons. The accused were convicted of rioting and using criminal force to deter a public servant from the discharge of his duty:

Held, that the assault upon the officers was wholly unjustifiable and the riot was one of a very serious and lawless nature, that the Excise Officers were acting under S. 67 of the Excise Act (V of 1909 B.O.) ; that before they had time to do anything lawful or unlawful in respect of any search, they were wantonly assaulted by the accused, and that as there was no search, it could not be said that there was a search not in accordance with law.

A separate sentence should not be passed upon people convicted of rioting for the offence which is specifically stated to have been the common object of the assembly, unless a specific charge is laid against the individual members of committing such an offence. Therefore, persons who are shown to have committed a separate offence under S. 353, Penal Code, should receive a separate punishment, even although the common object of the riot was to commit that offence. Prakash Chandra Kundu v. Pro. Code or S. 15 of the Charter Act.

An application was made to the Presidency Magistrate by the counter-petitioner to declare that the inclusion of the petitioner as a candidate for the Municipal election by the President of the Madras Corporation was illegal under Rule 5 of the rules framed by Government in pursuance of the powers given to them by S. 413 of Act III of 1904. The Magistrate allowed the application. Held, no revision lies against the Magistrate's order, either under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, or under S. 15 of the Charter Act.

The Presidency Magistrate in the particular instance is not a Court subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court. He is in the position of a referee between the President and the candidate. The rule declares his decision to be final.

When quasi-judicial functions are delegated to an officer whose decisions are ordinarily subject to the revisional powers of the High Court, he is not with reference to the delegated power necessarily subject to the High Court's appellate or revisional authority. In re Vijayaraghavulu Pillay, 16 M.L.T. 198—27 M.L.J. 227—15 Cr. Circumstantial Evidence.

(1) Murder—Evidence purely circumstantial—Sentence of death or transportation for life—Legality—Age of accused also to be taken into account in imposing sentence.

Per Ayling, J.—Where the Court is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt, of the guilt of the accused, the fact that the evidence is circumstantial and not direct is not a factor which should per se affect the sentence (a).

There is no unwritten rule or principle standing in the way of the imposition of a death sentence in cases where the evidence is purely circumstantial.

Age of the accused is undoubtedly a point which no Court should leave out of consideration in determining the sentence to be imposed.

The substitution of a death sentence for one of transportation is a measure which must always be undertaken with reluctance.

Per Kumaraswami Sastri, J.—A consideration of the species of evidence on which the guilt of an accused is found should not of itself determine the nature of the sentence (b). And the Court is not bound in every case to pass the lesser sentence when the evidence is circumstantial. Circumstantial evidence, like any other, must in every case be tested and weighed, and prevail or not by its own inherent proving force.

Circumstantial Evidence—(Concluded).

The age of the accused is a fact that might well be taken into consideration in determining what sentence is to be passed in cases of murder (c). Munandi v. Emperor, 16 M.L.T. 535.

There is nothing in law to prevent a Court acting upon extra-judicial confessions made by the prisoner to prosecution witnesses out of Court and not recorded by a Magistrate. Such confessions may be, though cautiously, considered by the Court.

A pay-sheet drawn up in a Railway Office and setting out certain sums as due by the Railway to certain coolies described as working in a special gang, is a record within the meaning of S. 218, Penal Code.

Where a person was charged before a Magistrate of two offences, one of which was exclusively triable by a Court of Sessions, and the Magistrate awarded an aggregate sentence without specifying any particular sentence awarded in respect of each of the offences, the High Court, on objection as to the irregularity and want of jurisdiction being verbally taken for the first time before it, apportioned the sentence between the two offences and set aside the conviction and sentence in respect of the offence exclusively triable by a Court of Sessions. *Keerl Mal v. PIGGOTT, J.

(3) Confession—Retracted confession—Value of confession against co-accused.

The net result of authorities on the value of confessions seems to be this :

(i) That it is not illegal to base a conviction upon the uncorroborated confession of an accused person, provided the Court is satisfied that the confession was voluntary and is true in fact ;

(ii) that, from the point of view of legality, pure and simple, the fact that a confession has been retracted is immaterial ;

(iii) that the use to be made by the Court of a confession, whether retracted or not, is a matter rather of prudence than of law, the business of the Court being to make up its mind, in accordance with the dictates of common sense, whether it is safe to believe the confession or not ;

(iv) that experience and common sense show that, in the absence of corroboration in material particulars, it is not safe to convict on a confession, unless from the peculiar circumstances in which it was made and judging from the reasons, alleged or apparent, of the retraction, there remain a high degree of certainty that the confession, notwithstanding its having been resiled from, is genuine ;

(v) that, when it is a question of using a confession against a co-accused of the person confessing and the Court would not be prepared to accept the confession per se as sufficient, the corroboration ought to be of the kind that not only confirms the general story of the crime, but also, unmistakably, connects the said co-accused with the crime. Jawan v. Emperor, 264 P.L.R. 1914 = 15 Cr. L.J. 626 = 30 P.R. 1914 (Cr.) = 25 Ind. Cas. 634 = 50 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.).

Contempt of Court.

- (1) Contempt—Receiver—Obstruction of Receiver in discharge of duty—Stranger in possession not to obstruct Receiver but to apply to Court for redress of grievance—Costs against person obstructing Receiver.

The right of a stranger in possession of property to continue in possession is not affected by an order of a Court appointing a Receiver; but the fact of his possession does not give him the privilege to interfere with the Receiver directed to take possession of the property. His proper course is to apply to the Court to redress his grievance. If he interferes with the Receiver, he does so at his peril. The Court will not permit the Receiver appointed by its authority to be interfered with or dispossessed of the property which he is directed to receive, by any one, even though the order appointing him may be perfectly erroneous (a).

A person, who is guilty of a contempt of the Court's authority, by obstructing a Receiver in the discharge of his duty, may be made to pay the costs as those of a hearing and not of a motion. Mr. P. Roy Chowdhury v. Nolini Prokash Sen, 15 Cr.L.J. 65=22 Ind. Cas. 417.

A complaint was filed against several persons before the Magistrate under Ss. 342, 363, I.P.O., by the husband of a girl against whom the offences were said to have been committed. The Magistrate ordered the complainant to prove his case, but before the date fixed, the complainant filed a petition withdrawing the complaint. The Magistrate, however, examined witnesses on the date fixed and found that there was no satisfactory evidence against the persons complained against, but he summoned two other persons under Ss. 842, 363, 353, I.P.C., holding that there was evidence against them :

Held, that the Magistrate took cognizance under cl. (1) (a) of S. 190, Crim. Pro. Code, and had jurisdiction to try the persons summoned by him.

A Magistrate having taken cognizance of a complaint can also proceed against another person, who, although not mentioned in the complaint, appears on the evidence for the prosecution to have been concerned in the commission of the offence.

Clause (c) of S. 190 deals with cases where there has been neither a formal complaint nor a police report, and independently of these the Magistrate takes the initiative upon information received from any person other than a Police Officer or upon his own knowledge or suspicion.

It is clear from the definition of "complaint" in cl. (h), sub-S. (1) of S. 4, Crim. Pro. Code, that it is not necessary that the complainant should always be the party directly aggrieved by the commission of the offence, and the husband of the girl was a competent person to apply to the Magistrate with a view to his taking action under the Code.

That, in the circumstances of the case, the Magistrate was right in ordering examination of witnesses in order to ascertain if there was any substance in the petition of withdrawal and in the complaint. Dedar Bux v. Syamapada Malakar, 18 C.W.N. 921=15 Cr. L.J. 546=24 Ind. Cas. 954=41 C. 1013.

not authorised under S. 190 (1) (c)—Exercise of powers under Bombay Gambling Act, S. 6—Effect.

Where one M made a statement to the Magistrate that H kept a common gaming house in which many persons used to gamble, and in consequence of such statement, the Magistrate issued a warrant under S. 6 of the Gambling Act, directing the search of H's house and the arrest of all persons found therein.

Held, that the Magistrate received no 'complaint' within the meaning of the term as defined in S. 4 of the Code, because it is clear that M's statement did not refer to any offence that was committed before the complaint was made and because it was not made in order to induce the Magistrate to take any action under the Code of Criminal Procedure, but in order to induce him to proceed under S. 6 of the Gambling Act.

Held, also, that the Magistrate who was not specially authorised to take action under S. 190 (1) (c), Crim. Pro. Code, took cognizance of the case only after the accused were arrested and brought before him for trial as the result of the warrant issued by him under S. 6 of the Gambling Act in consequence of the statement made to him. *Hotu, son of Pessumal v. It does not empower a District Magistrate to pass on his powers of calling up cases from Subordinate Courts and re-distributing them. In taking action under S. 96, Crim. Pro. Code, the Court is authorized to go as far as is physically possible in that search. The accused can perhaps defeat the Court by concealing or destroying the document, etc., or by having it concealed or destroyed, taking, of course, the consequences of such action, just as the accused in the dock can, when questioned, under S. 342, thwart the Court in its search for the truth by answering falsely or refusing to answer. But the mere fact that the accused can so defeat or thwart the Court is no reason for holding that the Court is debarred from going as far as the sections specifically allow.

The words 'a person' in S. 96 include a person accused in the case.

When the premises to be searched are those of the accused person, the warrant need not be only for the finding of the document, etc., in respect of which the alleged offence has been committed. The words 'document or thing' in the section are general and seem to cover any document, the production and inspection of which are 'necessary or desirable' or will serve the ends of justice (a).

The Court has the power to invoke the aid of persons capable of helping it to read and understand the contents of the books, etc., found. Municipal Committee, Jhang v. Muhammad Hayat, 36 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

(30) S. 107—Practice—Evidence—District Magistrate dealing with proceedings under S. 107, having outside knowledge—Order on the ground that applicants had instituted a committee to bring certain matters to the notice of authorities—Justification of order.

If a District Magistrate, dealing with proceedings under S. 107 of the Code, possesses knowledge of certain facts which he obtains from sources outside the record, he should not base his judgment upon those facts, but should base it upon evidence relevant to the case.

An order requiring certain persons to furnish security to keep the peace can only be justified upon the finding that each of these persons is likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb public tranquillity, or is likely to do some wrongful act which may occasion such a disturbance (a).

Certain persons instituted a committee to collect funds in order to persuade the authorities to allow them to carry the Dasehra procession along a certain route, and to enforce, as against any other person who might desire to contest the same, the petitioners' alleged right to do so. Held that, in the absence of a finding that those persons were likely to take the procession forcibly down a particular route unless they were bound down to keep the peace, the order could not be properly passed against them. *Birjandan Prasad v. S. 125, Crim. Pro. Code, does not confer upon a District Magistrate either an appellate or revisional jurisdiction, but it confers an original jurisdiction in respect of orders binding down persons to keep the peace. A person so bound down has no remedy by way of appeal to the District Magistrate. The proper course for him is to bring his case in revision before the Sessions Judge (a).

A High Court, having once admitted a case in revision and having fixed a date for the hearing thereof, ought to dispose of it on the merits after hearing the applicant for revision.

In criminal revisions, the High Court does not ordinarily consider questions of fact, except where the matter has been before only one Court below. Thakur Sheo Singh v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 721=26 Ind. Cas. 169.

R had been appointed by certain dealers in a certain market to act as chaudhri, in order to regulate the business of that market and so forth, and those dealers agreed voluntarily to pay him at the rate of two pice per head of cattle brought to the market laden with articles for sale. The servants of the lady who admittedly was the owner of the market wanted to enjoy the dues themselves. On a police report of an impending breach of the peace, proceedings were in the first instance instituted under

S. 107, Crim. Pro. Code, but the Magistrate finding that the servants of the lady claimed to collect rent as part of the zamindari of their mistress cancelled his first order and instituted proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, that there was no bar to the Magistrate cancelling his first order and instituting proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, provided that the latter proceedings were otherwise justified under that section.

Held also, that the dues claimed by either party being in no way connected with the ordinary rents and profits of the market and not being a perquisite of the zamindar, but being only in the nature of a voluntary payment by the dealers in the market to the chaudhri appointed by them for the discharge of certain duties, the dispute between the parties did not concern any tangible immovable property or relate to the rents and profits of the market, and S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, was not applicable.

Held further, that the servants of the owner of the market having stated that they were acting in the interest and for the benefit of their mistress, she must be deemed "a party concerned in the dispute," and for the purposes of S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, was a necessary party to the proceedings.

Held further, that S. 107, Crim. Pro. Code, was applicable to the case. Ram Lochan v. King-Emperor, 12 A.L.J. 162=22 Ind. Cas. 171=15 Cr. L.J. 27=36 A. 143.

(38) Ss. 109 (a) and (b), 110—Taking precaution to conceal presence to commit crime—Failure to give satisfactory account of himself—Giving false name and secretly delivering letters containing incitement to commit crime.

A person who gives a false name and delivers letters secretly, containing incitement to commit crime or demanding money for the means of committing crime, falls within S. 109, cl. (a) of the Crim. Pro. Code.

A person who secretly delivers letters arranging for the commission of dacoities is a person, who, in the interests of public peace, should be called upon to give security for good behaviour.

The accused, when charged by A with endeavouring to secretly deliver letters to A's brother, asking him to assist in some nocturnal enterprise in which revolvers and guns were to be used, was unable to give A any satisfactory account of himself :

Held, that this was sufficient to bring him within the meaning of S. 110. Preo Nath Datta v. Emperor, 15 Cr.L.J. 255=23 Ind. Cas. 207.

(39) Ss. 109, 122—Magistrate's power to reject surety—Sufficient ground—Defence witness, whether can stand surety—Revision.

Sureties for good behaviour should not be rejected merely on the strength of the report of a Tahsildar and a Sub-Inspector of Police, without some further proceedings or at any rate without giving the sureties an opportunity of meeting any allegations that may be made against them. The fact that a person offering himself as surety for the good behaviour of another has given evidence in favour of that person in a proceeding under S. 109 or 110, Crim. Pro. Code, which resulted in the passing of an order requiring security, would not be at all a good reason for refusing to accept the surety.

The discretion conferred on a Magistrate by S. 122 of the Code is a wide one and the High Court should not lightly interfere with any reasonable exercise of the same. Bairagi v. Emperor, 15 Cr.L.J. 727=26 Ind. Cas. 175.

(42) S. 110—Detention of accused in jail pending inquiry—Illegality—Evidence of general repute.

Detention of a person in jail against whom an inquiry under Chap. VIII of the Crim. Pro. Code, is in progress, is an illegality which vitiates the trial.

The accused, who was Chairman of the Managing Committee of a Municipality, was called upon to give security for good behaviour, upon evidence of general repute which consisted of instances anterior to the date of such appointment—

Held, that the evidence of general reputation must, in cases like the present, be evidence of a reputation which had been acquired since the last appointment to the office of the Chairman. Emperor v. Bhau Savalaram Kotasthane, 16 Bom. L.R. 943=2 Bom. Cr.L. Cas. 261.

HEATON and SHAH, JJ.

(43) S. 110—Bad livelihood—General repute—Evidence to the contrary.

Held that, where security under S.110, Crim. Pro. Code, is taken from a person on the evidence of general repute only, that repute should be universal and there should be no doubt about it.

So where security was demanded from a person (who along with his brother was an income-tax payer) on the ground of general repute only and on one occasion his house was searched in connection with the theft of the properties of a man who himself said he had no suspicion, and on the other hand he and several other well-to-do people testified to the petitioner's good character, the Chief Court, on revision side, set aside the order to furnish security for good behaviour. Jhandu Ram v. M was ordered by a Magistrate of the 1st Class to give a bond under S. 110, Crim. Pro. Code, to be of good behaviour for 3 years for Rs. 1,000 with four sureties. M offered four persons as his sureties of whom two were rejected as being his relatives; one as being a mere boy and the remaining one as being a bad character.

Held that particulars as to whether each and all are liable for Rs. 1,000 on occasion arising, or Rs. 1,000 between them, should have been stated in the order so as to prevent misunderstanding later.

Mere relationship is no reason for refusing a surety. On the other hand, a relation is more likely than any other person to have influence over a man and to be able to keep an eye on him, in short, relationship is a recommendation (a).

A Magistrate should, before rejecting a surety, himself enquire into the matters alleged against him, and not delegate such an enquiry to any one (b).

The object of the law as to security for good behaviour is not to fill the jails with bad characters, but to bring reasonable pressure to bear on such persons to respect the law (c).

Where the order for security specifies a term exceeding one year during which accused is to be of good behaviour, the Magistrate in ordering the detention of the accused should, under S. 123, refer the case to the Sessions Court.

The District Magistrate should not summarily reject a petition which was explicit enough merely because it did not contain just the particulars he wanted. Mahala v. The Crown, 6 P.R. 1914 (Cr.)=142 P.L.R. 1914.

The Magistrate trying a case is bound by law to hear those witnesses only whose list is sent up by the police along with the case, and, as soon as the witnesses produced in support of the case have been heard, the Magistrate is then to ascertain the names of the persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and shall summon to give evidence before himself only such of them as he thinks necessary. He is not bound by law to, and should not, save in very exceptional cases, call the other witnesses that the police or any one else may from time to time choose to produce.

- (65) Ss. 121, 438, 514 and 515—Forfeiture of security—Appellate Court incompetent to refer to the Chief Court a case in which appeal lies to it.

Held, that, a District Magistrate, while taking cognizance of a case as an appellate Court, has no power to report it to the Chief Court under S. 438 (1) or any other section of the Crim. Pro. Code. He is bound to decide it according to his own discretion, leaving the aggrieved party to take such steps as may appear advisable to get it set aside by the higher authority, but he is incompetent to divest himself of his powers as an appellate Court merely because he either misunderstands or disapproves of certain published rulings (a).

Held, also, that the headnote of P.R. No. 15 of 1913 (Cr.) is misleading and it goes beyond the terms of the judgment. In it the Chief Court has not overlooked the provisions of S. 121, Crim. Pro. Code, and has not laid down any hard and fast rule prohibiting the forfeiture of security under certain circumstances.

All that the ruling indicates is the necessity for moderation and the reasonable exercise of discretion in determining the extent, if any, to which a conviction would justify the rigorous measure of forfeiture. *Bega Singh v. (78) S. 133—Claim of right—Magistrate's duty to decide bona fide rights of—Magistrate bound to refer parties to Civil Court, if such claim is not mere pretence—Steps which Magistrate may take, if suit not instituted in Civil Court within reasonable time.

Per Sharfuddin, J.—(Teunon, J., dubitante).—Sub-S. (8) of S. 133, Crim. Pro. Code, provides that no order duly made by a Magistrate under the section shall be called in question in any Civil Court. From this latter provision it is clear that the provision of S. 133, Crim. Pro. Code, should be sparingly used. Any order passed under the section cannot be questioned in any Civil Court. It is therefore necessary that, if the party against whom the order is contemplated to be passed raises a question that the pathway is not a public property in the sense of the provision of this section, the Magistrate trying the case should be careful not only to decide as to whether the pathway in question is situated on a private land or if it is for public use, but he should, even when the claim of the objection is not substantiated, find whether the claim is bona fide or it is set up only to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. If the Magistrate finds that the claim which is set up is a mere pretence, he should then proceed to pass a final order and make the rule issued by him absolute. If however he finds that the claim, although not substantiated, is not mere pretence and is not raised to oust the jurisdiction of the Court, but that it is raised bona fide, he should stay his hand and refer the party to Civil Court. And if the party within a reasonable time does not have recourse to Civil Court, the Magistrate may then proceed to make the rule absolute. *Manipur Day v. (80) S. 133, scope of—Bona fide claim of private right, by a party—Title—Jury, function of—Procedure, to be followed.

In a proceeding under S. 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the first party asked for an obstruction of a way to be removed as detrimental to the public interests, and the second party claimed a private right thereto, and the case was submitted to the jury. And the jury collected the evidence and declined to decide the question as it involved the question of private or public right. The matter was referred to the Magistrate who decided upon the evidence that this was a matter for the Civil Courts:

Held, that the section contemplates only an enquiry as to the existence or non-existence of the obstruction complained of, and not an enquiry into a disputed question of title; and it was beyond the scope of the jury to decide whether the way obstructed was or was not a public way. And the Magistrate, having found that there was a bona fide claim of private right raised by the second party, was perfectly justified in leaving the determination of the question to the Civil Court. *Mahomed Ashrafuddin v. A dispute arose between S and M regarding the possession of certain land. On 17-1-1914 M filed a petition asking for an order under S. 144 directing S to abstain from interfering with his possession. This petition was forwarded to the Police for enquiry. Meanwhile on 24-1-1914 M put in another petition objecting to the course of the Police enquiry and asking that harvest of the crops by S should be stopped, that the crops already harvested should be taken possession of by the Village Munsif, and that S should be ordered not to interfere with the lands. On this the Magistrate passed the following order on 24-1-1914:

"Issue notice under S. 144 forbidding both sides to harvest until the question of possession has been settled by this Court. The crops already harvested shall be taken into the custody of the Village Munsif. Order both sides to produce witnesses before me on 5-2-1914." The notice actually issued to both sides on the same date did not purport to be issued under any particular section.

S claimed the land in question under a sale deed from the sons of the admitted original owner K. M claimed as the lessee of K's widow. S filed a judgment of a Civil Court in a suit of 1911 in which it was decided that the widow had no right to lease the disputed lands. S asked for an order declaring him to be entitled to possession and forbidding disturbance by the other side.

On 5-3-1914 the Magistrate took up the case under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, and dismissed M's petition, stating that he left himself precluded from deciding the dispute by the judgment of the Civil Court. He also directed the Village Munsif to harvest the paddy and attach all the paddy and the land until an order was obtained from a Civil Court. S applied in revision to the High Court objecting to this portion of the order as illegal and without jurisdiction.

Held that the Magistrate's order, which must be taken to have been passed under S. 146, was illegal and must be set aside.

The proceedings of the Magistrate in so far as they purported to be under S. 145 are void for want of jurisdiction and are void ab initio by reason of his failure to comply with the requirements of cl. 14 of S. 145. This provision of law is imperative and failure to comply with it destroys the Magistrate's jurisdiction (a).

S. 146 is a sort of corollary to S. 145 and the legality of an order under it depends on its having been preceded by legal proceedings under S. 145 and on the holding of an enquiry as to the fact of possession ending in the Magistrate's either finding that neither of the contending parties is in possession or being unable to satisfy himself as to which was in possession (b).

The whole proceedings under S. 145 being illegal, the order made in this case under S. 146 cannot stand on a better footing. Held also that the existence of the Civil Court judgment did not affect the Magistrate's jurisdiction to take proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code. The whole scheme of the Chap. XII in the Crim. Pro. Code contemplates an enquiry solely with reference to the fact of actual possession, irrespective of title (c). *Subbarama Aiyar v. In proceedings under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, the Sub-divisional Magistrate passed a final order directing the counter-petitioners, among other things, to pay the petitioner's costs. Within 3 days after the order, two memoranda for taxing costs were put into the Court by the petitioner. The Magistrate passed an order directing the inclusion of the costs. But through some negligence in the Magistrate's office, costs were not actually taxed. Nearly three years later the petitioner's son applied to the Magistrate's successor-in-office for costs being assessed, the petitioner having died in the interval. The son's application was rejected.

Held that the application by the son is sustainable and he is entitled to have the costs assessed.

The Code of Criminal Procedure contains no special provisions for bringing on record representatives of the deceased parties. All that the Court has to see is that the appeal or application has not abated by reason of the death of one of the parties.

Held, also, that the successor of the Magistrate who decided the case has jurisdiction to assess the amount of costs (a).

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Courts should always lean in favour of that view of the law which would enable a party who has got an order in his favour to obtain the fruits of that order, and not in favour of highly technical objections which render the Court's order infructuous and a mere piece of waste paper. (98) S. 145—Omission to record preliminary order before summoning opposite party—Omission to affix copy on the property in dispute—Revision—Parties to revision.

Held, that the omission to record preliminary order before issue of summons to the opposite party or to affix a copy of it to a conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute as required by cls. (1) and (3) of S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, is not fatal to the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed with the case under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, where an order directing the parties to put in written statements has been once recorded and they have understood the nature of the proceedings.

Held, also, that the Chief Court will not interfere on revision with the order of a Magistrate under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, where it is inconvenient and unnecessary to do so, even though such order is based on irregular procedure, as it is not usually the practice of the Chief Court to interfere on revision in a Civil or quasi Civil case when the party asking for revision has got a regular remedy at his command.

Held, further, that the omission to make a joint owner of the property a party to the revision is immaterial, where no mention is made of such joint owner in the order of the Magistrate and only one man has been declared to be in possession. Muhammad Sharif v. L. Dhanpat Rai, 15 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.) = 68 P.L.R. 1914 = 15 Cr.L.J. 27 = 23 Ind. Cas. 487.

If a Sub-Divisional Magistrate really thought that, notwithstanding the order under S. 144, Crim. Pro. Code, passed within a week before his taking steps under S. 147, the likelihood of a breach of the peace still existed, it cannot be stated that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was legally incompetent to take action under S. 147.

The High Court might interfere if it considered that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate's apprehension was quite unreasonable. Even where a person had obstructed a pathway by a fence, a Magistrate has jurisdiction under

S. 147, Crim. Pro. Code, to direct such person not to obstruct the pathway.

The fact that S. 133, Crim. Pro. Code, expressly provides for an order by the Magistrate directing the removal of obstruction to pathways, does not necessarily imply that a similar order cannot be passed in proceedings taken under S. 147 (a).

S. 147 can be applied when the right of way claimed is a right to public path and not a private path. The terms of the section are wide enough to cover both cases.

Revision under Ss. 435 and 439, Crim. Pro. Code, is a matter of discretion and it would require a very strong case for a Letters Patent appeal to succeed against the decision of a single Judge of the High Court refusing to interfere in revision. *Karuppanna Koundan v. Information received under S. 157 of the Crim. Pro. Code undoubtedly refers to information furnished and recorded under S. 154, Crim. Pro. Code. Every enquiry which a police officer makes is not necessarily an investigation under S. 157.

The Crim. Pro. Code is silent as to the correct procedure to be adopted by a station house officer who receives information of the commission of a cognisable offence outside his station limits.

There is nothing in S. 154 to prevent his receiving and recording the information though he has no power under S. 157 to conduct an investigation.

Where the accused sent a telegram in general of the occurrence of a dacoity and later on gave a statement implicating a number of persons in the dacoity, and the police took action on the latter and found the charges false, held that the person can be convicted under S. 211, I.P.C., for bringing a false charge. *Nandamuri Anandayya v. In the course of a police investigation a witness made a statement to the police that she saw a boy near the scene of murder immediately after the offence was committed. She denied the presence of the boy when she was examined before the committing Magistrate. At the trial she admitted that she had seen the boy at the scene of the offence. The statement she had made to the Police officer was sought to be proved by the sworn testimony of the Police officer that she had made it to him. This testimony was objected to on the ground that it offended against S. 162 of the Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, that the Police officer could, under S. 162 of the Crim. Pro. Code, be allowed to depose to what the witness had said to him for the purpose of corroborating what she said before the Sessions Judge.

Per Shah, J.—Looking to the plain language of S. 162 of the Crim. Pro. Held, that police diaries are to be used not as evidence but "to aid the Court in an enquiry or a trial." The meaning of this phrase in S. 172, Crim. Pro. (132) S. 164—Confession—Care necessary in recording confessions—Questions as to ill-treatment—Magistrate's satisfaction as to voluntariness of confession—Statements in confession inconsistent with medical evidence.

Great care and circumspection are necessary in recording a confession under S. 164, Crim. Pro. Code. It is necessary to record the questions put to the accused to ascertain whether the confession was voluntary, to tell him that after his confession he will not have to go back to Police custody, to warn him of the consequence which will ensue if he falsely implicates himself in the hope of release and to ask him whether the Police or any other person has subjected him to any ill-treatment.

No hard and fast rule can or should be laid down as to the procedure which should be adopted when an accused person is placed before a Magistrate for the recording of a confession under S. 164, Crim. Pro. Code, but it is not sufficient to put one comprehensive question as to the nature of the confession or to make a note at the commencement of the record of the confession that the accused has been warned.

The complainant entrusted, at V, in British India, certain jewels to the accused R, a Native Indian subject of His Majesty, for sale on commission. R pledged the jewels at B, in a Native State, and converted the jewels for his own use. It was also part of the arrangement between the complainant and R that R should account for the jewels to the complainant at V or return them or their price at V. The accused was charged with the offence of criminal misappropriation and committed for trial to the Court of Session in British India.

Held, that the commitment was not illegal for want of a certificate under S. 188, Crim. Pro. Code.

The loss of the jewels, which was the consequence, occurred at V, in British India, and this is sufficient under S. 179, Crim. Pro. The real distinction between sub-cl. (c) and sub-cl. 6 Cr.

If a pardanashin lady makes a complaint to a Magistrate he is entitled to take cognizance of it. But before he takes cognizance he must be satisfied that it is her complaint. It is comparatively unimportant by what means the complaint reaches the Magistrate, if really it is her own complaint.

The words "at once" in S. 200 of the Crim. Pro. Code clearly indicate that ordinarily a complaint must be presented in person. A complaint should never be accepted which is not signed by the complainant and is not preferred by a person duly authorized to prefer that specific complaint.

Process cannot be issued against an accused person, either by the Magistrate first taking cognizance of an offence, or by the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred under the proviso to S. 200, Crim. Pro. Code unless and until the Magistrate issuing process has first examined the complainant. And this is perhaps more necessary in the case of a pardanashin lady than in other cases, to enable the Magistrate to satisfy himself that the complaint is really her own action.

A pardanashin complainant may be examined by Commission under S. 503, Crim. Pro. Code. The terms of that section are very wide. They refer not only to an enquiry and a trial, but to any other proceeding. The section authorizes the examination of any witness, and a complainant is certainly a witness. *Abhoyeswari v. A proceeding under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent against the opposite party was heard by the present Bench. The application failed, but the Court thought that there were matters in the case which called for further inquiry with a view to possible Criminal Proceedings. The papers were placed before the Public Prosecutor who applied under S. 195 of the Crim. Pro. Code for sanction to prosecute the opposite party for offences alleged to have been committed by him under Ss. 198 and 195 of the Penal Code, in or in relation to the proceeding under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent.

Held, that the Bench was neither prosecuting nor trying an accused, that it was merely considering whether the bar to the cognizance of the alleged offences, should be removed by according the required sanction, and that under S. 195 of the Crim. Pro. Code, it was this Bench alone that could give the required sanction.

S. 195 is expressed in the widest terms and vests in the Court an absolute and unqualified discretion. Not one jot or one tittle can be taken away from or added to the plain and express provisions of the Legislature by any decision of the Court, nor can this discretion vested by the section in the Court be crystallised or restricted by any series of cases, and it remains free and untrammelled to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case.

An application for sanction is not to be conducted on the same lines as the criminal trial which may be its sequel.

When a Tribunal is invested by an Act or by rules with a discretion, without any indication in the Act or the rules of the grounds upon which the discretion is to be exercised, it is a mistake to lay down any rules with a view to indicate the particular grooves in which the discretion should run (a).

When exercising discretion, the Court will be astute to see that there should be no abuse of the administration of criminal justice. Therefore, no one should be permitted to use a penal law merely to satisfy his own private ends or personal spite.

An Attorney can make an affidavit by way of answer to a rule issued against him under the Court's disciplinary jurisdiction, and for a false statement in the affidavit, he is criminally liable. Mr. Hume, Public Prosecutor v. Before the Registrar of the Presidency Court of Small Causes at Calcutta, whose duty is to enquire into the proper service of summons and to take evidence in this behalf, it transpired that the petitioner in this case by false representation had returned the summons as properly served, and the Public Prosecutor at the instance of the Chief Judge made an application for sanction to prosecute the petitioner under S. 205, Penal Code, which was granted by the said Registrar under S. 195 of the Crim. Held, that the proceedings before the Registrar were judicial proceedings and he was a judicial officer, that the sanction given by him to prosecute was properly given, and the fact that it was not stated in the depositions recorded by the Registrar that they were taken on solemn oath or affirmation was a matter covered by S. 12 of the Oaths Act. Balchand v. (177) Ss. 195 (b), 537 (b)—Sanction for prosecution—Confirmation by Appellate Court—Six months, time how to be calculated—Sanction by District Magistrate—Appeal to High Court instead of to the Sessions Court—High Court confirming the sanction—Legality.

In this case the Sessions Court set aside the conviction of the accused on the ground that the complaint was not filed within six months from the grant of sanction in the first instance. The complaint was actually filed within six months of the order of the High Court confirming the sanction for prosecution.

Held, that the confirmation of a sanction by the appellate authority is a fresh 'giving' of sanction within the meaning of sub-S. (b) of S. 195; and as such the six months allowed under the section for filing the complaint must be calculated from the date of the order of the Appellate Court, and not from the date of the grant of sanction in the first instance; so, the Sessions Judge's order acquitting the accused on the ground that the sanction 'given' had expired must be set aside, as there was a sanction 'given' in this case by the High Court within six months before the charge (a).

Held, also that, though the confirmation should have been made by the Sessions Judge as the authority to whom the District Magistrate was Subordinate, and not by the High Court, yet the High Court's decision is final between the parties and its legality cannot be questioned.

The decision in Chinnakaruppa Goundan v. Muthu Goundan (b) which seems to be against the express provision of S. 537 (b) requires reconsideration. (Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.) The Public Prosecutor v. Raver Unithri Marvathar Yitil, 26 M.L.J. 511=15 M.L.T. 403=15 Cr.L.J. 409=24 Ind. Cas. 145.

Code, to prosecute the petitioner for preferring a false complaint, on the ground that the charge was a mere concoction to meet the charge of stabbing of which he was convicted. Held that the Magistrate was right in granting the sanction (a).

S. 195 (b), Crim. Pro. Code, which relates to sanction for certain offences "committed in or in relation to any proceedings in any Court" does not say by which considerations the Court is to be guided, nor does it prescribe as indispensable that the Court should hold a fresh inquiry and take evidence for the complainant before granting sanction, a proceeding which would be quite unnecessary in cases where the Court has a knowledge of the facts in the course of the proceeding in or in relation to which the offence is alleged to have been committed. (Per Wallis, J.).

A preliminary inquiry is not essential in all cases where the Court grants sanction under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code.

Under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, in which there is no reference to 'a preliminary inquiry' such an inquiry is unnecessary (b). (Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.).

The High Court ought not to interfere with the discretion of the subordinate Courts in the matter of the grant of sanction, unless there is some prima facie strong ground for holding that there is, no reasonable probability of having a conviction on the sanction, or that it is otherwise inexpedient to award the sanction on the facts of the particular case, or that the party against whom the sanction was given was probably innocent (c). (Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.).

Though, in sanction matters, a party has a right to come up on a sort of third appeal to the High Court, such petitions by way of third appeal should, as a matter of course, be rejected unless the records show not merely a technical illegality or irregularity but that a palpably innocent man is sought to be prosecuted out of private grudge by his enemies. (Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.).

When the Crim. Pro. Code says in S. 195, cl. 6, that a sanction given may be revoked by the appellate authority, it cannot be said that it was intended that the higher authority was bound to revoke the sanction whenever some irregularity or, even illegality is shown in the Pro. Code—Prejudice—Right to object by way of appeal—No revision.

The sending by a District Magistrate of a complaint for inquiry to a Sub-Divisional Magistrate without examining the complainant is an irregularity contrary to the provisions of S. 202, Crim. Pro. Code.

Where the complaint was, on consideration of the proceedings of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, found to be false by the District Magistrate, it was open to him to proceed thereupon on application under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code. In the absence of such an application, his order purporting to have been made under S. 195 could not be upheld. The proper course for him would have been to have proceeded under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code.

Where the applicant did not appeal against the order purporting to have been made under S. 195 and the trial appears to have advanced to a late stage, it may be open to the applicant to raise the question of prejudice by way of appeal in case of conviction, but it cannot be interfered with by way of revision under S. 439, Crim. Where the entire prosecution evidence is quite unworthy of credit and bristles with improbabilities and where it is clear that the case is foredoomed to failure at the Sessions, it is the duty of the subordinate Magistrate to discharge the accused (a).

Where an order of discharge passed by a Magistrate under S. 209, Crim. Pro. Code, is (206) Ss. 222, sub-S. (2), 233—Penal Code, Ss. 409, 477-A—Charge—Joinder of charges—Criminal misappropriation—Three different defalcations—Falsification of accounts, different.

S. 222 of the Crim. Pro. Code does not cover two sets of offences, any number of which may be tried together.

Sub-S. (2) of the section cannot be applied to S. 477-A of the Penal Code.

S. 233 of the Crim. Pro. Code must be strictly followed, save and except where the law itself provides an exception. A joinder of three charges under S. 409, Penal Code, and three charges under S. 477-A, is not covered by any of the exceptions provided in the subsequent sections of the Code (a).

A series of alterations in accounts made to cover a defalcation might all be charged in one charge under the provisions of S. 477-A. It cannot be said that there are three distinct offences committed by an accused person merely by reason of the fact that he makes more than one false entry to cover one defalcation. But a series of false entries referring to three different defalcations cannot be taken in the same trial, although three defalcations or a whole series of falsified accounts may be tried in one charge.

Therefore a joinder of three charges under S. 409, Penal Code, and three charges under S. 477-A, is bad and fatal to the trial (b).

Where an accused, in making entries which are charged against him, was in reality furthering a fraud that had already been committed, the case falls within the purview of S. 477-A. But it is safer to set out the separate items of falsification in separate charges (c). Raman Behary Das v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 153=22 Ind. Cas. 729=18 C.W.N. 1152=41 C. 722.

The Deputy Magistrate framed separate charges under S. 347, I.P.C., against the accused for each day's offence; he also framed a separate charge against the accused under S. 352 and S. 352, read with S. 114, I.P.C., as having been committed by the accused persons on the last day. All the charges were tried together.

Held, that the transaction of the last day was in continuation of what took place on the first day and the beating and other maltreatment alleged to have taken place on the last day were the concluding portion of the same transaction and the charges were rightly tried together. *Dy. Held, that, under S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, judicial discretion was given to the Court to try the principal offender and the abettor either jointly or separately, and the manner in which this discretion should be exercised must depend on the facts of each case.

(229) Ss. 247, 403, 417, 435, 439—Acquittal of accused under S. 247 procured by his own trick—Whether a revision or appeal lies against the acquittal—Admission of additional evidence in appeals—Powers of Court—Grounds for setting aside order of acquittal—English and Indian Law.

In this case the complainant preferred a complaint of mischief against two individuals. Process was issued against them and the complainant was informed of the date of the hearing in person. On the date fixed for the trial, the Magistrate acquitted the accused under S. 247, Crim. Pro. Code, owing to the complainant not being present in Court when the case was called on. It subsequently transpired that the complainant had been kept out of the way by the action of the accused in getting a constable to arrest him on a false charge of committing nuisance after he had come to the place where the Magistrate's Court was situated. The District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court under S. 439, for setting aside the order of acquittal and directing a new trial.

Held, that the High Court would be prepared to set aside the order of acquittal in this case and order a new trial if the matter had come before it by way of appeal presented by the Local Government under S. 417; but in revision it has always been regarded as a sound rule of practice not to interfere when there is no error in law or on the face of the record, and not to interfere in cases of acquittal in which Government might have appealed under S. 417, but has not done so (a).

Per Spencer, J.—There is nothing in the language of S. 417, Crim. Pro. Code, to limit appeals against acquittals to cases in which Courts have, owing to some error of law or misappreciation of evidence, come to a wrong decision on the evidence before them.

There is no distinction in the Code between the right of appeal against an acquittal and the right of appeal against a conviction, both being governed by the same rules and being subject to the same limitations (b).

S. 241, Crim. Pro. Code, allows additional evidence to be admitted in appeals against acquittals as well as in appeals against convictions, although cases in which this power is exercised will naturally be rare.

Per Miller, J.—Quære.—Whether the Legislature intended to permit the High Court in appeal or in revision to set aside an acquittal on the ground that fresh evidence is available which could not be produced at the trial, or on the ground that a complainant has shown sufficient reason for the failure to appear and prosecute his complainant before the lower Court. In re Sinnu Gowndan, 26 M.L.J. 160 = (1914) M.W.N. 273 = 15 Cr. Pro. Code.

Held that, although the Code of Criminal Procedure makes no provision for argument in a case governed by Ch. Crim. Pro. Code—(Continued).

the complainant, the Magistrate the day after made his previous order absolute and further directed the complainant to suffer simple imprisonment for 30 days in default of payment of the compensation:

Held, that the Magistrate's order directing the payment of compensation was in strict compliance with S. 250, Crim. Pro. Code.

It is sufficient that the Magistrate fixed the compensation in his order of discharge. The proviso to S. 250 clearly contemplates that the direction in the first paragraph of the section shall be considered as in the nature of a rule and that that rule shall not be made absolute until the complainant has shown cause (a).

So far as the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment was concerned, the High Court held that there was obvious error and ordered it to be amended in terms that the compensation shall be recovered as if it were a fine, and in the event of its not being so recovered there shall be simple imprisonment. *Lalit Mohan Singha v. Held, that the final order was not invalid merely because it was not pronounced in the same breath as the order of acquittal, and that it was substantially a continuation of the order of acquittal and part of the same proceeding and valid in law. *Ghanumal Nawalmal v. (286) Ss. 250, 268 (g)—Summary trial—Award of compensation—Failure to record complainant's objections—Effect—Technical mistake—High Court's powers of revision—No presumption of injustice.

Reading S. 250, Crim. Pro. Code, along with S. 268 (g), it is imperative on a Magistrate to record and consider the objections of the complainant before imposing a fine upon him (a).

Per Hayward, J. C.—Where a Magistrate omitted to record the complainant's objections before fining him, his order ought to be set aside (a).

Per Boyd, A.J.C.—Mere omission to record what the complainant said is only a small irregularity. From such an omission the Court would not infer the further mistake that he omitted to ask the complainant to show cause and to consider the reply given by him.

The High Court ought not to interfere unless some one has been prejudiced, i.e., unless there is some reasonable chance of there having been a failure of justice. An order should not be upset because of a technical mistake of adjective law, if it is a purely technical mistake. There is no presumption that a technical mistake causes injustice. Minhomal Lillaram v. The Crown, 8 S.L.R. 35=15 Cr. L. J. 666=25 Ind. Cas. 994.

A Magistrate dismissed a complaint as frivolous and vexatious and ordered the complainant to show cause why an order or payment of compensation should not be made against him. Four days later he ordered the complainant to pay compensation to the accused. Held, that an order for paying compensation must form part of the order of acquittal or discharge, and where a Magistrate proposes to pass such an order he should give the complainant an opportunity to show cause and hear and record his representations before finally making the order.

In the case in question, it was held that the proceedings were merely irregular as the order of discharge showed that the Magistrate did not conceive himself to have finally disposed of the case. The order of acquittal was only an order permitting the accused to leave the Court. Ghurbin Koeri v. Khalil Khan, 12 A.L.J. 143=36 A. 132=15 Cr. L.J. 193=22 Ind. Cas. 977.

The provisions of S. 256, Crim. Pro. Code, are imperative and it is an illegality to neglect them. The section says that, after the charge has been framed, the accused "shall be required to state whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so, which of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken." It is not until a specific charge has been drawn up and explained to the accused that he is in a position fully to cross-examine the witnesses for the Crown, and it is for this reason that the Legislature enacted S. 256. The omission to follow S. 256 involves remand and retrial of the case from the point of the drawing up of the charge, and it is therefore of vital importance that the accused should, in all cases, be asked at the appropriate time if he wishes to recall witnesses for cross-examination. Moola v. Crown, 11 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

The accused was placed on his trial for having committed criminal breach of trust in respect of some bales of jute. The accused admitted his liability. The trying Magistrate framed a charge under S. 406, I.P.C., and after cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution acquitted the accused under S. 258, Crim. Pro. Code, holding that the case was one of civil dispute.

Held (on an appeal by the Local Government under S. 417, Crim. Pro. Code).—That, in an appeal from an acquittal, the High Court could not interfere, unless the judgment of the Court below was wrong and perverse or without jurisdiction and based upon obvious errors in procedure, and there being nothing of the kind in the case, the High Court should uphold the decision of the Magistrate even though wrong, because it would be based at the most on a doubtful weighing of facts and not on any irregularity or negligence or other matter going to the jurisdiction or the regularity of the trial.

(248) Ss. 258, 417, 439—Acquittal, setting aside of, by High Court in revision, on the application of the complainant.

Held (by Jenkins, C.J., and Fletcher, J.).—That the High Court has jurisdiction under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, to interfere in revision with an acquittal, but it should ordinarily exercise this jurisdiction sparingly and only where it is urgently demanded in the interests of public justice.

The decisions of the different High Courts consistently support the view that, as a general rule, it is expedient not to interfere in revision at the instance of a private person with an acquittal after trial by the proper tribunal, and that applications for that purpose should be discouraged on public grounds.

Per Teunon, J.—That under S. 417, Crim. Pro. Code, the right to present an appeal against an acquittal is vested in the Local Government, but an alternative remedy against injustice done to injured complainants has been provided in S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, and the High Court has ample jurisdiction to interfere and remedy the wrong, if wrong has been done. The section is expressed in the widest terms and vests in the Court an absolute and unqualified discretion to which the enactment has set up no bars or limits and which cannot be fettered by judicial decisions. *Faujdar Thakur v. Held, further, that the order striking off the case was not tantamount to an order of discharge which the Magistrate was competent to make only in such cases as can be lawfully compounded under S. 259, Crim. Pro. Code.

Where the complainant under the above circumstances instituted a fresh complaint and the Court below accepted it, held, that a second trial could not be held.

Of five accused persons, the jury unanimously found one guilty under S. 304, I.P.C., and the Judge agreeing with that verdict sentenced him to transportation for life. The other four accused persons were charged under Ss. 148, 304/149, 326/149, I.P.C., there being no charge under S. 326, I.P.C. The jury unanimously acquitted them of the charge of rioting, and the Judge agreed with them but the jury found them guilty under S. 326, I.P.C. The Judge made a reference to the High Court under S. 307, Crim. Pro. Code, on the ground that the verdict under S. 326, I.P.C., was illegal and unwarranted by the evidence and should be altered to one under S. 326 read with S. 149, I.P.C.

Held—That, on the reference, the High Court could not consider the question of rioting in respect of which the Judge and the Jury were agreed; a fortiori it could not consider any charge made by implication under S. 149, although the verdict of the jury acquitting the accused of the charge of rioting was based on a misdirection, as the Judge did not explain to the Jury the distinction between civil and criminal trespass before telling them that the complainants had trespassed into the disputed land.

That, there being no charge under S. 326, I.P.C., independently, there could be no verdict given upon it, and the verdict of the jury finding the accused guilty under S. 326, I.P.C., was illegal and void and must be set aside (a).

Criminal trespass depends on the intention of the offender and not upon the nature of the act, and when a man's intention is to save his family and property from imminent destruction it cannot be said that because he, with that object in view, commits civil trespass on his neighbour's land and cuts a portion of his neighbour's property (which he ordinarily would not be justified in doing), he is guilty of any criminal offence. *The King-Emperor v. The special power to commit to a Sessions Court, conferred on a Magistrate by S. 347 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, cannot be interpreted as depriving the accused of the benefit of the procedure prescribed in Ch. XVIII of that Code ; but where the accused, when tried on a charge under S. 354, Penal Code, denies the charge in toto and enjoys the benefit of cross-examining the prosecution witnesses and of examining the witnesses for the defence, it cannot be said that he has been prejudiced, merely because the Magistrate, at the time of delivering his judgment, altered the charge into one under Ss. 376 and 511, Penal Code, and committed (286) S. 350—Re-commencement of trial or enquiry—Discharge or acquittal.

Where a trial is re-commenced under S. 350 of the Crim. Pro. Code, while a charge had been framed by the predecessor-in-office of the Magistrate, the charge is not cancelled and there can only be an acquittal. It is settled law that proceedings before a Magistrate in a warrant case under Chap. XXI of the Crim. Pro. Code are only an enquiry until the charge is framed and, on a charge being framed, become a trial. The Magistrate who re-commenced an enquiry or trial does not thereby modify its nature at the stage at which it has arrived. Tunguturi Sriramulu v. Nalam Krishna Row, (1914) M.W.N. 646.

Where the case against certain accused was first begun by a Sub-Divisional Magistrate who went so far as to frame a charge under S. 254, Crim. Pro. Code, to which the accused pleaded not guilty, and the successor-in-office of the Magistrate re-commenced the enquiry under S. 350, Crim. Pro. Code, examined the complainant and then passed an order of discharge under S. 253 (2), and the District Magistrate set aside the order of discharge and ordered a further inquiry under S. 497, Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, that the re-commencement of a 'trial' under S. 350, Crim. Pro. Code, does not imply a cancellation of the charge framed by the first Magistrate, that the charge remains in force and that the subsequent order must be treated as one of acquittal and not of discharge (a).

The only object of the substantive portion of cl. 1 of S. 350 seems to be to leave it to the discretion of the Magistrate to either act on evidence recorded by his predecessor or to hear it over again for himself.

It is settled law that the proceedings before a Magistrate in a warrant case under Chap. XXI, Crim. Pro. Code, are only an 'enquiry' until a charge is framed, and on a charge being framed become a 'trial' (b).

Where the proceedings recommenced under S. 350 are only an enquiry, they are re-commenced as an enquiry. Where they have developed into a trial stage, they are re-commenced as a trial, i.e., a proceeding in which a charge has been framed.

A Magistrate who re-commences an enquiry or trial does not thereby modify its nature or the stage at which it has arrived (c).

Held, also, that the District Magistrate had no power to order further inquiry. Tunguturi Sriramulu v. K. Veerasalingam, 16 M.L.T. 308 = 27 M.L.J. 589 = (1914) M.W.N. 646 = 15 Cr. L.J. 673 = 25 Ind. Cas. 1001.

An order under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, was made against the petitioner directing his prosecution under S. 193, I.P.O., with reference to a deposition given by him as a witness at a criminal trial. It appeared that, after the deposition had been recorded, the record was handed over to the petitioner who proceeded to read it over himself. The Magistrate held a preliminary enquiry under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, before making the order for prosecution, and examined witnesses in the course of that enquiry, but made no record of their statements:

Held—That the provisions of S. 360, sub-S. (1), Crim. Pro. Code, were not sufficiently complied with, inasmuch as that sub-section requires that the evidence should be read over in the presence, that is, in the hearing of the accused, in order that the accused should have an opportunity of correcting any mistake in it.

That the deposition was inadmissible and the order for prosecution must be set aside.

That the Code of Criminal Procedure does not contain any provision with regard to the manner in which the evidence in an enquiry under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, should be recorded; but for future reference the Magistrate should have made a summary of the statements (292) Ss. 363, 417—Demeanour of witnesses noted by Court—Duty of Appellate Court.

Where a Session Judge of experience stated in the most emphatic terms the demeanour of the eye-witnesses was evasive, that they inspired him with no confidence, and that no man could be convicted on their testimony.

Held, that, before the Court of Appeal could justifiably accept their evidence, it must be assured in the most positive and convincing manner that there was no ground for this criticism. The consideration that the Court of Appeal itself would have arrived at a different conclusion, had it tried the accused person as a Court of original jurisdiction, is immaterial.

Where the evidence is all oral and its credibility is a mere matter of opinion, the opinion of the Court, which heard the witnesses, must be treated as almost conclusive. In such a case, the Court of Appeal should not adopt the view adverse to the accused, and believe the evidence as to his guilt, which the lower Court has disbelieved and take upon itself to set aside the verdict of acquittal. The indications of mistake must be obvious or the evidence too strong to be ejected, before the Court should interfere. Emperor v. Bishen Singh, 125 P.L.R. 1914 = 15 Cr. The accused was indicted in the Calcutta Court of Criminal Sessions under five counts which were, firstly, the murder of one N under S. 302/34, I.P.C., secondly, murder of the same man under S. 302/114, I.P.C., thirdly, abetting the murder of the same man under S. 302/109, I.P.C., fourthly, the murder of one A, fifthly, culpable homicide of A. The accused pleaded not guilty to all the charges. The Jury unanimously acquitted the accused of the first and the fourth charges and differed as to the other counts, there being not as many as six who agreed in opinion. The Judge discharged the jury under S. 305, Crim. Pro. Code, and directed a re-trial. On the re-trial of the accused before a fresh jury on the remaining counts of the indictment, the accused pleaded not guilty as also autrefois acquit and it was urged in defence (1) that, as the accused had been acquitted of the charge of murder of A, he could not be tried again for committing culpable homicide on him; and (2) that, as he had been acquitted of an offence under S. 302/34, I.P.C., in relation to the murder of N, he could not be convicted of an offence in relation to the same man under S. 302/109 or 302/114, I.P.C.:

Held—that S. 403 protected the accused only against a trial for murder and any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him "might have been made." But the offence of culpable homicide for which he was tried again was one of the charges actually made against him and on the terms of S. 403, Crim. Pro. Code, the first objection failed. If the accused had been charged with murder alone, a verdict of not guilty would have protected him from another trial for culpable homicide and were he acquitted of culpable homicide he would be protected from a trial for any offence involving hurt; but where a charge was made, the case fell outside the provisions of the law dealing with cases where it might have been made.

That, for the purposes of S. 403, the accused was not being tried again but was being tried on the original indictment, and on his first plea of not guilty. S. 308, Crim. Pro. Code, did not affect the construction of S. 403.

That S. 403 should not be construed with reference to the English law relating to criminal pleading. Ss. 271 and 272, Crim. Pro. Code, contain all that is necessary as to pleading, and there is no need to supplement their contents by a reference to any other system of judicature.

That the plea of 'Not guilty' was one not recognised by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and it was not open to the accused to make any answer to an indictment except guilty or a claim to be tried.

S. 403 has nothing to do with pleading, but is in terms of a limitation on the jurisdiction of the Court. A defence under that section may be set up at any time before verdict in any form.

That even assuming the case to be governed by the English law of pleading, autrefois acquit was not properly pleaded.

That the accused had already pleaded 'Not guilty' in the first trial and that plea was still awaiting adjudication and the second plea was therefore unnecessary and of no effect.

That, even if the principles of English law were to be applied to the present case, the acquittal for murder was no bar to the re-trial for culpable homicide.

Where another person actually killed the deceased, the accused who was stated to have accompanied him and attempted to kill him could not be charged with murder under S. 34 of the Penal Code.

S. 34, Penal Code, is to be read according to the meaning of its terms, without reference to any doctrines derived from the English Common Law.

The construction put on the section in R. v. Mahabit Tiwari and Gourdas Nomasudra v. The Emperor (a) (which is summarised in para 243 of Mayne's Criminal Law) is wider than the terms of the section justify.

The finding of 'Not guilty' by the jury on the charge under S. 302/34, I.P.C., under the direction of the Judge for an acquittal on legal grounds did not decide any question of fact and could not be taken as negating the common intention of the accused and the man who in fact killed N.

That there is no reason for saying that a man must be absent in order to abet under S. 109, I.P.C.

That, by instigating the unknown murderer by accompanying him to the place and by aiding him in his flight afterwards, the accused would be abetting the murder under S. 109, I.P.C., even if he was not present at the murder; his presence there would make him liable for the murder under S. 114.

The effect of S. 109 and S. 114 of the Penal Code is to supersede all the English law relating to principals of the first and second degrees and accessories before the act. Emperor v. Nirmal Kanta Roy, 18 C.W.N. 723=15 Cr. L.J. 460=24 Ind. Cas. 840=41 C. 1072.

A High Court, when hearing an appeal against a conviction, may, as a Court of Appeal, under S. 423, cl. (b), Crim. Pro. Code, alter the finding, and then as a Court of Revision under S. 439, Crim. Pro. Code, enhance the sentence so as to make it appropriate to the altered finding.

In such cases the prohibition of re-trial contained in S. 403, does not apply, as an appeal to a High Court is not a second trial but a continuation of the trial in the Sessions Court and throws open the whole case to the interference of the High Court (a).

Sub-S. (4) of S. 439, refers to a case where the trial has ended in a complete acquittal, not to a case where the trial has ended in a conviction but the Court has wrongly applied the law or has wrongly found some fact not proved, and has, in consequence, held that the conviction should be under some section of the Code other than the section properly applicable. The sub-section cannot be held to limit the powers of a Court of Appeal. It only limits the powers of a High Court when acting, not as a Court of Appeal, but as a Court of Revision.

The terms of a statute should not be so construed as to involve an inconsistency between its different parts. Kambam Bali Reddy v. Emperor, 37 M. 119=22 Ind. Cas. 756=15 Cr. L.J. 180.

1) Ss. 423, cl. (d), 517, 520—High Courts, power of interference with order for restoration of property by Court below—Acquittal of accused—Restoration of property to accused.

The High Court has jurisdiction, under S. 520 of the Crim. Pro. Code, to interfere with, or, under S. 428, cl. (d) to amend an order made by a lower Court under S. 517.

Certain properties were found in the house of the accused, which the complainant alleged had been stolen from his house. The accused was convicted and his conviction upheld on appeal. An order was passed by the first Court to the effect that the properties, which were then in the custody of the Court, should be made over to the complainant. The High Court in revision acquitted the accused who moved the High Court for the restoration of the properties to him:

Held, that, as the accused has been acquitted of the offence of theft, the proper order is to direct that the property found in the possession of the accused should be restored to him. Hagu Biswas v. Manmatha Nath Mitra, 15 Cr. L.J. 184=22 Ind. Cas. 760=18 O.W.N. 959.

(320) S. 436—Power to order commitment—District Magistrate—Offences under Ss. 408 and 477-A, I.P.C.

A Magistrate of the First Class in an inquiry into offences of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts punishable under Ss. 408 and 477-A, Penal Code, declined to commit the accused to the Court of Session and discharged him. The District Magistrate, acting in revision, reversed the order of discharge and committed the accused to the Court of Session on charges under Ss. 408 and 477-A, Penal Code. The accused applied to the High Court contending that the order of committal was bad, as the case against him was primarily under S. 408 which was not triable exclusively by a Court of Session:

Held, (1) that the District Magistrate had the jurisdiction to make the order he did under S. 436 of the Crim. Pro. Code, because the falsification of accounts was not only a substantial part of the affair, but was so substantial and so necessary that the misappropriation could not have been effected in the way it was done without the falsification.

(2) That it was competent to the District Magistrate to add to a charge under S. 477-A the charge under S. 408, Penal Code. Emperor v. Gendial Chimanbhat, 16 Bom. L.R. 80=2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 179=15 Cr.L.J. 292=23 Ind. Cas. 500.

(323) Ss. 437, 110, 112, 119—Application to proceedings under Ch. VIII—"Release" and "Discharge"—Power of the District Magistrate to direct further enquiry when accused released.

The accused was called upon to show cause why he should not give security for good behaviour. A Magistrate enquired into the matter and after recording the evidence released him. The District Magistrate examined the record and directed further enquiry under S. 437, Crim. Pro. Code. Another Magistrate then heard the case and after recording evidence, held that there was no necessity to bind over the man to be of good behaviour and released him. The District Magistrate without issuing notice to the accused again sent for the record and directed further enquiry under S. 437, Crim. Pro. Code. At the second of the two enquiries the Magistrate drew up a fresh formal order under S. 112 of the Code. Held, that S. 437, Crim. Pro. Code (which empowers the District Magistrate to direct further enquiry to be made into the case of an accused person who has been discharged) is wide enough to cover the case of a person who has been called upon to show cause, under S. 110, Crim. Pro. Code, why he should not give security for good behaviour, and in whose case an order of release or discharge (both of which are really to the same effect) has been passed under S. 119, Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, further that, although a District Magistrate can at any time and for good and sufficient reason institute fresh proceedings under Ch. VIII of the Code, there is no bar to the District Magistrate examining the record of any proceedings, under that chapter, had by a Subordinate Magistrate and ordering further enquiry to be made.

Held, further that, after the discharge of the accused by two Magistrates, an order directing further enquiry should not have been passed without giving him an opportunity of showing cause why such order should not be passed. Kharg v. King-Emperor, 12 A.L.J. 167 = 15 Cr. L.J. 39 = 22 Ind. Cas. 183 = 36 A. 147.

A particular Sub-Divisional Magistrate dismissed a complaint under S. 203, Crim. Pro. Code. A subsequent complaint arising out of the same matter was made before him and he ordered the papers of the first case to be put up with the present complaint on a particular date. The officer was in the meantime transferred and his successor took up the case and ordered process to issue.

Held, that the successor-in-office of a particular Magistrate, although a different individual, constituted the same tribunal as his predecessor-in-office, and had jurisdiction to entertain a second complaint in the same matter, although the first one had been dismissed by the latter.

In this case enquiry was ordered by High Court. Ram Bharos v. Baban, 12 A.L.J. 106 = 36 A. 129 = 15 Cr.L.J. 168 = 22 Ind. Cas. 734.

Where a Burman Buddhist female applied for maintenance as wife against a Chinese Buddhist who denied that he was ever married according to law.

Held, that the personal law of a Chinese Buddhist would be applicable to such a case. That law is considerably more restricted than the Burmese Buddhist law according to which living together by mutual consent constitutes a valid marriage. Amongst the Chinese Buddhists, the following three conditions are essential.

The Court found the case proved against that man and he was directed to produce his sureties, but he failed to appear. Thereupon the Court ordered forfeiture of the petitioner's bond. Held, the order as to forfeiture was correct, as the case was not complete, and the Magistrate's duties in connection therewith were not at an end, until the culprit had appeared with his sureties and executed his bond. K brought a complaint under S. 447, I.P.C. for forcible seizure of his land against G, and G was convicted on 20th November 1911. G filed a petition for revision in the Chief Court which was rejected. G also filed a Civil suit and K applied for possession under S. 522, Crim. Pro. Code, on the 18th January 1912, which application was consigned to the record room on the 24th September 1912, as the Civil proceedings were going on in the Chief Court concerning the same land. Just after the Civil proceedings were disposed of in K's favour, he renewed his application by a petition, dated 19th June 1913. The Magistrate allowed the petition and passed the order asked for. G applied to the Chief Court on the ground that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass order for possession, after such a long time between conviction and order for possession.

Held, that a Magistrate has discretion to pass order for possession under S. 522 of the Crim. Pro. Code, and it is not necessary for him to pass such order simultaneously with the conviction, and that there is no illegality if he passes such order at any time after the conviction, if the cause of delay is fully explained to his satisfaction and the complainant moves the Court promptly after the cause of delay has ceased.

An appeal was preferred to the Sessions Judge from a conviction under Ss. 323 and 325 of the Penal Code. The Sessions Judge after hearing arguments came to the conclusion that, if an offence was committed at all, it was one under Ss. 394 and 397, Penal Code, and that the convicting Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try a case of so grave a nature. He accordingly set aside the convictions and sentences under Ss. 323 and 325 and directed the accused to be committed for trial on charges under Ss. 395, 394, 397 and 325 of the Code.

In proceedings under S. 110, Crim. Pro. Code, the accused was arrested without warrant, an adjournment of the case was refused even on production of medical certificate, his presence was secured under arrest while he was ill, he was not, till a late stage, informed of the charge against him and his prayer to reserve cross-examination and produce certain documents and witnesses was refused. Held that the above facts did not in any way show bias or prejudice in the mind of the Court against the accused, but taken with the facts of the institution of several criminal proceedings against the applicant prior to the present proceedings would be likely to give rise to an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he is not likely to have a fair and impartial trial in the Court and it is a good cause for transferring the case from that Court. *Jaffer Hussain v. (495) S. 526 (a), (e)—Transfer—Grounds for—Fair and impartial trial—Apprehension in the accused's mind—Further evidence—Disallowing questions—Rejection of application to summon witnesses.

The taking of irrelevant evidence, by a Magistrate dealing with a criminal case, his interference with the cross-examination of witnesses by disallowing questions on the ground that they are indecent or scandalous, his dismissing an application for summoning a large number of witnesses on the ground that it was made for the purpose of vexation or delay, are not sufficient to raise in the mind of the accused a reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial will not be had and do not make it expedient for the ends of justice that the case should be transferred. Jaggan v. Pro. Code—Conviction by Magistrate—Magistrate—Not 'personally interested'—Nor 'party to the proceedings'—Legality of conviction—Penal Code, S. 186.

The accused were convicted by a Magistrate under S. 186—, I. P. C., of obstructing a bailiff in execution of a process issued by that Magistrate in his capacity as a Judge of a Small Cause Court. The complainant bailiff was not examined but his report was brought on the record through the Nazir.

Held, that the mere fact that the complainant was not examined would not justify the setting aside of the conviction, because there were other witnesses who gave a full account of the matter.

Held, also, that the proceedings were not illegal for want of sanction under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, and that it was open to the bailiff, a public officer, to file a complaint without any sanction.

Held, also, the fact that the Magistrate issued the warrant, in respect of which the obstruction occurred, in his capacity as a Small Cause Court Judge, would not make him 'personally interested' in the matter within the meaning of S. 556, Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, also, that, because there was nothing on the record to show that the Magistrate gave sanction to prosecute or in other words directed the prosecution, he was not 'a party to the Criminal Proceedings' and that the trial

Cross-examination.

Sessions trial for murder—Examination-in-chief of first prosecution witness—Application by defence counsel for postponement of cross examination till next day—Refusal by Sessions Court—Effect—Accused prejudiced—Re-trial by another Sessions Court ordered.

The accused in this case were tried and convicted for murder. When the case was taken up in the Sessions Court, the Counsel for the defence asked that he might cross-examine the witnesses on the day following, as he was not prepared to cross-examine that day. The Counsel did not ask for an adjournment of the trial itself. The Sessions Court refused to grant the application. Held, by the High Court on appeal, that the application was a reasonable one and one which, under the circumstances, should have been granted, as the appellants have been prejudiced in that they lost the opportunity of cross-examination in the Sessions Court.

Though the appellants would not be entitled to such postponement as of right, there is no reason why the Sessions Court, if it thinks the case a proper one, should not show such an indulgence.

The conviction in this case was accordingly set aside by the High Court and the case was ordered to be re-tried by another Sessions Judge. Sadasiv Singh v. Emperor, 41 O. 399 = 15 Cr. L.J. 596 = 25 Ind. Cas. 348.

D was tried for an offence under S. 395, Penal Code. He pleaded an alibi and produced six witnesses to prove it. The Magistrate thought that all this evidence was false.

Evidence—(Continued).

D was convicted and proceedings were taken against the witnesses for perjury. On appeal by D, his conviction was set aside on the ground of serious irregularity in the trial and it was left to the District Magistrate to see if any fresh trial of D was advisable.

The witnesses tried for perjury were also acquitted some by the Sessions Judge, and others by the Chief Court. D was, however, again tried for the same offence, and in defence he said that he would not produce these witnesses again though he wished their evidence already taken to be considered. The Magistrate declined to consider the previous defence evidence unless the men were again produced in Court:

Held, that, under the circumstances, the Magistrate exercised a wrong discretion in refusing to consider the evidence. Dalm v. Emperor, 41 P.L.R. 1914=17 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.)=15 Cr. L.J. 62=22 Ind. Cas. 334.

(2) Evidence distrusted in part whether should necessarily be rejected altogether—Right of counsel to demand in cross-examination, repetition of story told in examination-in-chief.

Where the Court distrusts the evidence produced in a case in one particular, or as regards one accused, it does not necessarily follow that it should reject the evidence altogether.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the right of counsel to demand in cross-examination that a witness should repeat the story which he has told in the examination-in-chief. Lakha Singh v. Emperor, 89 P.L.R. 1914=15 Cr. L.J. 148=22 Ind. Cas. 724=30 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.).

(3) Circumstantial evidence, nature of—Theft of currency notes—Opportunity of entering room not accused's exclusively—Encashment of stolen notes in presence of accused's relation—Money in accused's possession after theft, not accounted for satisfactorily—Sufficiency of evidence.

Circumstantial evidence must be exhaustive and exclude the possibility of guilt of any other person, or must point conclusively to the complicity of the accused.

Therefore, where, in a case of theft of currency notes and cash from an office, the evidence against the accused was that he was one of those who entered the office in the absence of the complainant, that a relation of his was present when two of the notes were cashed by that relation's relative and that the accused was after the theft in possession of money for which he could not satisfactorily account, it was held that this evidence did not fulfil the conditions of circumstantial evidence. *Chiraguddin v. When no prima facie case had been made against the accused, it is open to the accused to rely safely on the presumption of innocence or on the infirmity of the evidence for the prosecution. But when a prima facie case is made out and the presumption of innocence is displaced, then the force of circumstantial evidence is augmented whenever the party attempts no explanation of facts which he may reasonably be presumed to be able and interested to explain. *Ismarsing Sawansing v. - (1-a) Ss. 6, 122—Evidence as to what a by-stander said some time after the transaction—Communications between husband and wife—Disclosure by wife—Admissibility.

S. 6, Evidence Act, gives statutory recognition to a well-known rule of the law of evidence that facts which form part of the res gestae are admissible in evidence. But this rule only applies when the facts are so connected together as to form part of the same transaction.

In order to make the statement of a by-stander admissible, it must have been made, as contemplated by S. 6 and illus. (a) to it, at the time the transaction was taking place or so shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction. If the transaction has terminated and then the statement is made, the statement is irrelevant. The admissibility is dependent on continuity.

In this case the murder took place the previous night. After the transaction had terminated and the murderers had left the place, a by-stander told the witnesses in the next morning that he had seen the accused commit the murder, and the witnesses testified to this statement of the by-stander. The by-stander was also produced, but he denied all knowledge of the occurrence.

Held, that any evidence as to what the by-stander said in the morning was inadmissible as hearsay and that the statement cannot be regarded as forming part of the same transaction as the murder and cannot be used against the accused (a).

Held, also that evidence given by the wife of one of the accused as to certain communications between her and her husband was inadmissible under S. 122 of the Evidence Act (b). Jowala Sahai v. Crown, 34 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

The thuggi or headman of a village is a person in authority within the meaning of S. 24 of the Evidence Act. Therefore, the confession made by an accused to the thuggi on being sent for by him after he was told that he would not be punished if he had not taken part in the offence, is irrelevant and inadmissible in evidence, as what the thuggi told the accused was an inducement to make a statement.

Other questions and answers in the examination of the accused based on this inadmissible statement are also inadmissible. Nga Kya Thin v. Emperor, 15 Cr.L.J. 681=26 Ind. Cas. 129.

(6) Ss. 24, 25 and 26—Confession—Magistrate on leave and outside jurisdiction—Accused ignorant of Magistrate's existence—Value of evidence—Blood stains and injuries on the persons of Chhachh people.

Held, that, the evidence is inadmissible to prove a confession made while an accused person is in police custody, except in so far as any fact is discovered in consequence of the information so received from him.

Held, also, that a Magistrate, though on leave and not in the district in which he has been exercising jurisdiction, is a "Magistrate" within the meaning of S. 26 of the Evidence Act. A confession made in the presence of such a person is admissible and relevant.

Held, further, that very little value can be attached to such a confession, when the fact that a Magistrate was present at the time the confession was made was not known to the accused, who was under the impression that he made the statement in the presence only of the police and their friends.

Held, further, that the presence of certain injuries of the nature of scratches on an accused's hands and detection of blood colouring matter on his kurta and pyjama count for little in a country such as Chhachh tract, particularly when he is a carpenter by trade and the other evidence of murder against him is very weak. *Faiz Ullah v. (9) Ss. 25, 26, 27, 30—Confession—Plea of guilty—When it can be withdrawn—Incriminating statement made in Police custody and before Magistrate—Admissibility against the maker and accused jointly tried—Curing defective statement with regard to the provisions of S. 364, Crim. Pro. Code.

Held, by the Full Bench that :—

An answer to the following effect to a charge under S. 376, Penal Code, constitutes a plea of guilty.

"I did not commit rape, I only held the lady's hands."

But, when the accused at the time of making such a statement, is enfeebled by illness and is undefended, withdrawal of the plea can be allowed if the accused wishes to withdraw it.

No part of a criminating statement whether amounting to a confession or not, written by an accused person himself while in Police custody, is admissible either against him or against the person jointly tried with him, unless it has led to the discovery of any fact within the terms of S. 27, Evidence Act.

A deposition (not amounting to a confession) of a person recorded on solemn affirmation by a Magistrate is admissible against the deponent only but not against the person jointly tried with him.

A statement made by an accused person before a Magistrate who subsequently commits him to the Court of Session must be recorded in the form prescribed by S. 364, Crim. Pro. Code, but any defect therein can be cured by proving it by the evidence of the Magistrate recording the same.

A confession of an accused is not admissible under S. 30, Evidence Act, against a co-accused, if the former is convicted on his own plea of guilty. Crown v. Shulldham, 44 P.W.R. 1914, (Cr.) (F B.).

The law as laid down in S. 25, Evidence Act, does not say that all statements made to the police are inadmissible, but it excludes only confessions made to them : there being a distinction between mere admissions and confessions which are statements either directly admitting the guilt of the accused or statements which suggest the inference that he committed the crime with which he is charged. Further, the general rule is subject to that which admits statements leading to discovery, whether such statements amount to a confession or not.

Statements made by the accused to the police pointing out the place where the alleged dacoity was committed by others, the place where after the dacoity he concealed himself in the paddy field, and also the houses where, he said, he went for assistance, may be regarded as information leading to discovery or as statements made by the accused as part of his defence. In either view no objection can successfully be taken to the admissibility of those statements in evidence.

Statements made by the accused as to what according to his case actually happened or statements exculpating himself and put forward by way of defence are also admissible, notwithstanding that by other evidence it may be shown that they are inconsistent with truth.

A useful test as to admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution.

If the prosecution rely on the statement of the accused as being true, then they may, and probably in many cases will be found to, amount to confessions. If, on the other hand, the statements of the accused are relied on not because of their truth but because of their falsity, they are admissible. They are in such cases brought forward to show what the defence of the accused is, and that as the defence is untrue this is a circumstance tending to prove the guilt of the accused.

Where to a police officer the accused 'first said that the marks on his dhoti were tobacco stains, then he said they were stains of betel-nut and lastly he said it was blood.'

Though this statement was of an incriminating character from which an inference might be drawn as to the guilt of the accused, yet, having regard to the fact that the attack was made at some distance from the accused, and that the dhoti might have been stained in an attack by others, and having regard also to other circumstances in the case, held that this statement of the accused should be excluded as not being admissible in evidence.

Where there was no satisfactory evidence to prove that a witness could not be found, where no warrant said to have been issued for the production of the witness was produced and there was no evidence on record to show that an attempt was made to serve the warrant and the person who said that a search was made, did not say that he himself made the search for witness, held that, under these circumstances, no sufficient ground was made for the admission of a previous deposition of the witness under S. 38,

Evidence Act, and that such deposition should have been excluded from consideration.

In order to justify the inference of guilt, the prosecution must show that the inculpatory facts are incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. Emperor v. Kanga Mall, 41 C. 801—15 Cr. L.J. 718—26 Ind. Cas. 161.

An accused person made the following statements, vis., that he and another accused stole the missing money from a dabbi and that the stolen money will be found in a heap of rubbish close to his house. Immediately after making these statements, he went to that rubbish heap in the presence of two police constables and of witnesses who made the search in his house, and took out certain coins and metal plates similar to the one kept in the dabbi.

Held that, on the above facts, the accused was rightly convicted. The statement that the accused himself committed the offence is not admissible in evidence (a). But the portion of the statement signifying that the property stolen from the dabbi about which the police were then making an investigation, will be found in the rubbish heap, is a statement which is distinctly related to the discovery of the stolen property and is therefore clearly admissible (b). *Manjunathaya v. Where a Police Sub-Inspector, the investigating officer in a murder case, was inter alia informed by the accused of the fact that the latter had committed the murder, and the Sub-Inspector was allowed to depose to regarding this information :

Held, that such information not being admissible in evidence under S. 27 of the Evidence Act, the Sub-Inspector should not have been allowed to state in Court that the accused said that he had committed the murder.

The provisions of S. 342, Crim. Pro. Code, apply to all sorts of proceedings in Magistrates' Courts, whether the case is one triable by a Court of Sessions or otherwise.

Under S. 342, Crim. Pro. Code, a Magistrate is empowered at any time and without any previous warning to put questions to the accused for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, and under sub-S. (9) of the same section the answers which the accused gives to the questions so put may be used in evidence against him. The admissibility of the accused's statement thus made is not necessarily governed by those sections of the Evidence Act which relate to the admission of confessions, as the statement is not made extra-judicially.

But under S. 342, Crim. Pro. Code, a Magistrate is not justified in putting to the accused questions of an inquisitorial nature. Malik Hussain v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 474 = 24 Ind. Cas. 562.

(29) S.114—Accomplice—Suspected participant in crime appearing as prosecution witness, statement of weight of—Presumption—S. 302, Penal Code.

A prosecution witness, against whom there is, apart from his own statement, ground for suspicion that he was himself a participator in the very crime for which the accused are on their trial, though, strictly speaking, not an "accomplice," stands, in view of the provisions of S. 114 of the Evidence Act, practically on the same basis as an "accomplice." Therefore a conviction ought not to be based on the sole uncorroborated testimony of such a witness (a).

The principle laid down by S. 114 of the Evidence Act is one of a very wide application, which covers not merely the particular instances given in the illustrations to the said section, but all sorts of the analogous cases in which the actual facts are distinguishable from the facts presumed by any one of the illustrations, but are equally amenable to the general principle enunciated by the section itself. Rustom Singh v. out by her to him alone of the body of the stepson floating in a pond. Held, that such evidence is not admissible, as the crime was not committed by the wife against the husband within the meaning of S. 122, Evidence Act (a).

An offence 'against' a person is an offence calculated to injure his person or property or reputation, as in cases of defamation, and does not include an offence against a son, though such offence may cause to the father grief in mind.

On a letter addressed by the accused to the legal adviser of the complainant, criminal proceedings for defamation were started by him and he was represented at the trial by the same legal adviser. The latter offered himself as the principal witness in the case and his evidence was recorded. The Magistrate before whom the trial was had while writing judgment was of opinion that the evidence of the counsel for the complainant was inadmissible and dismissed the complaint for want of proof.

Held, that, inasmuch as the evidence of the counsel for the complainant was admitted on the record and was ruled out by the Magistrate only when he came to pass judgment, there was no trial of the case on the merits; and it would not be improper for the High Court to exercise its revisional powers (a).

Held, further, that, in determining the relevancy or otherwise of any evidence, the Court is precluded from considering matters outside the purview of the Evidence Act, and the Magistrate was in error in ruling out as inadmissible the evidence that had already been recorded, on the ground that the witness was appearing as counsel in the case.

It is an error of judgment on the part of a counsel, and against his professional obligations, to appear on behalf of a party in a case in

(1), (3), (4), XXXV (2), Order-in-Council—Ex-territorial jurisdiction over foreigners—"British protected person," jurisdiction over—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court of China and Corea to try Afghan soldier enlisted in Indian army for murder committed at Canton—Consent of Ameer to exercise of jurisdiction, if to be implied from public recruitment of Afghans to the Indian army—Proof of exercise of ex-territorial jurisdiction in China by oral evidence—Admissibility—English rules of evidence how far binding on Supreme Court at Hong-Kong—Statement by accused in answer to question by Commanding Officer when in custody, if admissible—Substance and not mere formalities of law, to be complied with—Misdirection to jury on matter of comparatively small importance, if a ground for reversal—Privy Council when will interfere with order in criminal case—Violation of natural justice.

The specified conditions under which only, according to cl. (3) to Art. V of the China and Corea Order-in-Council, 1904, the Supreme Court of China and Corea has civil and criminal jurisdiction over a "foreigner" as such, have no application to "British protected persons" who, even when in fact natural-born foreigners, are "British subjects" as defined by Art. III and so subject to the jurisdiction of that Court under cl. (1) to Art. V.

The accused, a natural-born subject of the Ameer of Afghanistan, was duly enlisted and enrolled in a British Indian regiment, took the oath of allegiance to His Majesty and made a solemn declaration undertaking among other things to go wherever ordered by land or sea, and whilst serving with the detachment of that regiment which was encamped on Shameen Island at Canton as a guard of the Concession, was alleged to have murdered a Subadar of that regiment. The Acting Consul at Canton, who also served as Judge under Art. XIX of the Order-in-Council, gave evidence (which was uncontradicted) "that the place of murder was within his jurisdiction and that the jurisdiction exercised at Canton on Shameen was the same ex-territorial jurisdiction as was exercised throughout China by the Supreme Court, that Indian soldiers enjoy His Majesty's protection in Shameen, Canton, and the Courts exercise jurisdiction over them, and that consular protection extends to trying persons and protecting them if they are improperly arrested."

Held—that S. 4 (1) of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, did not make this evidence inadmissible to prove that, by "usage, sufferance or other lawful means," His Majesty has jurisdiction at Canton.

That the accused being, during his service in the Indian Army, subject to Military Law, was entitled to His Majesty's protection and was a "British protected person" within Art. III.

When the Crown lawfully enlists in its forces aliens along with British subjects and requires of them the same service, loyalty and allegiance as are the duties of British enlisted subjects, it extends to them the same protection in a foreign country where all are serving together in the armed forces of His Majesty.

Protection enjoyed by virtue of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, "or otherwise," as mentioned in Art. III, includes that derived from other statutes, Imperial or Indian, applicable to the person in question.

Quere.—Whether the Court could take judicial notice of the political change in China in considering the question of jurisdiction.

in the Indian army whereby they are de facto brought under the authority of His Majesty, that the Ameer does in fact consent to such enlistment with its consequences, so as to bring such enlisted Afghans within the terms of cl. (4), Art. V, i.e., "foreigners with respect to whom any State, King, Chief of Government whose subjects they are, consents to the exercise of power or authority by His Majesty."

The Officer commanding the detachment, who spoke to the accused shortly after the occurrence, deposed to having asked the accused why he had done such a senseless act—not thereby meaning to convey a threat or inducement—and to the accused having replied that he was being abused by the deceased three or four days and that without a doubt he had killed him. The Judicial Committee found that the words of the officer though formally a question were really an exclamation of dismay:

Held—That the prosecution having by the evidence of this officer proved to the satisfaction of the trial Judge that the statement of the accused was voluntary in the sense that it had not been obtained from him either by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised or held out by a person in authority, its admission in evidence was not in breach of the long established rule of English Criminal law which makes statements obtained from the accused by pressure of authority and fear of consequences inadmissible in evidence and which casts on the prosecution the onus of proving that the statement relied on was voluntary.

On the question whether the statement should not have been excluded from evidence on the ground of its having been made by a person in custody in answer to a question put by a person having authority over him and having custody of him through his subordinates,

Held, on a review of English authorities, that the English law on the point was still unsettled, some Judges being of opinion that such a statement is admissible in evidence without exception, whilst others treat its exclusion from evidence as a matter for the Judge's discretion depending largely on his view of the impropriety of the questioner's conduct and the general circumstances of the case.

That the trial Judge in admitting this evidence decided in accordance with what at any rate was a "probable opinion" of the present law if it was not actually the better opinion, and his so doing was not a violation of "the principles of natural justice," calling for His Majesty's interference.

That even if the evidence was admissible, in the exercise of the trial Judge's discretion, that discretion in the present case was not shown to have been exercised improperly.

With reference to Art. XXXV (2) of the China and Corea Order-in-Council which provides that, subject to the provisions of that order, criminal jurisdiction under the Order shall, as far as circumstances admit, be exercised on the principle of and in conformity with English law for the time being.

Held—that, in the absence of any provision in the Order on the point modifying or excluding the principles and practice of the English law, the question of the admissibility of the statement of the accused might justly be treated as if English criminal law and practice applied to the criminal jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Hong-Kong, subject, however, to the following reservations: (1) That such law and practice are not to be considered as in all respects and particulars binding on that Court; (2) That regard must be had to the necessary distinction that must be drawn between the criminal procedure of a European country whose jurisprudence has a defined history extending over many centuries and that applicable to a British possession in the Far East, where a mixed and fluctuating population is subject to the administration of Law by European Judges whose duty it is to have regard alike to the principle of British justice and to the necessities of local order; (3) That the words "so far as circumstances admit" may well (i) refer to absence of facilities at Hong-Kong for formal proof of Statutes passed and administrative orders made in various parts of His Majesty's dominions, and (ii) be intended to cover some necessary departures from the formalities only as distinguished from the essentials of English justice, when as in the present case a force detailed for the protection of European residents beyond His Majesty's dominions in the midst of a population often turbulent and at the particular time disturbed, was itself disturbed by such a crime as the murder of a Subadar by a Native Private in the ranks.

That, in view of the position which the Privy Council held in regard to criminal proceedings, the Judicial Committee did not in this case decide what the rule of English law should be with regard to the admissibility in evidence of statements made by an accused person in answer to a question put by a person in authority in whose custody he is; that should be left to a Court which exercises the revising functions of a general Court of criminal appeal (a).

The Privy Council cannot in a criminal matter allow an appeal on grounds that would not have sufficed for granting leave to appeal. Misdirection as such or irregularity as such will not suffice. There must be something which in the particular case deprives the accused of the substance of fair trial and the protection of the law, or which, in general, tends to divert the due and orderly administration of law into a new course which may be drawn into an evil precedent in future (b).

The jurisdiction of the Privy Council in appeals in criminal matters involves a general consideration of the evidence and of the circumstances of the case in order to place the irregularities complained of, if substantiated, in their proper relation to the whole matter.

Foreign Jurisdiction Act (1890)—(Concluded):

Held, upon a review of the evidence, that the preponderance of unquestioned over the questioned evidence (the accused's statement to the commanding officer) was so great, that it was impossible, at any rate highly improbable, that the jury was substantially influenced by that evidence. Therefore, the fact that the Judge left the objectionable evidence for the consideration of the jury without any warning to disregard it did not justify the conclusion that there was any miscarriage of justice, substantial, grave or otherwise.

Semle :—Whether it is highly improbable that evidence improperly admitted can have had any influence on the verdict of the jury, the Appellate Court will be justified in refusing to interfere (c). Ibrahim v. The King, 18 C.W. N. 705 = 15 Cr. L. J. 326 = 23 Ind. Cas. 678 (P.C.).

Cl. 39 of the Letters Patent empowers the High Court to declare the fitness of an appeal to the Privy Council in any matter not being of criminal jurisdiction, if it is a final judgment, decree or order of the Court made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction. A proceeding under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent, under which the High Court is empowered to deal with professional misconduct, does not fall under any of the jurisdiction specified in the Letters Patent, and, therefore, is not governed by cl. 39.

Letters Patent—(Concluded).—1.—Calcutta—(Concluded).

Therefore, no leave to appeal to the Privy Council can be given by the High Court in such a proceeding.

Where the High Court, in a proceeding under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent, has granted sanction to the Public Prosecutor to prosecute an Attorney for alleged perjury, the High Court cannot, under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent, grant leave to the Attorney to appeal to the Privy Council against the order of the High Court.

Where such a sanction was granted to the Public Prosecutor, and under some misconception the High Court granted leave to the Attorney to appeal to the Privy Council:

Held, that the order granting leave was clearly an order affecting the authority which the Public Prosecutor had under the sanction to prosecute the Attorney, and an application for review of the order of the High Court was maintainable at the instance of the Public Prosecutor. Mr. Hume v. Letters Patent, 24, 25 Vict C. 194, S. 16—Constitution of Court—Appointment of the sixth Judge to the High Court for N.W.P.—Practice—Conviction on evidence similar to that given in another case—Appeal from acquittal.

It was perfectly competent by Letters Patent to appoint a sixth Judge to the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces and it is a properly constituted High Court.

Where three persons were charged of the same offence on the same facts, and two of them, who were found, were tried and convicted, the case of the third, when found, should be heard and decided altogether irrespective of the fact that there had been a previous trial and conviction upheld by the High Court against the other accused.

There is no distinction between the right of appeal against an acquittal and a right of appeal against a conviction. King-Emperor v. Ghure, 19 A.L.J. 281=36 A. 168=15 Cr. L. J. 200=22 Ind. Cas. 984.

Magistrate.

(1) Order passed by a District Magistrate in the absence of statutory authority, effect of—Power of Magistrate to do an act, where to be derived from.

Held, that an order passed by a District Magistrate cannot be supported as an executive order in the absence of any Statutory authority which would justify the making of it.

The authority of every Magistrate to do any act as Magistrate or as Collector, if such authority exists, must ultimately be found in the powers conferred by Parliament. The immediate power may be an executive order of the Local Administration, but the power of the Local Administration to make an order must be derived either directly or indirectly, from Parliament and it is a mistake to assume that because an officer is an Executive Officer or a Judicial Officer, he has any power to interfere with private or public persons which cannot be derived from a lawful origin. Gouhar (Musammat) v. Murder.

- (1) Murder—Circumstantial evidence—No direct evidence—Conviction.

In a case of murder when there is no direct evidence and the prosecution case is based purely on circumstantial evidence, such considerations would be entitled to weight if the question were between this and an alternative explanation of the deceased's death, or if there were ground for suspicion of any person other than the accused. Where the evidence points to the accused alone and admits of no reasonable doubt, the accused can rightly be convicted. Muhammad Khasim v. Emperor, (1914) M.W.N. 718.

OLDFIELD, J.

- (2) Practice—Witness improving on his former statement—Evidence—Colouring matter of blood on cloths and nail parings of an accused—Murder.

Held, that it is very unsafe to rely upon a witness who materially improves on his former statement.

Held, also, that, in the absence of reasonable proof of guilt, the presence of colouring matter of blood on certain articles of clothing of a person accused of murder or of mammalian blood on his nail parings is not of much consequence and can be explained in various ways. Nadir and Ram v. The Crown, 43 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.).

JOHNSTONE and SCOTT-SMITH, JJ.

- (3) Murder—Circumstantial evidence—Unsatisfactory evidence of the identification of body.

Held, that a conviction of murder cannot be sustained where the only circumstantial evidence against the accused was that the deceased was seized by the accused and the husband of the deceased in the road; placed on a camel, carried towards a canal in which her body was afterwards found completely dismembered; especially when the evidence of identification of the body is unsatisfactory and there is no direct evidence connecting the accused with the commission of the crime. *Chuhar Singh v. The members of the Committee of a club who exercise full control over club matters, inclusive of the premises, 'keep' the premises of the club within the meaning of that expression as used in S. 294-A, Penal Code.

Where a house is kept open for a double purpose, viz., as an honest social club for those who do not desire to play as well as for the purpose of gaming for those who desire to play, it is a house opened and kept for the purpose of gaming, and it is not necessary to show that the house is used exclusively for the purpose of drawing a lottery (a).

Where the common object is the keeping of a place for the purpose of drawing a lottery not authorized by Government, all who engage in such an object are individually guilty and can be prosecuted jointly or severally.

The presumption is that official acts are regularly performed. A Collector who is a Revenue officer is not authorized to sanction a lottery, nor would the mere act of taking income-tax from the club on the profits of the lotteries constitute authorization.

The words 'not authorized' in S. 394-A, Penal Code, mean no more and no less than 'unless authorized, or not having been authorized or without authority,' and are in the nature of an exception or proviso, and under S. 105 of the Evidence Act, the burden of proof lies on the accused to show that the lottery was authorized by Government (b).

All tickets must be taken in the name of a member, etc.," was held to be a proposal within the meaning of S. 294-A, Penal Code. Emperor v. A.J. Cooke, 15 Cr. L.J. 243=23 Ind. Cas. 195=7 Bur. (2) Ss. 23, 379, 411—Theft—Stolen property, receipt of—Guilty knowledge—Wrongful gain—Wrongful loss—Intention, criminal.

The accused produced a Choukidar's birth register in a Court to prove the date of birth of a certain person and stated that the book was lent to him by the Choukidar. The Choukidar however denied this and the accused was tried and convicted of the offence under S. 411, I.P.O. *

Held, that the conviction was illegal:—assuming that the facts were as found by the Magistrate, the accused had not committed any offence. A register of the kind in question had no intrinsic value, and even if the accused person took it, it could not be supposed for a moment that he took it in order to gain the money value of the paper of which it was made, and, there was no attempt to achieve a wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss within the meaning of S. 23, I.P.O. The fact that he produced the register in a Court showed that there was no guilty knowledge on the part of the accused. Chuni v. The Crown, 57 P.L.R. 1914=19 P.W.R. 1914 (Cr.)=15 Cr. L made an offer for the mare and insisted on the offer being communicated to the owner. The accused showed L a telegram which the latter understood to have come from C refusing the offer. He thereupon raised the offer and purchased the mare. Subsequently he instituted these proceedings against the accused on the ground that deception was practised on him, but, when he was examined, stated that he would have paid the same price had he known that the mare belonged to the accused. Held that no wrongful loss was caused to L within the meaning of S. 23, Penal Code, by reason of the fact that he was induced to bid up to what he considered to be the full value of the mare.

Held also that, by merely placing before L the telegram which purported to have been received from C, the accused could not be said to have acted fraudulently. G.W. Dick v. King-Emperor, 12 A.L.J. 1258.

A tenant cutting trees standing on his own jirayati land and for which he has executed a kadapa, which gives the landlord only a claim for compensation for trees so cut, cannot be said to be acting "dishonestly" within the meaning of S. 24 of the Penal Code and is not guilty of theft, and the provisions of S. 12 of the Madras Estates Land Act do not apply. *Reddi Yerranna v. (5) Ss. 24, 420—Dishonestly obtaining lottery prize—Wrongful gain—Wrongful loss—Crim. Pro. Code, Ss. 517, 545—Compensation—Refund—Revision.

A person, who, by falsely pretending to be the winner of a lottery prize, dishonestly induces the lottery officials to pay the prize to him does not cause "wrongful loss" to the rightful winner of the prize but causes a "wrongful gain" to himself by obtaining by false pretence what he is "not legally entitled" to and, therefore, he acts "dishonestly" within the meaning of S. 24, Penal Code. *

Where a complainant cannot recover substantial compensation in a Civil Court, compensation cannot be awarded to him under cl.(b) of S. 545, Crim. Pro. Code, but a sum may be awarded to him under cl. (a) of the section to defray the expenses of the prosecution.

The Chief Court, in the exercise of its revisional power, ordered, under S. 517, Crim. Pro. Code, the appellant, who had received money by false pretence from the lottery officials, to refund the money to the lottery officials, and directed the Magistrate to recover it in the

- (6) Ss. 24, 464, 466, 477-A—Essentials of offences under—Patwari making unauthorized entries in Revenue Registers—Offence—Intention.

The accused, a Patwari, was charged with having made unauthorized entries in the Khatamni partial book and Jamabandi in regard to the status of certain donees of land. The effect of those entries was to show the donees as malkan qabza, i.e., as proprietors of their holding merely without any share in the shamilat, whereas previously they were shown as full proprietors. The deed under which those persons acquired their rights made no mention of the shamilat and it was a moot point of law as to whether a deed of gift not specifying the shamilat rights as going with the area gifted does or does not carry with it the rights in the shamilat. It was also found that the accused acted bona fide though in disregard of the Revenue Rules.

Held, that it was not shown that the making of the entries was likely to deprive the donees of any right to which they were entitled or that he made the entries with intent to defraud or dishonestly within the meaning of S. 24, I.P.C. In other words there was no finding that he made a false document as defined in S. 464 or that he fraudulently altered any book or register within the meaning of S. 477-A, and that his conviction under those sections cannot be sustained. *Muhammad Sirdar v. In a previous trial two persons were tried for having conspired with one B (against whom a warrant had been issued but who was not before the Court) and two others named and others unknown, to kill one M or to cause grievous hurt to him. They were acquitted by the unanimous verdict of the jury whereupon the warrant against B was recalled, but subsequently the District Magistrate issued a fresh warrant against B and proceedings were started against him, under S. 307 read with S. 34, I.P.C.

Held, (on an application by B for the quashing of the proceedings)—That the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to take cognizance of the case and issue fresh warrant without further materials or enquiry, if he was of opinion that the evidence brought the accused within the purview of the law.

As to the contention that the case for the prosecution in the previous trial being one of conspiracy between the accused then before the Court and the present accused and that charge having failed, the present proceeding could not go on:

Held, agreeing with the view expressed in Romesh Chandra Banerjee v. The Emperor (18 C.W.N. 498)—That the repugnancy in the verdict of a jury in India is not in itself sufficient to justify the quashing of a conviction; and the technicalities which are borrowed from the English Law, and founded on ideas as to the sacred character of a verdict by a jury whose findings of fact are unknown, cannot be imported so as to give to verdicts of juries in India a character which by the express provisions of law does not attach to them.

Where two of the accused at the previous trial were acquitted by the Judge agreeing with the jury on account of the evidence of their identification being weak.

Held—that this did not affect the evidence of identification of the present accused even by the same witnesses, as the question of his identification was not before the jury at that trial.

That, in the circumstances, where the Judge had expressed a clear opinion and the jury had expressed none, the High Court ought not to interfere with the ordinary course of justice by quashing the proceedings against the present accused.

In this country the opinion of the Judge is to be weighed by the High Court in exactly the same balance as the opinion of the jury.

Section 34, I.P.C., does not involve abetment and therefore does not imply any conspiracy and does not require proof that any particular accused was responsible for the commission of the actual offence and the present proceeding under S. 307-34, I.P.C., could not be quashed on the ground that there was no suggestion at any stage of the previous trial that any particular accused was responsible for the offence. *Manindra Chandra Ghose v. (18) Ss. 79, 40—Applicability to offence under Forest Act—Accused's belief that he was justified in his act—Effect.

The principle of S. 79, Penal Code, should not be applied to an offence created by the Forest Act for the protection of the Government revenue and of property belonging to Government. S. 79 itself cannot apply, as the definition of offence in S. 40, I.P.C., covers only a 'thing made punishable' by the Penal Code, except when the word is used in certain section which do not include S. 79.

Per Wallis, J.—When some people, though in peaceful and lawful possession of property, go armed and, on their opponents appearing, stab some of them to death and inflict injuries on others, they are required to discharge the onus which the law throws on them of showing that they acted in self-defence and inflicted no more injuries than were necessary for this purpose.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Where the right of private defence of property exists, it is difficult to distinguish between the right of private defence of property and the right of private defence of the person in cases where the prosecution party comes upon the land in possession of the accused not only to deprive them of their property but also to violently attack them if they tried to defend their possession by force.

Where, therefore, the prosecution partly comes with the war cries of "Kobali" and 'Konu' and armed with sticks capable of causing grievous hurts, the right of private defence of person arises almost simultaneously with the right of private defence of property, and the accused party is justified even in causing the death of the members of their opponents' party till the latter party gives up the fight.

Per Ayling, J.—Where the accused were in possession of the disputed land and the affray originated from the prosecution party trespassing upon it and obstructing the accused party from ploughing it, the accused's party is entitled to defend their land and their bodies against any violence used by the prosecution party, but it extends to the right of causing death only when exercised against such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death or grievous hurt will otherwise be the result. In re Ponthala Narai Reddi, 15 Cr. Some country carts containing the camp-luggage of a Deputy Commissioner were on their way in charge of an orderly, a constable and some chaprasis. While on their way one of the carts struck in a rut and the orderly and the chaprasi took hold of the bullocks of the accused against their will, yoked them to the cart and dragged it out of the rut. The accused then forcibly unyoked their bullocks and took them away. They were convicted and sentenced under S. 147, Penal Code.

Held, that the orderly and his companions could not be regarded under S. 99, Penal Code, as public servants, acting in good faith under the colour of their office, and the accused were justified in their action by the right of private defence.

Held, also, that the act of the orderly and his companions technically amounted to theft under S. 378, Penal Code, and the right of private defence of the accused continued under S. 105, Penal Code, till the recovery of the bullocks and did not cease with the yoking of the bullocks to the cart (a).

Where the opposite party erected some huts stealthily at night, on a plot of land of which the petitioners were in peaceful possession, and it was alleged that the opposite party were in possession of the land for about 14 hours, and the petitioners, at break of day, on coming to know of this, took the earliest opportunity to exercise their own right of private defence, and came to the spot armed to turn out the opposite party who were found by them still engaged in erecting more huts, and there was a free fight between the parties, and the petitioners did not inflict more hurt than was necessary for defending themselves.

Held, that the petitioners were not guilty of rioting, and that, in the circumstances of the case, the petitioners had no time to have recourse to the public authorities, and they were entitled to their right of private defence. *Chandulla Sheikh v. Held that, whatever mistake there might be in the procedure of the Munsif in giving the direction in the writ, the petitioner had no right of private defence under S. 99, I.P.C., against the peon who was a public servant acting under colour of his office and in good faith. *Preo Lal Mukerjee v. The Penal Code does not give any right of private defence of property in regard to which an offence under Ss. 403 or 411, I.P.O., has been committed (a).

In this case 26 persons were convicted under S. 304, Part II, I.P.O., read with S. 149, of culpable homicide. A and B were the only 2 persons among them who actually struck the deceased. Held, under the circumstances, that all the 26 persons constituted an unlawful assembly within the meaning of S. 141, I.P.O., but that all of them could not be convicted of culpable homicide under S. 304, I.P.O., as it could not be said that that offence was committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly, nor was it such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.

Held also that all of them were guilty of rioting.

As regards A and B, it was proved that they attacked the deceased, but that the deceased received only one blow on the head, and there was no evidence to show which of these 2 persons gave him that blow. Held that neither of these 2 persons could be convicted of an offence under S. 304, I.P.O. (b), but that, when they attacked him, they intended or knew that they were likely to cause him grievous hurt and they were therefore guilty of an offence under S. 325, I.P.O., and the other 24 persons were guilty of an offence under S. 147, I.P.O. *Agra v. (81) Ss. 114, 302—Abetment—S. 114, if applied when abettor present—Duty of prosecution to call all available eye witnesses—Purpose of criminal trial—Duty of Public Prosecutor.

One R was charged with having committed murder of one B by being present and abetting one M in striking and thereby killing him. The allegation was that R gave orders to M to strike B who was thereupon hit on the head with a lathi. R was convicted under S. 302, read with S. 114, I.P.C. In the course of the trial, two persons who were admittedly eye-witnesses to the occurrence were not called as witnesses by the prosecution either in the committing Magistrate's or the Sessions Courts.

Held, that, the conviction of R for murder under S. 302/114, I.P.C., could not stand for the simple reason that the only abetment charged necessarily required the presence of R, while to come within S. 114 the abetment must be complete apart from the presence of the abettor.

That the purpose of a criminal trial is not to support, at all costs, a theory, but to investigate the offence and to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused, and the duty of a Public Prosecutor is to represent not the Police but the Crown and this duty should be discharged by him fairly and fearlessly and with a full sense of the responsibility that attaches to his position. The guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined by the tribunals appointed by law and not according to the tastes of any one else.

That it was undoubtedly the duty of the Public Prosecutor in a capital case to have placed before the Trial Court the testimony of all available eye-witnesses (a).

In consequence of a dispute between two landlords, the disputed property was attached under S. 146, Crim. Pro. Code, in a proceeding under S. 145, Crim. Pro. Code, and a Receiver appointed, but the Magistrate appointing the Receiver omitted to give any direction as regards the management of the property. There was a dispute between the tenants on both sides as regards the grazing rights over the property, but it appeared that the Zemindar of the petitioners gave them the grazing rights over the land and they objected to the tenant of the rival Zemindar ploughing up a portion of the land over which they alleged they had grazing rights, under colour of a lease from the Receiver. The petitioners were convicted under Ss. 143, 447, I.P.C.

Held—that the petitioners could not be convicted of criminal trespass when they were asserting a right which had never been declared against them, which they bona fide believed they had, and for the same reason they could not be said to have formed an unlawful assembly, because they went and protested against the land being ploughed up. *Reajaddin Molla v. Penal Code—(Continued).

The petitioners were convicted by the Magistrate, under S. 147, I.P.C. On appeal the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and sentence under S. 147, I.P.C., and convicted the petitioners under S. 323, I. P. C. No charge had been framed against the petitioners under S. 323, I.P.C.

Held, that S. 237 has to be read with S. 236. If the facts of the case do not fall under S. 236, S. 237 has got no application. There was no charge framed against the petitioners for an offence of causing hurt and they had therefore no opportunity to defend themselves on this charge and the conviction and sentence must be set aside. *Genu Manjhi v. The petitioners were charged under S. 147, I. P. C., the common object of the alleged unlawful assembly as stated in the charge being to assault the Police. No charge under S. 353 or S. 323 was framed. The Magistrate convicted the petitioners under S. 147, I. P. C. The Sessions Judge in appeal acquitted the petitioners of the offence of rioting and convicted them under S. 353, I.P.C., in respect of the assault committed upon the several Police officers. The Sessions Judge did not find which Police officer was assaulted by which petitioner :

Held, that the Sessions Judge was wrong in convicting the petitioners of an offence under S. 353, I.P.C., the petitioners not having been called upon to answer any such charge.

That, in the view taken by the Sessions Judge of the case, a finding as to which Police officer was assaulted by which petitioner was essential. Har Naran Sardar v. The Emperor, 18 C.W.N. 1274.

Where the accused were charged only under S. 147, Penal Code, and the common object stated in the charge was to take forcible possession of the complainant's land and to assault him, and they were convicted only under S. 447, Penal Code.

Held, that the common object did not make out a case of trespass, as the criminal intention necessary to be made out in the case of a trespass was not established, and in the absence of any charge and complaint under S. 447, Penal Code, the conviction of the accused under S. 447 was illegal.

If the common object constituting the unlawful assembly had been to commit criminal trespass, a conviction under S. 447 without a charge under that section might be legally valid under S. 238 (2) of the Crim. Pro. Code, for in that case the offence of trespass would have been considered as a minor offence in comparison with that of rioting. Ariff Munchi v. Emperor, 15 Cr. L.J. 188=22 Ind. M struck B (one of the complainant's party) on the head and hereby caused his death. M was convicted under S. 304 (2) and W and N were convicted of offence under S. 314 (2) read with S. 149, I.P.C. There was no finding that the common object of M, W and N was any of those specified in S. 141, I.P.C. On the contrary it was found that the members of the deceased's party were the aggressors, their object being to forcibly dispossess the other party of certain land.

Held, under the circumstances, that M and his party were perfectly justified in exercising their right of private defence, and if M exceeded

The appellant was an insolvent against whom proceedings were pending before a District Judge. Held, that the District Judge was a public servant before whom false information was given and he was competent to grant sanction to prosecute under S. 182, Penal Code.

The prosecution must in a criminal case exclude all explanations of the facts which is reasonably consistent with the innocence of the accused.

There can be no fabrication of false evidence within the meaning of S. 192, I.P.C., if the evidence is not admissible in itself (a).

had not divorced B. The writer accordingly desired the Moharir not to take action upon his report of the marriage of B and A. Held, that such a report was not a public document within the meaning of S. 74, Evidence Act, and under S. 65, no secondary evidence of its contents could be given. Held also that the production of the copy of that letter was an attempt to use the original (b).

The word 'corruptly' is not intended to connote a motive necessarily connected with the passing of money as an inducement to the person impugned to use or attempt to use the fabricated evidence. (61) Ss. 193, 463—Endorsement on a mortgage-deed showing payment—Intention to fabricate false evidence and defraud the mortgagee—Cheating and forgery.

The accused transferred the whole of his property in favour of his wife, but before registering the sale-deed mortgaged the property to F. The sale deed was, however, registered after the mortgagee had made all necessary enquiry at the Registration Office. After the registration of the sale-deed, the mortgage-deed also registered. The accused was charged for cheating the mortgagee. It appeared during the trial that the mortgage-deed filed by the complainant bore on it an endorsement of the return of the consideration, although there was no such endorsement on it when it was filed in Court. The accused was thereupon further charged for fabricating false evidence and forgery.

Held, that the accused was guilty of fabricating false evidence and cheating, as the accused must be presumed to know the probable result of his action and it obviously could not have been absent from his mind when he forged the endorsement that he was thereby attempting to defraud the mortgagee of his money. Abdul Rashid Khan v. Held, that, where a decree-holder draws the executing Court's attention to the final decree both in the heading and at the foot of his application for execution, but misdescribes its precise terms, he cannot be made criminally liable under S. 210, I.P.C., for such a mistake, particularly where the executing Court fails in its duty of verifying the amount due to him in terms of the decree sought to be executed. Qaya Ram v. (63) S. 211—Laying false information before police—Duty of prosecution—Onus of proof—Elements necessary to be proved—Failure of defence to examine witness, effect of.

Where the petitioner was convicted under S. 211 of the Penal Code of having laid a false information of theft before the police, and the petitioner's case was that he had heard from his wife that the persons named in the information had disappeared and the properties named therein were missing and his information was based on this statement of the wife, and prosecution did not prove that there was no such statement by the wife who was not examined as a witness for the prosecution, nor did the petitioner examine her as a witness on his side:

Held, that the duty of the prosecution in a case under S. 211, I.P.C., is to prove by satisfactory evidence that the charge was wilfully false to the knowledge of the maker of the charge.

That it is for the prosecution to establish their case, and if they fail to supply that proof which is required to secure the conviction of the accused, the failure on the part of the latter to examine any particular witness or witnesses will not imply the guilt of the accused.

That the case against the petitioner being that no theft took place, the obligation of proving it rested on the prosecution.

In the present case the prosecution not having established that there was, as a matter of fact, no theft and the petitioner knew that there was no theft, the High Court set aside the conviction and sentence under S. 211, I. Pro. Code.*

S. 215, I.P.C., is not intended to apply to the actual thief, but to some one, who, being in league with the thief, receives some gratification on account of helping the owner to recover the stolen property without at the same time using all the means in his power to cause the thief to be apprehended and convicted (a).

Where the principle of the above ruling in 23 A. 81 would apply where the receiver of the gratification was also in dishonest possession of the stolen property under S. 411, I.P.C., but not the actual thief, is open to argument. But where the accused is convicted in the alternative of an offence under S. 379 or S. 411, I.P.C., the spirit of the ruling in 23 A. 81 should apply and his conviction under S. 215 should be set aside.

Where the evidence of close association between the accused persons justifies the inference that the theft and retention of the stolen properties and their restoration on payment were all part of one plot and one transaction within the meaning of S. 239, Crim. Pro. Code, the trial of the accused for charges under Ss. 215, 379 and 411, I.P.C., is not bad for misjoinder. Nalli Veera Thevan, In re, 26 M.L.J. 598=15 Cr. E. J. 471=24 Ind. Cas. 351.

On a reference under S. 307, Crim. Pro. Code, the High Court has all the powers of an appellate Court and should form its own opinion after considering the entire evidence and giving weight to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and the Jury (a).

If a person strikes another on a vital part with a cutting instrument, the striker should be presumed to have intended to cause bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death; but it does not follow that the striker must be found guilty of murder: his act may fall under one of the exceptions to S. 300, Penal Code (b).

The parts of Ss. 299, 300, 304, Penal Code, dealing with "knowledge" are not applicable to a case in which bodily injury intended for a particular individual has resulted in death. Where a death has been caused by intentional bodily injury inflicted by the accused on the deceased, the question of what knowledge must be attributed to the accused comes in only "as a means of arriving at his intention when he committed the act, and for that purpose, and not for the purpose of deciding whether the case falls within the last part of S. 304, must the question be considered" (c). *Emperor v. The cases in which the fourth clause of S. 300, Penal Code, has any application, are extremely rare, and though it is not easy, and perhaps not desirable, to attempt to define with any strictness the kind of cases in which that clause comes in, still there is one very broad distinction between it and the first three clauses—in the latter the important thing is an intention to kill or to hurt, while the fourth clause says nothing about intention. *Nawab v. During the course of a search by an officer in charge of a police station at a place beyond the limits of his station, a riot took place in which the appellants took part. The policemen were beaten, the arrested person escaped and the attached property disappeared. It was found that the common object of the riot was to prevent search being made, and not to take back the property which had been attached or to release the prisoners.

Held that, in the absence of a written order of the officer in charge of the police station within the limits of which the search took place, the search was illegal (vide Ss. 165, 166, Crim. Pro. Code).

The accused could not be found guilty of offence under S. 332, I.P.O., because the object of the riot was to resist the search, and in making the searches, the police were not acting in discharge of their duty (a).

Where an orphan minor Hindu girl, who was entrusted to the care of her maternal uncles and had obtained mutation in her favour of certain property which was claimed by her paternal uncles after having lived for 18 months with the maternal uncles, was forcibly carried away by her paternal uncles and was caused to be married:

Held, that the paternal uncles were rightly convicted under S. 361 of the Penal Code

Held, also, that, though, under the Hindu Law, paternal uncles are preferential guardians to maternal uncles, where paternal uncles claim an interest in the minor's property adverse to her, they are not entitled to the custody of the minor's person under the provisions of Act VIII of 1890.

Held, that the order for custody which was made, not being intended to be an ad interim order which it is open to a District Judge to make at any time while a case is pending, was an order nisi without legal effect until confirmed by the High Court, and the petitioner committed no offence under S. 363, I.P.C., in removing the boy from the father's custody. Mrs. Anne Elizabeth Barthwick v. The petitioner was the lessee of a certain temple from some of the shebais and was the general manager of all of them. It appeared that on a certain day in the year pilgrims and others in large number visited this temple. Close by the gate leading from an outer courtyard into the inner temple there was a well which was surrounded by a masonry platform $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2 feet high and the ring or parapet of the well stood again about 1 foot above the platform. Early at night on the day of the congregation of pilgrims an accident having occurred, the petitioner at the instance of the Police-officer in charge had a light placed on or near the one foot parapet, but at a later hour the petitioner had the light removed, and thereafter between 1 and 2 A.M. while the people were again entering into the inner temple, a boy who had no previous knowledge of the well and in the darkness could not see it fell into it:

*Woodroffe, J. (Beachcroft, J., concurring).—*An accused person is entitled to put forward any defence open to him, technical or otherwise, and to have the Court's judgment on it.

It is no affair of the defence to supplement or explain deficiencies or suspicious circumstances appearing on the face of the prosecution evidence. It is open to it to say that the prosecution has not proved its case and to refer to such deficiencies in proof of the submission, or to other circumstances appearing on the face of the prosecution evidence which show that it is so open to suspicion that it would be unsafe to accept it. If, however, the defence puts forward a case of fraud or if the evidence for the prosecution is not ambiguous, the defence should give notice of the point they intend to take so that the prosecution may have an opportunity of explanation. If any charge of fraudulent practice was going to be based on a circumstance which, standing by itself, was not necessarily suspicious, the defence should have cross-examined witnesses on the point.

Where the Sessions' Judge, in taking the verdict of the assessors, put a large number of questions to them and then recorded their opinion on those questions :

Held, that the Judge should have allowed the assessors in the first instance to have given their opinion in their own language and way, and then, when they had completed what they had to say, it would have been open to him to put to them such questions as were necessary to elucidate or supplement their opinion.

Where the charge against the accused was of two separate offences laid in an alternative form, viz., one under S. 399 and another under S. 402, I.P.C., but it appeared that the charges were treated not alternatively but as additional, and the Sessions Judge acquitted them of the charge under S. 399, I.P.C., and convicted them of the charge under S. 402, I.P.C.

Held, that the acquittal under S. 399, I.P.C., did not involve an acquittal under S. 402, Civ. Pro. Code, and the conviction under the latter section was not wrong and the judgment of the Sessions Judge was not vitiated by repugnancy.

That, even if there was any repugnancy, it was open to the High Court to alter the finding of acquittal under S. 399, I.P.C., into one of conviction maintaining the sentence.

That the offences of commission of dacoity, preparation for it and assemblage for the same purpose, have this in common, that they presume an intention or agreement to commit dacoity by five or more persons. A mere assembly without further preparation is not a preparation within the meaning of S. 399, I.P.C., for if it were, S. 402, I.P.C., would be redundant. S. 402, I.P.C., applies to the case of mere assembling without proof of other preparation. A person can thus be not guilty of dacoity yet guilty of preparation and not guilty of preparation yet guilty of an assembly.

*Beachcroft, J.—*The tendency of modern legislation in general and of the Crim. Pro. Code in particular is to avoid technicalities, and there is no provision in that Code which would justify interference with a conviction on the ground of repugnancy in the record.

*Woodroffe, J. (Beachcroft, J., concurring).—*Where the Police searched a hut on suspicion and incriminating evidence was found, and after the search was over the Additional District Magistrate came to the spot and saw what had been found, and a search-list was prepared which the Additional District Magistrate signed, and the accused were subsequently placed before another Magistrate who held an enquiry and committed the accused to the Court of Sessions for trial :

Held, that the fact that the Additional District Magistrate did not take cognizance of the case at once did not render the subsequent proceedings before another Magistrate bad, nor could such subsequent proceedings be held to be prejudicial to the accused.

That it was not the duty of the Additional District Magistrate to take cognizance of the case on the basis of what he found at the spot.

Where the accused persons, who were inside the room searched by the Police, were, after the discovery in their presence of a gun and after search of their persons, sent out of the room and the search was continued :

Held that the Code of Criminal Procedure permits the occupants of the place searched to be present at the search, and there was therefore a violation of this rule which is one not merely of technicality but of substance, in that it is enacted to guarantee the reality of the search and the discoveries made thereat.

That this was an irregularity which the accused were entitled to ask the Court to consider and which made it incumbent on the Court to scrutinise the evidence carefully.

Beachcroft, J.—The spirit of S. 103, sub-S. 3, is that the occupant of the place searched shall be present and it means that he is to be given the option of being present and not that he is to be allowed to be present only if he demands it. But the right of presence given by S. 103 applies only to the occupant of the place searched or some person in his behalf, and the words "occupant of the place" are not intended to cover every person who may happen to be in the place at the time, but they refer back to the person mentioned in S. 102, i. e., a person residing in or being in charge of the place.

Woodroffe, J.—Where, after searching a hut, arms were found under a machan inside the hut and in the ceiling of the hut :

Held that knowledge of the existence of the arms would not without other evidence be imputable to any other than the lessee of the hut, nor would the presumption operate even against him if it were shown that the circumstances were such that arms might be in his place without his knowing it.

Beachcroft, J.—Where an article is found in a man's house, the ordinary presumption is that he as owner of the house is aware of its contents. This is subject to the qualification that no other person has access to that particular place. It follows that, if the house is in the occupation of more persons than one having access to the particular place, there is no presumption against them individually that they have put the article where it is found; though, if it be proved that an article has been for a considerable period of time in a place to which all have frequent access, it might reasonably be presumed that all were aware of its existence.

S. 47, Crim. Pro. Code, is not intended to restrict the powers of the Police to enter the place to be searched; on the contrary it is a provision compelling householders to afford the Police facilities in carrying out their duties, and S. 48 provides that if difficulties are placed in the way of a Police officer, he may use force

(119) Ss. 401, 418—Essentials of offence under S. 401—Position of the Agoo or receiver of the stolen property.

To sustain a conviction on a charge under S. 401, Penal Code, it is necessary to prove—

- (1) That there existed a gang of persons ;
- (2) That those persons were associated for the purpose of committing theft or robbery ;
- (3) That theft or robbery was to be committed habitually ;
- (4) That the accused was a member of such gang.

The habitual commission of theft necessarily implies an aggregate of acts by some members of the gang or by all of them, but it is not necessary that each individual member of the gang should be proved to have habitually committed theft in company with the other members. Once it is established that a gang, however small in number, was formed for the purpose of habitually committing theft, all persons who thereafter joined that gang in one or more cases of theft come within the purview of S. 401 (a).

The fact of association and that of the habitual commission of theft have however to be proved by evidence which would be admissible according to the Evidence Act, and therefore the fact that an accused person is of bad character or is reputed to be a thief or an habitual thief is no evidence against him for the purpose of a charge under S. 401, I.P.C. (b).

The Agoo who is the habitual receiver of the stolen property, though not himself the thief, is a principal member of the gang of thieves in whose interests he receives the stolen property, and his case therefore falls within the purview of S. 401, I.P.C. The position of the Agoo in the Karnal district, discussed. Beja v. Emperor, 19 P.R. 1914 (Cr.).

(122) S. 405—Criminal breach of trust—Money entrusted to broker—Broker to bear all loss—Ownership—Trustee—Agent.

In pursuance of the following contract a Company advanced Rs. 4,500 to the petitioner who acted as the Company's broker.

"Whereas the broker.....has requested the Company to entrust to him with advances of money.....and.....acknowledges that he will receive all such advances.....and hold the same in trust for the company.....it is.....agreed that

(1) the broker is not the agent of the Company;

(2) the broker shall employ the money of the Company in and about the purchase and transport of paddy to the Company's mill.....;

(3) the property in the money and paddy purchased therewith shall be and remain in the Company;

(4) the broker shall.....upon arrival of the paddy.....tender the same to the company;

(5) the Company shall take delivery of the paddy and.....either pay or credit the broker with price of the same at the current market rate;

(7) the broker shall be responsible for the payment of the money or the supply of paddy to the value thereof, if either the money or the paddy shall be lost by any means, including the act of God, thieves or other causes over which the broker has no control; the broker shall indemnify the Company against all loss:

Held, (by the majority, Hartnoll, Offg. C. J., dissenting) that the money was not "entrusted" to the broker within the meaning of S. 405, Penal Code.

Per Twomey, J.—A man cannot commit criminal misappropriation of his own property.

The terms of cls. (5) and (7) of the agreement are incompatible with the view that the broker was employed as an agent at all. An agent would be required to exercise reasonable diligence but would not be responsible, as he is made responsible in this agreement, for loss in any event.

Per Ormond, J.—The question whether A entrusted property to B is one which depends upon the actual facts of the case and not merely upon the legal terms employed by the parties. If the real nature of the transaction is a loan, the fact that the parties in writing call it a trust, or agree that, for the purposes of the Penal Code, the property in the money shall be deemed to remain in the original owner, or agree that the party receiving the money shall be liable for criminal breach of trust if he applies the money to a purpose other than that agreed upon, would not bring the transaction within the scope of S. 405, Penal Code. The Penal Code cannot be altered by agreement of parties so as to make S. 405 applicable to a transaction which is in its real nature a loan. If A receives money from B for certain specified purposes, the money is not entrusted to A within the meaning of S. 405, Penal Code, if A is liable to return the money in any event. Therefore, the trust, if any, in this case is merely a technical or colorable trust.

Per Parlett, J.—The fact that the Company can under no circumstances bear the loss of the money implies that they are not the owners of it.

Per Robinson, J.—The agreement merely shows that the Company employs the services of the broker and gives him an advance but it declines to make him its servant or agent. This being so, the ownership in the money is transferred to the broker and no entrustment is created, that is to say, the agreement in question evidences a loan accompanied by a promise to use the money in a particular way.

Per Hartnoll, Offg. C. J.—Irrespective of whether a man is an agent or not he may be a trustee.

The agreement evidences more than a loan with a condition attached and more than an advance with an undertaking to use it in the purchase of paddy. The money was advanced for a specified purpose and in consequence of confidence reposed in the broker by the Company. The mere fact that the broker has contracted to bear any loss that may be incurred does not make him the less a trustee. Nga Po Ywet v. Emperor, 15 Cr.L.J. 452=24 Ind. Cas. 332=7 Bur. (123) S. 405—Criminal breach of trust—Offence—Jurisdiction—Intention—Consequences not essential—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 179.

The offence of criminal breach of trust is completed by the misappropriation or conversion of the property dishonestly, i.e., with the intention of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss. It is only the intention that is essential. The wrongful gain or loss is only the consequence and is no essential part of the offence, and a person is not accused of the offence by reason of it. The offence would be committed where the dishonest use or disposal took place, not where the contract was made or should have been performed (a).

S. 405, Penal Code, does not cover misappropriation by a person of the sale proceeds of property, i.e., furniture entrusted to him. But assuming that the word, 'property' in S. 405, I.P.C., includes furniture or the value thereof, even then it could not be said that the accused had disposed of the furniture or the value thereof, namely, the sale proceeds, in violation of his contract, dishonestly, unless it were shown that he had the intention of dishonestly appropriating the sale proceeds at the time of the sale.

An auctioneer cannot be said to be liable for criminal breach of trust if he does not punctually carry out every term in the agreement, e.g., if he did not hold the sale on the agreed date, or if there was delay in payment.

Where the charge against the accused is to the effect that he committed breach of trust in respect of some property which he took from the complainant and was therefore guilty of an offence punishable under S. 406, but at the trial he was convicted of embezzling not the property but the amount obtained by dealing with the property, held, the conviction was bad and must be set aside (a). *Balthasar v. Where the creditors of a person who had made an application to declare him an insolvent suspected that the complainant was carrying away the properties given by the insolvent to him and made a charge of theft or of having stolen property against the complainant to the police,

Held, that, because there was no adjudication of insolvency and therefore no vesting of the estate in the Receiver, the property was not stolen property, as it had not been transferred by theft or by robbery and could not be said to have been transferred either by criminal misappropriation or by breach of trust within the meaning of S. 410, I.P.C.

Held, that where the property is alleged to have been stolen some three years before it is found in possession of a person, very clear evidence is required to show that he must have known it to be stolen.

The Sessions Judge found that the mare was not proved to be stolen property, but that it was come by in some doubtful fashion and that the muharrir was deceived.

Held that the absence of proof that the mare had actually been stolen is immaterial, and that, as the accused did deceive the muharrir and induce him to write a false certificate, they were guilty of cheating by personation (a).

The deliberate opinion of an expert that two thumb-marks exactly agree is on quite a different plan from an opinion as to handwriting. It is a reasonable deduction from experience that no two human beings have the same thumb-markings, and, if no differences whatever can, after the most careful examination, be found between one thumb mark and another, the conclusion is irresistible that the same thumb made both (b). *Ahmada and Lalu v. (140) S. 420, Cheating—Evidence—Previous and subsequent conduct of accused—Civil law principles when applicable to criminal cases—False pretence—Promise to do something in future—Evidence Act, Ss. 14, 15.

In a case of cheating, it is open to the prosecution to show that the acts charged against the accused were parts of a series of similar acts committed by him, or in which he was concerned, at or about the time in question. Evidence of such other acts, whether previous or subsequent to the frauds charged against the accused, is relevant for the purpose of showing whether or not the intention of the accused was honest or fraudulent. Evidence merely to prove that the accused person's character is such that he is likely to commit the act with which he is charged is not admissible.

A principle of Civil law can equally apply to a criminal case, provided it is not in any way against any of the principles of Criminal law. Per se a promise to do something in the future may not amount to a false pretence or to cheating, but, it may, at the same time, in certain cases, involve a false pretence that the promisor has the power to do that thing for which false pretence the promisor may be indictable. *Girdhari Lal v. (142) Ss. 420, 511—Cheating—Attempt to—Definition of "Attempt" — Spurious trinkets — False representation — Untrue statement to support.

A manufactured spurious trinkets, and took them to N saying that they were of gold, and that they were stolen property (which was also not true) and that he (A) does not like to sell them in bazaar and asked him to buy. N did not buy, but A was arrested.

It was argued that no attempt to cheat had been proved, because more had to be done by A, such as weighing the articles, &c., before wrongful loss would fall upon N.

Held, that the act of A amounted to an attempt of cheating punishable under Ss. 420, 511, I.P.C.

Held, also that, in cases of cheating, the essential thing is the deception of the victim, the dishonest causing to arise in the victim's mind of an impression, the reverse of truth, calculated to induce him to give up something which he would not otherwise give up, or to do or refrain from doing something which he would not otherwise do or refrain from doing, or to enter into a bargain which he would not enter into, if he knew the real facts.

"Attempt" is an act with intent to commit a crime and forming part of a series of acts which would constitute its actual commission if not interrupted.

Held, further that the definitions in such matters are dangerous things, and the only safe way of deciding in any particular case whether an "attempt" to commit a crime has been made or not, is to consider the facts of that particular case, and to decide in accordance with the dictates of common sense. *Abdullah v. (150) Ss. 457, 442, 379, 511—Entering cattle enclosure—Cattle enclosure whether a 'building'—Attempt to commit theft—'Attempt' defined.

Accused was charged with having committed lurking house trespass by night by entering into the cattle enclosure of the complainant with the intent to commit theft of his cattle and he was convicted for the same under S. 457, I.P.O. The cattle enclosure in question was not attached to any house, but was merely a piece of ground enclosed on one side by a wall and on the other three sides by a thorn hedge. Held that the mere surrounding of an open space of ground by a wall or fence of any kind cannot be deemed to convert the open space into a building, and that therefore the conviction under S. 457 cannot be maintained (a).

Held, however, that the accused was guilty of an attempt to commit theft under Ss. 379 and 511, I.P.O., because he really did make his way into the enclosure by making a hole in the hedge and his intention was to commit theft.

An 'attempt' to commit a crime is an act done with intent to commit that crime, and forming part of a series of acts which would constitute its actual commission if it were not interrupted. The point at which such a series of acts begins cannot be defined, but depends upon the circumstances of each particular case. Kohmi v. Crown, 24 P. R. 1914 (Cr.).

Held, that the act constituted a user within the meaning of S. 471, I.P.O., and the offence committed was one under that section, and in respect of that offence sanction under S. 195 or an order under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, was necessary.

That no sanction is necessary for a prosecution under S. 474, I.P.O.

That the decision of the issues in the rent suit being largely dependent on the question whether the documents in question were or were not genuine, it was expedient that the criminal proceeding should be deferred pending the final disposal of the rent suit. *Arabuddin Sarkar v. A body corporate can be lawfully prosecuted and on conviction punished for an offence under S. 482 or S. 486, Penal Code.

The word "he" in Ss. 6 and 7 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act includes "she" and "it".

Per Hartnoll, Offg. C.J.—The word "whoever" in Ss. 482 and 486, Penal Code, does not refer only to a definite individual or definite individuals and can apply to a corporate body.

Where the language of a Statute is not clear, to ascertain the real meaning, the cause or necessity of the law being made should be considered.

Every clause of a Statute should be construed with reference to the context and the other clauses of the Act so as, so far as possible, to make a consistent enactment of the whole Statute or series of Statutes relating to the subject-matter.

Under Ss. 482 and 486, Penal Code, the prosecution has not to prove the mens rea; and, as the burden of proving innocence is thrown on the accused under those sections, when once a prima facie case has been established, a Limited Company, when accused, can prove its innocence by the evidence of its agents or servants or otherwise as it thinks fit.

Per Ormond, J.—The word "whoever" with which Ss. 482 and 486 begin means the same thing as "every person who" in S. 2 (2) of the English Merchandise Marks Act and shows that the provisions of the sections apply to persons generally.

The scope of a penal section in an Act would (so far as the language is concerned) be the same whether it began with the words "every person who" or with the word "whoever," unless the word "person" is defined so as to have a more restrictive or a more extended meaning than it in fact has. Limited Companies are not excluded from the operation of Ss. 482 and 486, Penal Code, and there is nothing inherent in the nature of a Limited Company which would prevent it from proving its innocence either by showing that it acted without intent to defraud under S. 482, or under S. 486 in any of the ways prescribed in that section. *Seena M. No privilege attaches to the profession of the Press as distinguished from the members of the public. The freedom of the journalist is an ordinary part of the freedom of the subject, and to whatever lengths the subject in general may go, so also may the journalist; but, apart from statute law, his privilege is no other and no higher.

No privilege or protection attaches to the public acts of a Judge which exempts him, in regard to these, from free and adverse comment.

A, as District Magistrate, having declined to commit one M for trial on a charge of having abducted and committed rape upon a Malay girl of about 11 years of age, the appellant wrote an article in a newspaper charging A with being engaged with others in a corrupt plot to defeat justice in order to save M, with having bailed him out for a non-bailable offence and with having manoeuvred his procedure to that end. M had himself admitted that, being informed that the child was suffering from gonorrhoea, he had taken her to his house and himself had personally examined her—although there was a hospital 8 miles away. A, in declining to commit M, had further stated that in his opinion M's conduct was pure and philanthropic:

Held, that this declaration by the Magistrate with which the enquiry before him concluded, laid the whole trial open to searching and severe observations, and no blame could be attached to these. But it was not open to the appellant to make against the Magistrate charges of corruption and conspiracy, which were admitted to be untrue, and were grossly libellous, and the appellant could not justify them in a criminal proceeding for defamation, unless he was able to establish affirmatively that he believed them to be true and that on reasonable grounds, as provided in the ninth exception to S. 499, Penal Code.

That the conduct of M referred to above and of the Magistrate at the enquiry were relevant for a consideration of the question of accused's bona fides and were properly submitted to the Jury in support of the defence.

That the Judicial Committee was not prepared to say that the granting of bail to M was an improper exercise of the Magistrate's discretion, but in any case it was a difficult and delicate point of law which could not have been viewed as a substantial element weighing with any reasonable writer in justification of his belief in the truth of the libel.

That the fact that every officer, judicial or administrative, except one, had agreed with the conclusion to which the Magistrate had arrived, and that an investigation in the department of a Lieutenant-Governor of great experience had, to the appellant's knowledge, resulted in exonerating the Magistrate from blame, and the attitude of the appellant who neither defended the articles as true nor gave any assistance on the subject of what were the actual things upon which he founded his own beliefs and what steps, if any he took to investigate the truth of the charges before giving them publicity, were also matters for consideration by the jury.

A charge to a jury must be read as a whole. If there are salient propositions of law, in it these will be subjects of separate analysis, but in a protracted narrative of fact, the determination of which is ultimately left to the jury, it must needs be that the view of the Judge may not coincide with the views of others who look upon the whole proceedings in black type. It would, however, not be in accordance either with usual or with good practice to treat such cases as cases of misdirection, if, upon the general view taken, the case has been fairly left within the jury's province. In the region of fact, the Privy Council will not interfere, unless something gross amounting to a complete misdescription of the whole bearing of the evidence has occurred.

Where, in answer to a charge of defamation, the accused did not plead justification, but nevertheless the truth of the libels continued throughout the trial to be urged by way of repeated innuendo, the Judge was justified in stating his own view of the facts, in order to counteract the improper use which was being made of the procedure, provided he did not withdraw the case on facts from the jury.

When during the trial the accused was apprised from materials placed before the Court that certain serious charges against the complainant were quite without foundation, he should have at once acknowledged his mistake and should not have adhered to the libel.

The power of the Privy Council to review proceedings of a criminal nature, unless such power and authority have in any local area been parted with by Statute, is undoubted, Penal Code—(Concluded).

But there are reasons, both constitutional and administrative, which make it manifest that this power should not be lightly exercised. Before they will interfere, it must be established demonstrably that justice itself in its very foundation has been subverted, and that it is therefore a matter of grave imperial concern that by way of an appeal to the King it be restored to its rightful position in that particular part of the Empire.

The authority of Dillet's case does not justify interference by the Privy Council in a criminal case wherever there has been misdirection, leaving it uncertain whether that misdirection did or did not affect the jury's mind. That would be to convert the Judicial Committee into a Court of Criminal Review or Appeal for the Indian and Colonial Empire.

The practice of the Committee in respect of criminal trials is to this effect; it is not guided by its own doubts of the appellant's innocence or suspicion of his guilt. It will not interfere with the course of criminal law, unless there has been such an interference with the elementary rights of an accused as has placed him outside the pale of regular law, or within that pale there has been a violation of the natural principles of justice so demonstrably manifest as to convince their Lordships first, that the result arrived at was opposite to the result which their Lordships would themselves have reached, and, secondly, that the same opposite result would have been reached by the local tribunal also, if the alleged defect or misdirection had been avoided. *Chaning Arnold v. A refusal to extend the sanad to the Civil Courts could not imply that the sanad had been extended to the Criminal Courts.

It is the duty of a pleader, who appears in a Criminal Court of a District to which his sanad does not apply, to inform the Magistrate that he cannot appear as of right, and to apply for permission under S. 4 (r), Crim. Pro. Code. The better course is not to accept a fee for an engagement until that permission has been recorded. The judgment and the proceedings in a civil suit against a vakil, out of which a charge of professional misconduct is framed against him, are admissible in evidence in an enquiry into the latter charge under S. 11 of the Evidence Act, but the decision of Civil Court is not conclusive proof against him in such enquiry.

An actionable claim does not cease to be one because a suit is instituted for its enforcement.

An actionable claim should not be purchased by a pleader.

Benson, O.C.J.—A pleader holds a privileged position in connection with the administration of justice and the law imposes on him certain restrictions and disabilities by reason of the position or office which he holds, and in order to safeguard the interests of litigants and the pure administration of justice.

It is professional misconduct for a man to do that which the law expressly forbids him to do by reason of the profession which he exercises.

Sankaran Nair, J.—A vakil is bound to appear and conduct his case even if the fee or any portion thereof remains unpaid, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary or at least notice to that effect to the client in sufficient time to enable him to make other arrangements.

The purchaser of an actionable claim after suit offends against public policy more than the purchase of such a claim before suit.

It is not required by the conditions of the legal profession or the circumstances of this country that the High Court should declare that it is unprofessional for a pleader to follow any trade or business.

To grant permission to a vakil to trade under r. 27, the character of the person making the application, the nature of the trade or business, the time the pleader would have to devote to it will all be factors to be taken into account.

It is difficult to say that a pleader should not engage himself in a trade or business. A vakil is both an advocate and a solicitor, and he should not be debarred from performing those functions which a solicitor is, and a barrister may not be, entitled to discharge.

The notion that no trade, however honestly carried on, is worthy of a vakil, is a relic of the times that have passed away.

Sundara Iyer, J.—In the absence of an agreement that the fee should be previously paid, whether non-payment of a portion of the fee would absolve the pleader from his duty to appear for the client?

A pleader, who is wilfully and grossly negligent in the discharge of his duties, can be punished for his misconduct, in the exercise of the Court's disciplinary powers.

Where a pleader was guilty not merely of a mere omission to do his duty but also repudiated the agreement he entered into with his client and did so deliberately and without justification, he is guilty of nothing less than fraudulent conduct.

Gross negligence of a vakil or any conduct which interfered with the responsible, orderly and pure conduct of proceedings in Court, would be punishable under the disciplinary jurisdiction of the Court.

A purchase of an actionable claim by a pleader is unprofessional conduct. The onus lies on the pleader to prove that it does not amount to gross misconduct.

A pleader, who belongs to a trading family, should not be regarded as trading, because other members carry on a trade, the benefit of which goes also to the pleader. But if all the members of a joint family enter into a partnership and carry on a family trade, all of them must be regarded as carrying on the trade.

A pleader cannot be held to be not guilty, of misconduct, if he is engaged in trade or other business without the permission of the Court, if his doing so is inconsistent with the profession of a pleader.

A pleader ought not to be engaged in trade, because it might prevent him from devoting that attention to the work as a pleader which his duty to his public and to the Court would require that he should, and because he should not be permitted to engage himself in a pursuit which is inconsistent with his status as a member of a learned and honourable profession. *Muni Reddi v. Sentence—(Continued).

instructions which would enable him to put before the Court cogent reasons why there should be an enhancement of the sentence. Emperor v. Shamji Ramachandra Gujar, 16 Bom. L.R. 202=15 Cr. L.J. 365=23 Ind. Cas. 733=2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 192.

HEATON and SHAH, JJ.

(2) Practice—Sentence—Deterrent sentence.

In cases where it is desired by the authorities that an example should be made or that a specially deterrent sentence should be imposed, it is their duty to bring that desire to the notice of the trying Court and to inform the trying Court of the reasons which they put forward in support of the suggestion. Emperor v. Ragha Jaga, 16 Bom. L.R. 200=15 Cr. L.J. 362=23 Ind. Cas. 730=2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 190.

HEATON and SHAH, JJ.

(3) Sentence—Enhancement—Practice.

It is very undesirable to trust exclusively to the powers of the High Court of correcting sentences of the lower Courts where the sentences ought to be deterrent. In a case of that kind, where the prosecuting authorities think that a sentence ought to be deterrent, they ought to put before the trying Court those circumstances on which they rely and they ought to ask the trying Court to impose a sentence which will serve the purpose that they think should be served. Emperor v. Shinvar Birsha, 16 Bom. L.R. 203=15 Cr. L.J. 367=23 Ind. Cas. 735=2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 193.

Stay of Proceedings.

- (1) Criminal proceedings—Prosecution under S. 193, I. P. C.—Statements made in a civil suit—Appeal—Stay pending disposal of civil appeal—Refusal—Not open to revision—Proper course.

Where a Magistrate refused to stay proceedings against the applicant taken under S. 193, I.P.C., pending the disposal of an appeal preferred against the decision in a civil suit during the trial of which the applicant was alleged to have made certain false statements.

Held, that the order of the Magistrate could not be set aside in revision (a).

The Judicial Commissioners were, however, of opinion that in this particular case it would be desirable that the criminal proceedings should be adjourned until the appeal has been disposed of, unless it be found that, for special reasons, such as the probability of a witness not being available at a later date, it is desirable to hasten the hearing. Mathradas Dharamdas v. The Crown, 8 S.L.R. 20 = 15 Cr.L.J. 661 = 25 Ind. Cas. 989.

Trial.

- (1) Criminal trial—Initiation of prosecution at Assistant Collector's instance—Examination of witnesses for prosecution—Recalling and re-examining them under Assistant Collector's orders—Illegality—Trial invalid—Want of jurisdiction.

Where a Magistrate, who tried a tapedar for misappropriating monies paid to him for Government assessment, recalled and re-examined, under the directions of the Assistant Collector, two witnesses who had already given evidence for the prosecution.

Held that, in so doing, the Magistrate virtually abdicated his magisterial function and became a mere delegate of the Assistant Collector who had initiated the prosecution, and that the trial was without jurisdiction, as a Magistrate cannot be both Judge and a delegate of the prosecutor. *Imperator v. Who can withdraw from prosecution—Powers of police officers—Discretion of Magistrate in giving his consent to the withdrawal—Interference in revision. See CRIM. PRO. CODE, No. 374, (1914) M.W.N. 776.

Witnesses.

- (1) Practice—Witness for prosecution—District Magistrate—Order to turn the witness into a co-accused in the trial.

In a criminal trial, two persons were examined as witnesses for the prosecution. At the end of their examination, the accused applied to the Magistrate to turn those witnesses into co-accused with them. The Magistrate declined to do so, but the District Magistrate, on appeal, ordered that a complaint should be laid against the witnesses and they should be tried jointly with the accused. The witnesses having applied to the High Court:—

Held that the order passed by the District Magistrate should be set aside as it was not warranted by any provisions of the Crim. Pro. Code.

Witnesses—(Continued).

A Magistrate trying a case should, unless there be something very unusual, be left, to try it in his own way, and should not be interfered with during the course of the trial. If it transpires in the course of the case that criminal proceedings ought to be taken against any who have given evidence, those proceedings ought ordinarily to await the conclusion of the case: and they ought to be instituted ordinarily by the order of or on application to, the Magistrate who has tried the case and who is conversant with all the circumstances. Emperor v. Umed Raja, 16 Bom.L.R. 259=2 Bom. Cr. Cas. 195=15 Cr. L.J. 428=24 Ind. Cas. 164.

Section I—Criminal.

Imperial Act.

Act IX of 1875 (Majority).

(1) S. 3—Minority when ceases—See PENAL CODE, No. 1, 37 M. 567.

Crim. Pro. Code.

(1) Ss. 4 (m), 195, 476—Proceedings in execution whether 'judicial proceedings'—Action under S. 195 or S. 476 when may be taken.

Proceedings in execution are judicial proceedings within the meaning of Crim. Pro. Code till they are finally disposed of by the Court (a).

If a Court acted on merely fanciful grounds, on grounds so empty, so obviously wrong that it could not be said to have formed a serious judicial opinion at all, then the High Court would probably interfere in revision and hold that there had been no such action as S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, contemplates. The opinion spoken of by S. 476 is a judicial opinion founded on evidence. If such an opinion has been formed, then the High Court ought not in revision to interfere merely on the ground that it disagrees with it (b).

The principle which should guide the Courts in taking action under S. 195 or S. 476 is that no sanction should be granted unless there is a reasonable probability of conviction (c). Emperor v. Shiohankarpuri, 10 N.L.R. 177.

(2) S. 164—Statement of witness taken behind the back of the accused, admissibility of.

Where the statements of certain prosecution witnesses were taken by a Tahsildar-Magistrate under S. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure behind the back of the accused and in respect of which the accused had no opportunity of cross-examining, held, that they could not be used as evidence against the prisoner. They were admissible only for the purpose of contradicting the statements made by the witnesses in Court and were not admissible for any other purpose. Puttu v. King-Emperor, 17 O.O. 363.

LINDSAY, J. C.

(3) S. 195—Sanction to prosecute for giving false evidence—Discretion of Court—Duty of Court—Prosecution when not desirable.

In this case the accused was a girl of 15 years and the perjury alleged was in her having made contradictory statements about her mother having wordy quarrels with the man who was keeping the witness.

Crim. Pro. Code—(Concluded).

Held, that the materiality of the statements was only remote as suggesting a motive for the offence, and the interests of justice did not call for a prosecution for perjury in this case.

Courts should exercise their discretion in giving sanction to prosecute for giving false evidence. They should not merely see that there is a good prospect of conviction but should also consider whether the circumstances are such as to render a prosecution desirable in the public interests. Re Nattava Parankusam, 37 M. 564.

Mahomedan Law (Guardianship).

(1) Minority of Mahomedan girl when determines. See PENAL CODE, No. 1, 37 M. 567.

Penal Code.

(2) S. 363—Minority of Mahomedan girl when determines, under Mahomedan Law and under this section—S. 3, Act IX of 1875 (Majority)—Question at what stage offence was committed is one of fact—Revision.

According to Mahomedan Law, the occurrence of puberty determines minority and the mother's right to custody. But for the purposes of S. 363, I.P.C., regard must be had only to the definition of minority in S. 3, Act IX of 1875 (a).

The question at what stage the offence was completed is one of fact and cannot be raised in revision for the first time. Re Mutha Ibrahim, 37 M. 567.

(2) In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, the cases are known by their numbers and not by the pages where they are printed; (e.g.) 4 P.R. 1911 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1911. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

(3) For Cases from Reports other than those published in India, the volumes and pages are printed exactly in the manner they are to be found in the original cases wherein they are referred to.

THE CURRENT INDEX

OF INDIAN CASES, 1914.

FINAL PART.

SECTION II—(CIVIL CASES).

Abadi.

(1) House of tenant in abadi—Partition—House assigned to one mahal and cultivatory holding to the other—Right of residence in the house. See LANDLORD AND TENANT, No. 16, 12 A.L.J. 498.

(2) Suit for possession of—Jurisdiction. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 134, 106 P.W.R. 1914.

Abatement.

(1) Suit by minor plaintiff for declaration that a will of joint family property by his deceased father was void and for possession—Death of plaintiff—Suit whether abates.

The 1st plaintiff, a minor, sued the 1st defendant by his guardian for possession of the suit property as his by survivorship, and for a declaration that the will purporting to have been made by his deceased father, on which the 1st defendant relied, was null and void. This will vested the joint family property in the 1st defendant in trust for the 1st plaintiff in case he should attain majority, and in trust for a temple in case of his failure to do so. 1st plaintiff died a minor. Held, the cause of action did not abate, and the representatives of the plaintiff could continue the suit. Narayana Reddi v. Kamakshi Ammal, 27 M.L.J. 674.

OLDFIELD and TYABJI, JJ.

(2) Abatement—Suit to declare invalidity of relinquishment deed as against stone's reversionary rights—Death of plaintiff—Cause of action—Whether survives in favour of legal representatives. Kommeneni Chinna Yeerayya v. Kommeneni Lakshminarasamma, 11 M.L.T. 184—32 M.L.J. 375—(1913) M.W.N. 442—15 Ind. Cas. 218—87 M. 406. See Final Part, 1912, Col. 2.

(3) Appeal against order demanding security from guardian of female ward—Death of person

at whose instance order was passed—Abatement of order. See ACT VIII OF 1890 (GUARDIANS AND WARDS), No. 37, 20 P.L.R. 1914.

(4) Suit against trustee and alienee from trustee—Appeal by alienee—Death of trustee pending appeal—Appeal whether abates—Test. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 129, 26 M.L.J. 597.

(5) Civil revision petition against order refusing to review order of arrest—Death of petitioner—Effect—No right survives to legal representatives. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 99, 15 M.L.T. 224.

(6) Death of defendant during pendency of appeal—Application for substitution of heirs barred—Ignorance of law no excuse—Abatement of appeal. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 373, 15 P.L.R. 1914.

(7) Decree against defendants on ground common to all—Appeal by all the defendants—Death of one of the appellants—Failure to bring his representative on record within 6 months—Partial abatement—Effect on surviving appellants. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 314, 88 P.R. 1914.

(8) Setting aside of order as to abatement of appeal—Weight of plea as to ignorance of death of respondent—Saving of limitation—Duty of appellant to keep himself informed of respondent's death. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 377, 24 Ind. Cas. 275.

(9) Application to set aside abatement—Limitation—Effect of delay. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1903), No. 378, 16 M.L.T. 547.

(10) Order directing abatement of suit—Not a decree—No appeal lies. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 2, 12 A.L.J. 1118.

(11) Suit by next friend—Abatement—Subsequent suit by minor—Not barred. See MINOR, No. 1, (1914) M.W.N. 740.

Abwabs.

Abwab—Rent, consolidated—Husks, value of—Cesses—Plaintiff's conduct.

In a kabuliat it was stated that there was an annual nakdi rent at Rs. 4-4-0 per bigha, making in all the specified amount of Rs. 42-8-0 that over and above this, they (the tenants) would pay a cart-load of husk year after year till the period of the potta was at an end, and in case they failed to do the same they would pay Rs. 6 as the value thereof; and that if they did not pay the said rent annually they should be held liable for interest at the rate specified. In the schedule to the kabuliat, the following was stated: "Area of land, 10 bighas, rate per bigha, Rs. 4-4-0 total rent Rs. 42-8-0 value of husk, Rs. 6, annual jumma, Rs. 48-8-0."

Held, that the husk was not really a part of the rent and was therefore an abwab, as the plaintiffs in their plaint did not treat the husk as part of the rent in totalising Rs. 48-8-0 for they made a claim in excess of that, and as the cesses were not claimed or paid on the basis of the husks being part of the rent. Kalar Singh v. Mathura Prasad, 19 C.L.J. 402.

Accounts.

(1) Evidence—Books of accounts tampered with—Presumption against owner of books.

When it is found that the account books of a party to the suit have been deliberately tampered with while in his possession, at places where the Court should naturally expect to find relevant entries, the very strongest presumption arises that the fabrication has been effected in order to destroy evidence which would tell in favour of the opposite party and against the owner of the books. Pokhar Das v. Uttam Chand, 77 P.L.R. 1914=49 P.W.R. 1914=22 Ind. Cas. 560.

RATTIGAN and BEADON, JJ.

(2) Accounts, re-opening of—Balance struck—Bhul chuk (errors and omissions excepted).

The defendant, member of a partnership, at the time of the winding-up of the business, had before him a very clear and simple account, signed the balance, after having fully understood the contents, promised to pay in four instalments within a year, promised interest, and agreed that the debts and outstandings of the business were to be paid and realized respectively by himself and another defendant. A sort of deed of release was also executed by each party in favour of the other on the same day. The defendant never made any attempt thereafter to have those accounts overhauled or corrected.

Held, that, notwithstanding the fact that, in striking and admitting the balance, the phrase bhul chuk (errors and omissions excepted) had been used, the defendant could not be allowed to go behind the settlement of accounts made.

Accounts—(Continued).

(3) Accounts, settlement of—Certain sum found due—Payment of portion—Promissory note for balance—Invalidity of the note for want of proper stamp—Suit on original cause of action—Maintainability—Inference of agreement to pay.

A and B were partners. On a settlement of accounts between them, it was found that a certain sum of money was due from B to A. B paid a portion of the sum found due and executed in favour of A, a promissory note for the balance due. The promissory note becoming invalid for want of proper stamp, A sued to recover the amount due from B on the original cause of action.

Held, that the suit is maintainable upon the original cause of action independent of the invalid promissory note (a).

The previous settlement and the payment of a certain sum of money in pursuance of the settlement can be used for inferring an agreement to pay the balance and that the promissory note was simply evidence of that agreement to pay. Saminatha Pathan v. Radhakrishna Pathan, 15 M.L.T. 243=23 Ind. Cas. 85.

(4) Account stated—Stated account found to be forgery—If suit may be altered to one on account stated in previous year—Limitation—Acknowledgment of liability—Letter saying that writer will sign after looking into account—Limitation Act, 1908, S. 19.

Where a suit was brought on an account stated in a particular year and not on an open account, and it was found that the account stated was a forgery, the suit could not be altered to one on the account stated in the previous year.

Where a letter merely says that the writer after looking into the account will sign it;

(1) It is not an acknowledgment of liability on an account stated (a).

(2) assuming that it is an acknowledgment of liability to pay whatever may be found due when accounts have been properly taken between the parties, it is not an acknowledgment of liability to pay the amount stated to be due in the hatchitta of a particular year. Bhairo Prashad v. Gajadhar Prashad, 23 Ind. Cas. 587=19 C.W.N. 170.

Accounts—(Concluded).

(5) Findings in an account suit—Preliminary decree—Final decree passed after completion of accounts—Appeal—Practice. See CIV. PRO. CODE (1908), No. 8, 16 Bom. L.R. 206.

(6) Mere entry in books of account—Insufficiency to prove liability. See EVIDENCE ACT, No. 24, 82 P.R. 1914.

(7) Entries in account books—Vague statement of plaintiff in support of entry not sufficient. See EVIDENCE ACT, No. 23, 47 P.L.R. 1914.

(8) Entries in account books—Relevancy and weight to be attached to them. See EVIDENCE ACT, No. 17, (1914) M.W.N. 240.

(9) Meaning and scope of the terms 'books,' 'books of account'—Difference between private diary and book of account. See EVIDENCE ACT, No. 26, 10 N.L.R. 44.

(10) Mutual, open and current account, what constitutes. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 97, 24 Ind. Cas. 128.

(11) Suit for money—Accounts to be examined in order to ascertain the amount due—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Court. See SMALL CAUSE SUIT, No. 1, 12 A.L.J. 230.

Accretion.

(1) Accretion—Rent-free tenure—Tenure-holder, if liable to pay rent for accreted land—Settlement of alluvial land by trespasser—Raiyat bona fide taking settlement—Effectment.

A rent-free tenure-holder is liable to pay rent in respect of accreted land (a).

The principle that a tenant, who enters upon a land and holds under a de facto proprietor bona fide, is entitled to be treated as a raiyat, although the de facto proprietor subsequently turns out to be not the real owner, is applicable quite as much to farm land as to alluvial accretions. Rajendra Nath Roy v. Nanda Lal Guha Sircar, 19 C.L.J. 595 = 18 C.W.N. 1206.

MOOKERJEE and BEACHCROFT, JJ.

(2) Alluvial accretion—Settlement with one of the proprietors—Pre-existing contract how far binds the settlement-holder—Fair rent. See ACT VIII of 1885 (BENGAL TENANCY), No. 2, 19 C. L. J. 614.

Acknowledgment.

(1) Unstamped acknowledgment received in evidence, if can be rejected—Stamp Act, s. 86—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, O. XXVI, r. 10 (2)—Application by one of the parties to examine Commissioner—Court, when can refuse.

A statement of account ran as follows: "Rs. 2,115—Baki dena miti Kartic Sudi ekam Sambat 1965. Bakalam G."

Held, that this was an acknowledgment that Rs. 2,115 was due at the date when the statement was signed. Such document should be stamped under the provisions of the Stamp Act.

An unstamped document, if accepted in evidence by the primary Court, should not, at a subsequent stage of the proceeding, be rejected by the Court. It should be treated as part of the evidence against the person making the statement.

A Court cannot arbitrarily withhold permission to examine a Commissioner for accounts asked for by one of the parties to the suit.

The object of the Legislature in enacting r. 10 (2) of O. XXVI, Civ. Pro. Code, is to afford protection to the Commissioner who is a quasi judicial officer. Such protection is afforded on grounds of public policy, so as to make it impossible for either of the parties to subject the Commissioner to a vexatious examination. Sitaram v. Ramprosad Ram, 19 C.L.J. 87 = 18 C.W.N. 697 = 22 Ind. Cas. 859.

MOOKERJEE and BEACHCROFT, JJ.

(2) Letter saying that writer will sign after looking into account—Whether an. See ACCOUNTS, No. 4, 23 Ind. Cas. 587.

(3) Receiver appointed in partition or administration suit—Power to acknowledge debt—Effect of acknowledgment. See HINDU LAW (JOINT FAMILY), No. 11, 16 M.L.T. 489.

(4) Essentials of—Acknowledgment whether necessary to be addressed to person entitled to right. See LIMITATION ACT (1877), No. 3, 22 Ind. Cas. 650.

(5) Reference to mortgage debt in subsequent pro-note by mortgagor—Whether an acknowledgment. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 53, 16 Bom. L.R. 20.

(6) Application for execution of decree—Acknowledgment of liability by one of several judgment-debtors whether gives fresh start against all. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 44, 22 Ind. Cas. 709.

(7) Promissory note by two promisors—Acknowledgment by one when binding upon both—Series of endorsements—Effect. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 61, (1914) M.W. N. 792.

(8) Admission of barred debt is not an acknowledgment of the debt. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 4, 24 Ind. Cas. 507.

(9) Acknowledgments of decree debts are not acknowledgments and have not the effect of initiating a new period of limitation. See LIMITATION ACT (1908), No. 45, (1914) M.W. N. 875.

(10) Statement by mortgagee recorded at settlement proceedings that mortgage was redeemable—Whether an acknowledgment. See MORTGAGE (GENERAL), No. 42, 5 P.W.R. 1914 (N.W.F.P.).

(11) Nattukkottai chetties—Practice of signing letters with the name of their family deity

Compensation, apportionment of—Adopted son, whether is entitled to share—Widow, right of—Child—Refund of price of the ornaments presented by deceased's father to widow.

Held, (1) that a son adopted after the death of the deceased is not a "child" of the deceased for the purposes of Act XIII of 1855.

(2) Act XIII of 1855 was intended to compensate families for loss occasioned by death, through actionable wrong, of a member of the family. Therefore, no part of the compensation was equitably claimable by the deceased's grandmother, i.e., father's mother, the father being alive. The relief is granted to specified relations of the deceased and not to the joint family to which he belonged.

(3) That the funeral expenses and the costs of recovering the compensation money should also be rateably borne by the claimants.

(4) That inasmuch as the widow was the person most severely affected by her husband's death, and having regard to other considerations, the widow was entitled to get 2/3 of the compensation money.

But she was made to refund the price of the ornaments presented to her by her father-in-law on the death of her husband. Shi Gopal v. Musammatt Amba Devi, 26 P.W.R. 1914 = 192 P.L.R. 1914 = 52 P.R. 1914 = 22 Ind. Cas. 846.

One T who was unmarried gave certain property to his mistress S and to her sons, by him in these terms: "The property is given to S for her life and after her death, the sons and heirs of me shall come in possession of the said property. It shall be no concern of mine."

Held, that (1) under S. 87 of the Succession Act, there must be an intimation that the illegitimate sons were meant, and that such an intimation existed in the provision that the property was to be no concern of T; (2) the intention of T was that, after the death of his mistress, the property should go to her illegitimate sons; and (3) the English view that a man is not the father of his illegitimate children applies also under the Succession Act. Udit Singh v. - (4) Ss. 11, 12—Applicability to alienations of jaghirs made before the Act—Assignment of land revenue whether a 'pension'—Canon of construction of Statutes.

It is now a well recognised canon of the interpretation of Statutes that a legislative enactment is prospective and not retrospective in its operation. This rule admits of two exceptions (1) when the Act only affects the procedure of the Court, and (2) when it appears clearly that the intention of the Legislature was to give a retrospective effect.

If the alienation took place before the date on which the Pensions Act came into force, it cannot be rendered invalid by invoking the aid of an enactment passed subsequent to the transaction.

S. 12 of the Pensions Act which avoids an assignment of a pension does not contain a rule of procedure and the section does not take away vested rights.

The Pensions Act has not a retrospective operation (a).

An assignment of a grant of land revenue is not prohibited by S. 12 unless such grant comes within the meaning of the word 'pension' and is made for the consideration specified in S. 11 (b).

A mere assignment of land revenue as such does not come within the protection given by Ss. 11 and 12, unless it fulfils other requirements of those sections.

Ordinarily speaking "pension" involves the idea of a fixed periodical allowance or stipend and if it is granted on political considerations or for past services or as a compassionate allowance, it cannot be assigned. But a grant by Government does not cease to be a pension because it takes the form of an assignment of land revenue.

An assignment of land revenue by Government may or may not be a pension within the meaning of Ss. 11 and 12, and the answer to the question must depend upon the facts of each case (c).

Act XXIII of 1871 (Pensions)—(Concluded).

Held, in this case, that the grant was of a fixed sum payable by the assignment of land revenue and was clearly made for political services, and the grant of the land revenue is a political pension and comes within the protection afforded by S. 12. Karar Hassan v. Mustafa Hassan, 86 P.R. 1914.

Act II of 1874 (Administrator-General's).

(1) Ss. 17, 18, 33—Administrator-General—Powers of—When administration complete—Sale by him for commission after the party attaining majority.

The Administrator-General as administrator has power to deal with everything that is covered by the grant without obtaining the special leave of the Court.

Letters of administration apply equally to real property as much as to personalty. The administration cannot be treated as closed until every act necessary for its completion has been done.

Where an estate was administered by the Administrator-General, and the party attained majority, and subsequently the Administrator-General sold some immoveable property for his commission, held that the sale was valid and was within his powers as Administrator-General. P. —Administrator-General appointed to administer estate of insolvent—Insolvency law inapplicable—Provisions of Administrator-General's Act apply—Agreement to pay money out of cheques coming into possession at a future date—Creates a valid equitable assignment—Words essential to create a charge.

O. XX, r. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, which provides for the administration by a Court of the property of a deceased person, does not apply where the Administrator-General has obtained letters of administration in respect of the estate of a deceased insolvent.

There is no machinery in the law of insolvency under which an insolvent estate, in respect of which letters of administration have been granted to the Administrator-General, can be administered under that law.

Where the estate of an insolvent vests in the Administrator-General under the Succession Act, he can claim no higher than the deceased himself, and the Administrator-General has not the rights of either the trustee or Official Assignee in insolvency.

Where an agreement used the following terms:

"I pay you soon after I receive cheques from M.R. Co. for works done and in case I fail to remit your money after I receive from M.R. Co. . . . I am liable."

Held, that these words clearly indicated an intention to pay "out of a specified fund" and not when "funds shall come" and were operative to create a valid equitable assignment of the funds when available and not a mere assignment of an uncertain future chose-in-action (a).

The words "you should have a lien or charge over cheques or moneys received, for works done with your capital" are sufficiently specific and definite to create a charge on such funds when they come into existence (b). Navajee v. Administrator-General of Madras, 22 Ind. Cas. 566.

Act III of 1874 (Married Women's Property).

Ss. 2, 6—Insurance Policy—Life policy effected by a Hindu for the benefit of wife and children—Policy, if can be availed of by assured's creditor—'Children.'

Per Curiam.—S. 6 of the Married Women's Property Act is not applicable to a policy of assurance effected by a Hindu for the benefit of his wife and children, and hence a sum payable under or by virtue of the policy is available for the payment of the debts of the assured (a).

Per Richardson, J.—The extent to which Hindus, Mahomedans and Buddhists are affected or excluded, depends on the special clauses relating to them and not on the power given to the Governor-General in Council by S. 2 of the Married Women's Property Act in regard to other communities.

The reference to children in S. 6 of the Married Women's Property Act is incidental and the only children contemplated by that section are children born of marriage of the kind to which the rest of the Act relates. Ishani Das v. Gopal Chandra Dey, 20 C.L.J. 44 = 18 C.W.N. 1335.

(7) Ss. 15-D, 16—Suit for account—Account of mortgage transaction cannot be mixed up with account of monetary dealings.

There were certain mortgage transactions between the parties; and later on further monetary dealings took place between them. The defendant sued on the latter. The plaintiff, an agriculturist, also instituted a suit for general account under the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act and for redemption of the mortgaged property. The two suits were heard together. The trial Judge in taking the account made up one general account of the mortgage transactions and the money dealings; and finding that both the mortgage-debt and the monetary debt had been fully satisfied out of the profits recovered by the defendant, ordered the defendant to reconvey it to plaintiff free from mortgage. The defendant having appealed :

Held, reversing the decree and ordering the two accounts to be taken separately, that the plaintiff was not entitled to combine his claim for an account of the mortgage transactions with his claim for an account of the monetary dealings and to import the relief to which he was entitled by way of redemption under S. 15-D of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act into his claim for an account under S. 16.

A suit for account, under S. 15-D of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, may be filed by a mortgagor agriculturist even where the time named for payment has not yet expired under the mortgage, and he may have either a declaration of the amount due on the mortgage or he may combine a declaration of the amount due with a decree for redemption. This section relates purely and exclusively to mortgage transactions.

Section 16 of the Act enables the plaintiff to sue for a general account of money dealings between him and the lender; and it enables him to sue for a bare declaration of the amount due without any relief being claimed. Laxmandas Harakchand v. Baban Bhikari, 16 Bom. L.R. 671.

pass decrees for sum actually due to Vakil—Pro-note whether operates as an acknowledgment of liability—Plea of limitation involving mixed question of law and fact not to be raised for the first time in revision.

Suit upon a pro-note executed by defendant in favour of a Vakil. It was found that it was executed for the amount of commissioner's fees, outfees, etc., paid by the Vakil on the client's behalf. The note, however, was not filed in Court as required by S. 28 of the Legal Practitioner's Act.

Held, the fact that the note was not filed in Court and therefore cannot be sued on would not deter the plaintiff from getting a decree in respect of the sums actually spent by him and would not prevent the Court from decreeing the sum which was reasonably due for fees (a), and there is nothing to prevent the promissory note from operating as an acknowledgment of liability even though it may not be sued upon.

A plea of limitation, which was not raised in the lower Court and would involve a mixed question of law and fact, will not be allowed to be raised for the first time in revision. Natesa Mooppan v. K. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, 27 M.L.J. 728.

Act XII of 1880 (Khazi).

Ss. 2, 4—Rights of Khazi—Exclusive right to officiate as Khazi—Suit to restrain defendant from officiating at marriages and for recovering nikkah fees received by defendant.

The plaintiff, who was a Khazi of a certain place appointed by Government, instituted a suit against the defendant to restrain him from officiating at marriages celebrated in that place and for the recovery of a sum which the defendant had received as fees for nikkahs performed by him in violation of plaintiff's rights. Held the suit was not maintainable.

S. 4 of the Khazi's Act shows that an appointment under the Act does not confer on the appointee any exclusive franchise or any exclusive right to officiate at marriages. And the plaintiff has no right to restrain any person from discharging any of the functions of a Khazi.

An office which requires the holder to perform duties in connection with an institution would ordinarily carry with it rights of an exclusive character, and does not interfere with the right possessed by all persons to exercise any profession or calling they might choose to adopt. The object of the Khazi's Act of 1880 was merely to appoint a person whose duty it would be to render certain services to such Muhammadans as may choose to resort to him for certain purposes, and does not confer on him any exclusive right to perform the functions which his office requires him to discharge.

A judicial or administrative office created by the Sovereign confers rights and privileges of an exclusive character, but Act XII of 1880 expressly says that a Khazi appointed under the Act is to have no judicial or administrative powers.

The office of Khazi is not one created by the community of Muhammadans but by the Sovereign whose administrative power is the source of the Khazi's rights. Katil Shaik Ummar Saheb v. Khazi Budan Khan Saheb, 37 M. 228.

The plaintiff sued as an endorsee of a Hundi drawn by defendant in favour of M. The lower Court dismissed the suit holding that there had been no consideration as between the defendant and M. The plaintiff having applied to the High Court under extraordinary jurisdiction:

Held, that the plaintiff's suit as endorsee from M. was not necessarily barred by the fact that there had been no consideration as between defendant and M.

An endorsee from the payee of a Hundi must be presumed, until the contrary is proved, to have been a holder in due course, that is to say, a holder for consideration from the payee within the meaning of S. 9 by reason of S. 118 (g) of the Negotiable Instruments Act. suit to file the plaint on behalf of the first plaintiff and that the suit was therefore barred by limitation.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—It is open to the parties to enter into a contract that the provisions of S. 22, Negotiable Instruments Act, relating to the days of grace shall not apply to them; and it is not open to the promisee to insist that the defendant should be compelled to take advantage of the days of grace in order that the starting point of limitation for him may commence on their expiry (a).

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J. (contra).—As S. 22 of the Negotiable Instruments Act omits in a marked manner the provision in S. 14 of the English Bills of Exchange Act, allowing the parties to contract that the bill shall come to maturity on the date fixed in it without the addition of days of grace, a promissory note governed by the Negotiable Instruments Act cannot dispense with the days of grace (b). *P.M.A. Yallappa Chetty v. without any endorsement to an idol through its pujari, and having done so, died. The plaintiff, the Shabari of the idol, thereupon sued the petitioner for the amount due on the note.

Held, that, although a promissory note to order may be transferred otherwise than by endorsement and delivery as contemplated by S. 48 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, there was no legal transfer of the promissory note to the plaintiff or the deity whom the plaintiff represented either as a negotiable instrument or as a chose-in-action under S. 180 of the Transfer of Property Act, nor was there a valid gift of the promissory note under S. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act.

That, even assuming that there was a valid transfer, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue in his own name.

It may be generally true that a valid assignment of a negotiable instrument as an actionable claim gives the assignee the rights of the holder subject to equities, but this broad proposition must be subject at any rate to the qualification that it is true only so far as it is not inconsistent with the special provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

Per Richardson, J.—The object and purpose of the Negotiable Instruments Act is to legalise a system under which claims arising upon certain instruments of a mercantile character can be treated like ordinary goods which pass by delivery from hand to hand. But except within the prescribed limits such claims cannot be so treated. Akhoy Kumar Pal v. Haridas Bysack, 18 C.W.N. 494=19 C.L.J. 335=22 Ind. Cas. 500.

Consequently his neglecting to give such notice within reasonable time from the date of dishonour exonerates the indorsers and others concerned especially where they are most likely to suffer damage from such neglect, as, for instance, where the drawer becomes insolvent or otherwise unable to pay the amount due (a).

Where, in the Articles of Association of a Joint Stock Company, the least number of Directors required to form a quorum was three, and in case of an occasional vacancy among the Directors, the remaining Directors were authorized to appoint as Director, a properly qualified member of the Company, any appointment of a Director or Directors by only two of them is irregular.

An allotment of shares by an irregularly constituted Board of Directors is invalid, but if the Articles of Association of a Company validate an act done by a de facto Director in a bona fide manner, the Court will uphold his act. Where a person to whom shares in a Company were allotted by the Directors did not decline to accept them on the ground of unreasonable delay, he could not raise that objection against his being put on the list of contributories when the Company went into liquidation.

Where eighteen companies or firms carrying on dealings in cotton and possessing ginning factories, comprised of more than 20 persons, entered into a coalition or syndicate with the object of working the ginning factories of its members jointly for the benefit of all, so as to prevent competition between them, and agreed that the net profits should be thrown into a pool or general fund and be distributed rateably among the subscribers.

Held, that the association is essentially within the purview of S. 4 of the Companies Act, 1882, and that, that being so, no suit can be maintained on a bond given by one of the members of the Association to the Secretary of the Association.

The word 'persons' in S. 4, Act VI of 1882, denotes individuals and does not include bodies of individuals whether corporations or not, since any such extended definition would be repugnant to the subject and context of the section.

A company agreed to give an advance of two lakhs to L who purchased 500 shares of the Company.

On 16th December, 1901, L applied for 500 shares and obtained an advance in the promissory notes for Rs. 1,92,500, payable in different times, and by a set-off against his shares of a sum of Rs. 7,500. On 22nd December, 1908, the shares were allotted to him. At a subsequent meeting of the Directors held on 28th January, 1909, the advance to L was confirmed to the extent of Rs. 1,40,000 (one lakh and forty thousands) and promissory notes for Rs. 60,000 (sixty thousands) were handed back and cancelled, and the following resolution was passed by the Directors.

"In consideration of Rai Laohhman Singh meeting our wishes regarding extension of the lease and the return of Hundies for Rs. 60,000 (sixty thousands) out of Rs. 2,00,000 (two lakhs) advanced to him as a loan, the Directors agree to meet the calls in his 500 shares debiting him Rs. 7 per cent. for the accommodation in his general account."

But there was no written agreement between L, and the Company that the price of the shares will not be paid in cash and filed with the Registrar of the Joint Stock Companies as required by S. 28 of Act VI of 1882.

Held, that an agreement that a Registered Company's purchased shares are not to be paid in cash but were to be issued to the purchaser as fully paid up as part of an advance which the Company has undertaken to make, is illegal if it is not made in writing and filed with the Registrar of the Joint Stock Companies as laid down under S. 28 of Act VI of 1882.

The setting-off of a debt due against future calls on shares can only be considered payment in cash if the debt be due in presenti. But L's return of promissory notes on 26th January, 1909, is not equivalent to a payment in cash within the meaning of the said section (a).

Query.—Whether the above-mentioned resolution of the Company would debar them from suing L for moneys due on the shares.

A purchaser of shares is not allowed to avoid the contract on the ground of fraud or misrepresentation, if, after allotment, he keeps silence for a considerable time as about two years (b).

Obiters.—If, before a contract to take shares is rescinded, a winding-up be commenced or a concern ceases to be a going concern, the shareholder can no longer be relieved but will be liable to be a contributory.

(5) S. 77—Articles not valid—Power to borrow conferred on the managing agents—Ratification by the share-holders—Effect of ratification—Estoppel—Contract Act, S. 237.

The respondent-Company registered its Memorandum of Association without the Articles. At a subsequent Meeting of the Company, Articles of Association were adopted giving the Managing Agents power to borrow money for the Company, but it turned out that they were not regular. The Company, however, treated them as regular and acted upon them and published them for the information of the general public. Held, that the said articles having neither been registered along with the Memorandum of Association, nor passed in the manner provided by law, could not take effect as the Articles of Association so as to replace the general provisions of the Act. But the share-holders, having acted upon them for a long time and having put them forward as embodying the rules and regulations of the Company, could not set up the invalidity of the said articles. *Kunj Kishor v. (6) S. 128—Company—Compulsory winding up order—Petition by share-holders—Grounds on which petition should be based—Court's duty to entertain application—Discretion of the Court.

In S. 128, Companies Act, 1882, the first four grounds (a) to (d) for winding up a Company are specific, and any other ground alleged under (e) must be of a like nature to those given under headings (a) to (d).

Where a petition for winding up a Company compulsorily makes allegation relating to the internal management or rather mismanagement of the Company's affairs, the matter is not one that would call for interference by the Court, but is one for the share-holders themselves to deal with.

There is no obligation whatever on the Court to admit a petition for winding up a Company merely because it is presented. In the first place, it must allege facts which, if proved, would justify an order for winding up a Company, and therefore perusal is necessary. But even if a petition does allege such facts, then the Judge has a discretion, since the admission of the petition must inevitably damage the credit of the Company concerned, to consider whether it really is a bona fide one.

A petition by a shareholder to wind up the Company stands on a different footing to a petition by a creditor. It should be more closely scrutinized on presentation. The usual ground for a creditor's petition would be that the respondent Company is unable to pay its debts and in such a case the Company must pay the debt or submit to a winding up order. A shareholder's petition must, as a general rule, allege one of the grounds under headings (a), (b), (c) and (d) or any grounds which the Court is satisfied is of a like nature to those in S. 128, and if any of those grounds are alleged, there is little doubt that the Court will, under ordinary circumstances, admit the petition. If any other grounds are alleged the petition does not satisfy the requirements of the Act.

There is nothing in the Indian Companies Act or rules framed thereunder, which deprives the Court of the discretion which it has in every case, so that the Court may, if it thinks fit, refuse to admit a petition, or, as an alternative course, give the Company concerned notice that a petition has been presented, so that it may take proceedings to restrain the petitioner from proceeding with his petition. In re The Pioneer Bank, Ltd.; In re Chaimral Yeleram, 16 Bom. L.R. 508.

MACLEOD, J.

(7) Ss. 128, 129 — Company — Compulsory winding up—Petition by creditor.

A creditor of a joint stock company by assignment demanded payment of his moneys. The Company declined to pay on the ground that the demand was in respect of a claim which the Company honestly believed to be a fraudulent claim and unsustainable at law. The creditor thereupon applied to the Court to wind up the affairs of the Company. It was not alleged that the Company was not able to pay his claim in full. The lower Court having rejected his application, he appealed: Held, that the application was rightly dismissed, for the creditor's object seemed to be to bring the pressure of insolvency proceedings to bear upon the Company in order to make it pay cheaply and expeditiously a heavy debt which it desired to dispute in the Civil Court.

A Company can be wound up, on the petition of a creditor, only if it is unable to pay its just debts. The inability is indicated by its neglect to pay after proper demand made and the lapse of three weeks. Such neglect must be judged by the facts of each particular case. Where the defence is that the debt is disputed, all that the Court has first to see is whether that dispute is on the face of it genuine or merely a cloak of the Company's real inability to pay just debts. *Tulsidas Lallubhai v. (14) S. 147—Contributory—Shares—Liability of purchaser.

The appellant admitted he had originally agreed to purchase 70 shares in the Company under liquidation, but objected to his name being included in the list of contributories on the grounds (1) that he was induced by false and fraudulent misrepresentation to purchase the said shares (i) inasmuch as the prospectus which had been sent to him contained the names of some highly respectable gentlemen as Directors of the Company, (ii) that in the notice which appeared in a newspaper calling for applications for a post of manager it was stated that the manager would have the control of a large body of men and that it was suggested that the company was on a good sound financial position, (2) that subsequently the Company had agreed to substitute 23 fully paid up shares in lieu of 70 shares above referred to, (3) that the applicant's shares had been pledged with the Company and therefore the Company and not the applicant must be regarded as the real owner of the shares and liable thereon and (4) that the persons primarily liable to the creditors of the Company were the late Directors, and that, until every effort had been made to recover from the latter, the share holders could not be held responsible.

Held, that the objections were untenable, for (1) it was not proved that the applicant took shares in the Company upon the faith of alleged representations made to him; that, even if the applicant had been deceived into taking the shares, he was not entitled in the circumstances of the present case to avoid the contract which he made with the Company, as even upon his own allegations he must have known very shortly after his appointment as manager of the Company that fraud had been practised upon him and he did nothing to repudiate his liability till the Company was ordered to be wound up;

(2) the applicant was not freed from liability on the ground that the Managing Director had written to him 'I will see what you have paid up and arrange to give you fully paid-up shares for the same and transfer your liabilities on the remaining shares,' as the promise contained was a purely personal one;

(3) that the legal owner of the shares being the applicant and not the Company, he was liable as a contributory;

(4) that the proposition No. 4 was startling in its novelty and no authority was cited in

- (15) S. 159—Liquidation—Costs of liquidation—Ground rent due under a lease which gave charge for arrears of rent on buildings to be erected on land—Rent forms charge on buildings—Rent to be paid up in priority of unsecured creditors.

The promoters of a Company took a lease of a plot of land on condition that, if the lessees did not pay arrears of rent within one month, the landlords might recover the arrears with interest "from the building or buildings which may have been erected on the lands." The buildings were later on erected. No rent was paid under the lease from the 12th April 1910. An application was made on the 28th July 1911 to wind up the affairs of the Company. The Company was ordered to be wound up and the buildings and plant were sold on the 12th February 1913. The landlords claimed in the liquidation proceedings that the amount of rent due to them from 12th April 1910 to the 12th February 1913 should be paid out of the sale proceeds of the mill buildings in priority to the claims of unsecured creditors. The lower Court gave priority under S. 159, Companies Act, to the amount of rent which accrued due from the 28th July 1911 to the 12th February 1913; and ranked the claim as to the balance of rent which accrued due from the 12th April 1910 to the 28th July 1911 as an ordinary claim. The landlords having appealed:

Held, (1) that under the lease a charge was in equity created for unpaid rent upon the buildings when they came into existence;

(2) that in equity the charge gave a right of priority to the landlords over unsecured creditors of the Company in a winding-up proceeding. Keshavlal Hiralal v. Girdharlal Uttamram Fatekh, 16 Bom L.R. 643.

Where the shareholders of a Bank assembled in general meeting appointed the appellants as auditors in the manner prescribed in the Articles of Association, and where in pursuance of that appointment they entered upon and carried on the duties of auditors of the Bank.

Held, that the appellants became de jure officers of the Bank.

On a contention there was not a properly qualified quorum at the said general meeting, and that consequently, though the appellants acted as auditors, they were not properly appointed.

Held (by Ormond, J., Twomey, J., dissenting) that, if the shareholders at that meeting were unable to appoint an auditor owing to want of a quorum, there would be a casual vacancy of the office, and the Directors present might be taken to have duly filled it under Art 11 of the Company's rules. Stuart Smith and Allen v. Executor if liable to pay income-tax for income of estate—Suit for declaration that such income is not liable to be taxed, if lies—Contract Act, S. 72—Payment under coercion—Jurisdiction of Collector, to determine who is chargeable with tax.

The executor to an estate brought a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council for a declaration that as executor he was not liable to pay any income-tax in respect of any income of the estate and that the Collector in realising the sums paid to him acted without jurisdiction.

Held—that to succeed in this suit it was incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the payment had been made by him under coercion; and assuming that there was coercion within the meaning of S. 72 of the Contract Act, the suit did not lie.

That income accruing to an executor under the will of a testator is liable to be taxed within the meaning of the Income-tax Act. Apart from the exemption provided in the Act in favour of persons whose income does not reach a certain amount, there is no personal exemption of which an executor as such could take advantage.

That in determining that the plaintiff was a person chargeable with income-tax, the Collector acted within the limit of his jurisdiction. A. H. Forbes v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, 19 C.W.N. 138.

Act VII of 1887 (Suits Valuation).

- (1) Ss. 3, 4 and r. VI—Suit for declaration relating to occupancy land or interest in occupancy land—Jurisdiction—Valuation.

A suit which is one for declaration and relates to occupancy land or interest in occupancy land is clearly covered by S. 4 of the Suits Valuation Act, which must be read with the rules framed under the provisions of S. 3 to determine the value for purposes of jurisdiction. Therefore the value of a suit brought by the occupancy tenants of certain lands for a declaration that the landlords are not entitled to recover from them by way of rent more than 1/16th share of the produce, known as lichh, is, for purposes of jurisdiction, clearly 15 times the land revenue. Jamal v. - (8) S. 11, application of—Wrong valuation put upon plaint—Court competent to try suit as valued by plaintiff—Suit beyond jurisdiction according to correct valuation—Trial of suit after extension of Court's pecuniary jurisdiction.

The provisions of S. 11 of the Suits Valuation Act apply even if the plaintiff designedly exaggerates or understates the value of his claim for the purposes of choosing his own forum. (a).

In a case the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had undervalued his claim and that the suit was really beyond the Court's jurisdiction. It was found that the actual valuation was beyond the jurisdiction. Subsequently, the Court's jurisdiction was raised and thus it became competent to try the suit even according to the actual valuation. The Court tried and decided the suit. It was contended that the trial was bad for want of jurisdiction:

Held, that, in the absence of anything to show that the disposal of the suit on its merits was prejudicially affected, the trial was good.

Act IX of 1887 (Provl. S.C. Courts).

(1) Ss. 16 and 28—Power of Court to 'pass order'—Practice.

The effect of an order under S. 23 of the Act is to remove any bar which might otherwise exist by reason of the provisions of S. 16 of the Act to a trial of the suit by a Court of ordinary Civil jurisdiction.

The Judge of a Court of Small Causes has a discretion to return a plaint under the provisions of S. 23 of the Act on a finding that the relief claimed by the plaintiff would depend upon proof or disproof of title, which a Court of Small Causes could not finally determine. The Court acting under that section should frame the order so as to put this point beyond doubt, because certain legal consequences follow from that order which do not follow an order merely holding that the Small Cause Court has no jurisdiction. Muhammad Abdul Ghafur Khan v. Gokal Prasad, 12 A.L.J. 334.

(2) S. 23—Suit for rent—Denial of plaintiffs' right and title to sue as trustees—Questions that cannot be decided by Small Cause Court—Proof or disproof of title to immoveable property—Return of plaint for presentation to proper Court—Validity.

In a suit for rent by the trustees of a temple, the defendant denied the plaintiffs' title to the kudivaram right in the land and contended that the Revenue Courts alone had jurisdiction to try the suit; the defendant also denied the plaintiffs' right to sue as trustees. The Small Cause Court returned the plaint for presentation to proper Court.

Held that the order returning the plaint was proper.

Held also that the 'relief claimed' cannot be granted by the Small Cause Court without deciding the question of the plaintiffs' title to the kudivaram, and that the decision as to the grant of the relief "depended upon the proof or disproof of a title to immoveable property" within the meaning of the words of S. 23, Act IX of 1887.

Held also that the title of the plaintiffs as trustees is one which the Small Cause Court

Before he could hear the case and record any evidence, that officer was transferred. His successor was not invested with such powers. He, however, tried it as a Court of Small Causes and the order which he passed was in the form of a Small Cause Court decree.

Held, that the Munsif exercised a jurisdiction which was not vested in him, that an irregularity was committed which prejudiced the applicant and that the order was liable to be set aside in revision. Shyam Behari Lal v. Kali, 12 A.L.J. 109=22 Ind. Cas. 909.

(9) S. 25—Revision—Finding of fact on meagre evidence—Surety.

Held, that, a finding of fact based practically on no evidence by a Small Cause Court is liable to be set aside on revision under S. 25 of Act IX of 1887. A mere entry of a person's name as surety in the creditor's and broker's book, in the face of his flat denial on second appeal, is of no or little value. Godhu Mal v. Court of Small Causes; and S. 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure is no bar to a second appeal to the High Court in such a suit (a).

S. 37, cl. (4) of Act XI of 1859 contemplates improvements or works of a permanent character; and they are protected irrespective of whether the lease was or was not given for the purpose of the work in question. But to afford protection the work must still be in existence or the land be used for the purpose of the work.

Where an under-tenure was claimed to be protected under S. 37, cl. (4) of Act XI of 1859 on the ground that the land was garden land, and it was found that the land ceased to be a garden about a quarter of a century ago, and tenants were settled on the land since then:

Held, that the fact that there was once a garden on the land would not protect it.

The effect of a sale for arrears of revenue is not ipso facto to avoid under-tenures; the purchaser has the option of avoiding them or keeping them intact. No particular method of expressing an intention to annul an under-tenure is necessary, but any unequivocal act is sufficient which indicates the intention to annul, and which brings that intention to the knowledge of the under-tenure-holder (b):

Institution of rent suits by the auction purchaser, and collection of rents by him from a large number of tenants amounting to obtaining possession of the estate through them, by executing decrees passed against the tenants in repudiation of the tenure-holder's title, may be deemed to be sufficient to indicate the intention to annul to the under-tenure-holder (c). Sahodora Mudiall v. A suit for the recovery by an inamdar of sums payable by a Khatedar in respect of certain immovable property held by him, under the inamdar as his superior holder, is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, inasmuch as the sums payable by an inferior holder to a superior holder are dues payable to a person by reason of his interest in immovable property within the meaning of Art. 13, Sch. II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act.

The (plaintiff), an inamdar, claimed to recover arrears from the defendant who was a Khatedar of certain lands. The defendant claimed to be entitled to set off the stipend payable by the plaintiff to certain pujaris of a temple of whom defendant was one. The set-off having been allowed, the plaintiff appealed.

Held, that, as the defendant claimed the set-off in a different capacity, and in a different category to that in which he held as tenant or Khatedar of the plaintiff, he could not claim the set-off under O. VIII, r. 6 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Madhav Rao Moreswar Pant Amatya v. Rama Kalu Ghadi, 16 Bom. L.R. 746.

Act V of 1888 (Inventions and Designs).

(1) Ss. 20, 29—Patent Act—Infringement—Defence—Want of subject-matter—Want of novelty—Difference between the Acts of 1888 and 1911—English and Indian Law.

Under the Patent Act of 1888 a defendant in an action for infringement is allowed to set up by way of defence all the grounds on which the grant of the patent could be opposed, grounds which are to be found in S. 20 of the Act. A defendant is not allowed to set up the defence that the invention was not new, unless the defendant or some person through whom he claims has, before the date of the delivery of the application for leave to file the specification, publicly or actually used in some parts of British India or of the United Kingdom the invention with respect to which the privilege is alleged to have been infringed.

The Indian Acts do not intend, as in England, that there should be any separate defence to the grant of a patent on the ground of want of subject-matter as distinguished from want of novelty.

The defendant cannot raise the defence of want of subject-matter as distinguished from want of novelty and the restrictions imposed by S. 29 (4) are binding in both cases. All the statutory grounds for opposing the grant of a patent which can be pleaded in answer to an action for infringement of a patent under the Act of 1911 cannot be pleaded in a suit instituted before the Act as it is not applicable. *Bhathey Sundararayan v. Act VIII of 1890 (Guardians and Wards)
—(Continued).

As in England, so among the Hindus, the father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities, but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust, and he cannot therefore during his lifetime substitute another person to be guardian in his place. He may, it is true, in the exercise of his discretion as guardian, entrust the custody and education of his children to another, but the authority he thus confers is essentially a revocable authority, and if the welfare of his children require it, he can, notwithstanding any contract to the contrary, take such custody and education once more into his own hand. If, however, the authority has been acted upon in such a way as, in the opinion of the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants, to create associations or give rise to expectations on the part of the infants which it would be undesirable in their interests to disturb or disappoint, such Court will interfere to prevent its revocation (a).

Where the appellant had offered to take charge of the respondent's two sons and defray the cost of their education at the University of Oxford, and the respondent thought it desirable to take advantage of the offer of giving his sons western education, notwithstanding the fact that this would entail a loss of caste, and by a letter purported to appoint her (the appellant) the guardian of his sons and to act as such, and the appellant thereafter left for England with the boys and made arrangements there for their tuition to enter the University of Oxford and defrayed the expenses of their maintenance and education and the father acquiesced in the sons being taken to England in appellant's custody; but about six months later demanded of the appellant the restoration of his sons, and on the refusal of the appellant so to do, instituted a suit in a District Court of Madras for a declaration that he was entitled to the guardianship and custody of his sons and that the appellant was not so entitled, and for an order on the appellant to hand over such sons to the respondent or such other person as to the Court might seem fit:

Held—that the District Court had no jurisdiction over infants except such as is conferred by the Guardians and Wards Act.

That the jurisdiction of the District Court is limited by S. 9 of the Guardians and Wards Act of 1890 to infants ordinarily resident within the district, and that it was impossible to hold that infants who had months previously left India with a view to be educated in England were ordinarily resident in the district.

That a suit inter partes is not the form of procedure prescribed by the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) for proceedings in a District Court touching the guardianship of infants.

Semble.—That the powers of the Madras High Court to which the suit was subsequently transferred under cl. 13 of the Letters Patent of 1865 relating to the case would seem to be confined to powers which but for the transfer might have been exercised by the District Court.

Where after the suit had been so transferred to the High Court, the Judge on the Original side of the High Court declared the infants (one of whom was about to attain the age of majority, viz., 18 years) to be Wards of the Court and then under S. 7 of the latter Act declared that the respondent was their guardian so as thereby to prolong the minorities of the boys until they attained respectively the age of 21 under S. 3 of the Indian Majority Act.

Held—that the latter order was not competent to the District Court in the suit in question. Nor was it competent to the High Court, whatever might be its jurisdiction to declare the infants Wards of Court, having regard to the fact that the infants were not before the Court and their interests were not adequately represented before the Judge. Further no order declaring a guardian could, by reason of S. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act, be made during the respondent's lifetime, unless in the opinion of the Court he was unfit to be their guardian, which was not the case here.

That, although the respondent remained the guardian of his sons, notwithstanding his letter authorizing the appellant to act as their guardian, and the authority given by him to the defendant was always revocable, the question was whether in the events which had happened he was still entitled to exercise the functions of guardian and resume the custody of his sons and alter the scheme which had been formulated for their education and was at liberty to revoke the authority in the interest of the minors, and this question had to be determined having regard to the interests and welfare of the minors, bearing in mind their parentage and religion, and could only be decided by a Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants and in their presence.

That the question whether or not it would be to the interest of the minors to deliver them over to their father could not be properly decided without framing a definite issue to that effect and upon evidence admitted as relevant on other issues.

Such an issue can be properly determined only when the infants are properly represented and their wishes ascertained.

That the relief asked for being a mandatory order directing the appellant to take possession of the person of the infants in England, and bring them to India, and hand them over to their father, and regard being had to the age of the infants, any attempt on the part of the appellant to comply with this order would, if the infants had refused to return to India, have been contrary to the law of England and would have at once exposed the appellant to proceedings on a writ of habeas corpus in England. No Court ought to make an order which might lead to such consequences.

That the utmost that a Court of competent jurisdiction in India could do under the circumstances of this case was to order the appellant to concur with the respondent, as the infant's guardian, in taking proceedings in England to regain the custody and control of his sons.

Leave having been given by the Judicial Committee to the infants to intervene in this appeal and they having expressed their unwillingness to return to India or abandon their chance of obtaining a University education in England, the order of the Madras High Court directing the appellant to take them back to India could not be lawfully carried out without the consent of the boys or without an order from the Court exercising the jurisdiction of the Crown over infants in England. *Mrs. Annie Besant v. B being unable owing to caste difficulties to keep the infant in his custody acquiesced in the appointment in December 1905 of the infant's mother as guardian of his person, he himself continuing to be the guardian of the infant's property. The infant and his mother took up residence with the latter's sister F, and before her death she made a Will clearly expressing therein her wish that her sister F should, after her death, be the infant's guardian. On her death B applied for the appointment of a nephew of his as the guardian of the person of the infant, and F also made a similar application. The uncle and not the aunt was appointed by the District Court. On appeal, the High Court ascertained on enquiry from B as well as his nominee that neither of them was willing to take the infant into his family circle, and their idea was to place him in charge of a tutor. The infant himself on being examined by the High Court expressed his preference for the aunt. It was found by the District Judge that the education of the infant in her aunt's house had been satisfactory :

Held, that it was desirable for the welfare of the minor that the aunt and not the uncle should be appointed guardian of the infant's person, and that her being a purdanashin lady did not make her unfit to be so appointed, as it was undesirable that the infant should at his age be removed from the influences of home life. But it was ordered and the aunt gave assurance that the grandfather and the uncle should have free access to the infant.

The primary point for consideration in such a case is what, in the circumstances of the case, is for the welfare of the infant.

In appointing a guardian the Court will pay great attention to the wishes of the father or mother of the infant unless such a course would be disadvantageous to the infant, and regard is always paid to the wishes of the minor if he be of years of discretion. *Fulkumari Bibee v. Plaintiff on attaining 21 years of age filed a suit asking the Court to set aside the sales of his share in the ancestral property by his cousin H, who was appointed by Court guardian of his shares and also for partition and possession of his share. He impleaded the alienees as parties to the suit but he did not join the guardian as a party. Plaintiff also alleged that the debts for which the property was alienated were really the private debts of H, who got himself appointed as guardian by Court and obtained permission to alienate them by falsely representing to the Court that these debts were binding on the plaintiff.

Held, that the Court could not permit the plaintiff to let H, his guardian who is said to have defrauded him, go scot-free, making apparently no attempt whatever to make him account for the consideration received, and secure from a perfectly innocent person property which he has lawfully purchased.

Held, also, that the plaintiff, who has actually approved the Court's order of appointment so far as it appointed H, guardian of his person and is actually relying on it as extending his minority up to 21 years in order to meet the plea of limitation, cannot be allowed to rely on the order to support one part of his case and to treat it as a nullity to support another part.

It cannot be assumed that the Court, when making the order appointing H, guardian, had not in view facts which would constitute it a legal one. Valji Jasaraj v. Tayabji Mulla Mahomed Bhoys, 8 S.L.R. 44.

to be followed in case of marriage—Court's power to restrain unsuitable marriage—Appeal—Revision.

The guardian for marriage of a Mahomedan infant (a Ward of Court), who may have negotiated for the marriage, must apply to the District Judge for his sanction. Notice of the application should be given to the infant, to the guardian of the person if he happens to be different from the guardian for marriage, and also to such relations of the minor as the Judge may deem necessary. He will then consider the objections and suggestions, if any, and then determine whether the proposal of the guardian for marriage is for the true welfare of the minor or whether the marriage is unsuitable by reason of incongruity of ages, inequality of rank and fortune or any like reason. If, on the materials before the District Judge, he is satisfied that the marriage is not unsuitable, he will sanction it.

Under the Mahomedan law, the guardian of the person of an infant is not necessarily the guardian for the marriage of the girl. Under that law, none but a Moslem can act as a guardian for marriage of a Mahomedan minor.

The Mahomedan Law does not require that the guardian should provide suitable marriage for his ward, though it gives him the power to contract a marriage for the infant.

The Mahomedan Law on the subject of guardianship in marriage has not been abrogated by implication in S. 24 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

A Ward of Court cannot marry without the consent of the Court. If a proposed marriage is unsuitable, the Court can, as representing the sovereign authority in whom the guardianship of all infants is, in theory, vested, restrain the marriage, even through the guardian or the father has given his consent (a).

An order of the District Judge selecting a suitable husband for a Mahomedan girl on the basis of a report of a Hindu Nazir, is not appealable, as the order does not come under S. 47, cl. (1) of the Guardians and Wards Act, read with S. 43, sub-S. (1) and Ss. 24, 25 and 26, and can be set aside only by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. *Monijam Bibi v. Held, that an appeal lay inasmuch as the question contested in the appeal was whether the guardian was properly removed; and there being no materials on the record for any opinion as to whether there was a case for the removal of the guardian, the case was sent back to the lower Court so that the matter might be properly dealt with under S. 39 of the Guardians and Wards Act after giving the guardian opportunity to give any explanation he might desire to put forward. Mahadeb Mondal v. (33) Ss. 39, 47, 48—Inherent power—Court's power to recall the previous order appointing guardian—Court having no jurisdiction to appoint guardian—Minor attained majority before application—Court's cognizance of matter required for ends of justice—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), Ss. 115, 151—Jurisdiction to determine that Court has no jurisdiction—Appeal—Revision—Courts power in revision to investigate facts—Appellate and revisional jurisdiction.

A Court has an inherent jurisdiction to recall an order previously made for the appointment of guardian of a minor, on the ground that the minor attained majority before the appointment was made. S. 48 of the Guardians and Wards Act is not a bar to such a proceeding. Such an order (viz., recalling the order previously made for the appointment of guardian) is not appealable, and cl. (g) of S. 47 of the said Act is not applicable.

A Court which exercises powers under the Guardians and Wards Act has inherent jurisdiction to deal with matters brought before it, of which cognizance may be required in the interests of justice.

S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not formulate a new doctrine. It merely furnishes legislative recognition of a well-established principle, which is applicable quite as much to Courts called upon to deal with matters under the Guardians and Wards Act as to ordinary Civil Courts.

When the jurisdiction of a Court is invoked in respect of a particular matter and such jurisdiction is challenged, it is the duty of the Court to determine the essential facts of the actual existence of which alone the Court is competent to assume jurisdiction; in other words, the Court has jurisdiction to determine that it has no jurisdiction to deal with the matter brought before it.

If, even after the order has been made on the application, the Court is apprised that it has been made to assume jurisdiction in a matter over which it has in reality no jurisdiction, the Court has inherent power to investigate the matter and to recall the previous order if it transpires that it has been made without jurisdiction.

It is competent to the Court to investigate the facts in revision, if the Court is satisfied that such a step is needed in the ends of justice (a).

A Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction investigates facts, and, if necessary, substitutes its own appreciation of the evidence for that of the primary Court. But when the Court as a Court of revision looks into the evidence, it does so with a view to determine whether the subordinate Court has assumed a jurisdiction which it did not possess, or declined a jurisdiction which it did possess, or has in the exercise of its jurisdiction acted illegally or with material irregularity.

A Court of revision may look into the evidence to determine whether the subordinate Court has acted illegally or irregularly in the exercise of its jurisdiction. Rathmoni Das v. Ganada Sundari Das, 20 C.L.J. 218—19 C.W.N. 84.

- (1) S. 7—City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888), Ss. 289, 293—Public streets—Vesting of Public streets in Municipality—Laying of Railway lines under statutory authority over such streets—Land need not be acquired—Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894).

Where a Railway Company wishes to lay a line of railway upon and across a street, it is neither necessary nor appropriate to proceed under the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition of the land. If the Government, under S. 7 of the Railways Act, were to direct the Collector to take order for the acquisition of land, he would make his award and take possession, and the land would then vest absolutely in Government for the Railway Company free from all incumbrances. The land would then cease to be portion of the street and the Railway Company would be enabled to exercise the power given to it of constructing the railway upon and across the street.

The effect of S. 289 of the Bombay City Municipal Act, 1888, vesting all public streets, and the pavements, stones and other materials in the corporation and under the control of the Commissioner is only to vest in that body such property as is necessary for the control and maintenance of the street as a highway for public purposes.

The Great Indian Peninsula Railway in constructing the Harbour Branch Railway laid down the lines of rails in a level crossing across a public street known as the Sewri Koliwada Road, vested in the Municipal Corporation of Bombay under S. 289 of the Bombay City Municipal Act. The Municipal Corporation sued to obtain a declaration that the Railway Company could not lawfully maintain their lines of railway across the street in question without either obtaining permission granted by the Corporation and confirmed by the Government under S. 293 of the Act or acquiring the land required for the level crossing under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. The defendant company pleaded that they had authority to make and maintain the lines of railway under S. 7 of the Railways Act. The lower Court granted the declaration sought, on the ground that the defendant company could make its private terms with the Municipality or it could acquire the portion of the street it needed under the Land Acquisition Act, but until it had done the one or the other, it was a trespasser on Municipal land. The railway company having appealed:

Held, dismissing the suit, that the statutory authority under S. 7 of the Railways Act being established, the application of S. 293 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act was excluded by the words "notwithstanding anything in any other enactment for the time being in force." The Great Indian Peninsula Railway v. forming part of a consignment, due either to the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or to theft by or wilful neglect of its servants, transport agents or carriages." Upon a suit being brought by the plaintiff against the Company for damages for loss of the contents of some packages.

Held, that the onus lay upon the plaintiff to prove that the loss was not caused by any of the risks undertaken by the owner under the Risk-note (a).

The plaintiff brought this suit against the East Indian Railway Company to recover damages for not having delivered certain goods that had been consigned to the plaintiff, after having served a notice on the Goods Superintendent. There was no evidence to show that the notice ever reached the Agent of the Company.

Held, that the plaintiff was bound to serve the notice as provided by S. 77, Railways Act, upon the Agent of the Railway Company, and that the notice served by the plaintiff was bad and, therefore, the suit was not maintainable (a).

A promise made by the Goods Superintendent to pay a liquidated sum to the plaintiff as the value of the lost goods, without the knowledge of the Agent of the Railway Company, is not binding upon the Company. Radha Kissen v. East Indian Railway Company, 21 Ind. Cas. 970=19 O.W.N. 62.

A handed a consignment of chillies to the North-Western Railway to be carried to Agra Fort (G.I.P. Ry.) for B. When B went to take delivery of the chillies at Agra Fort, he found the bags loose. He requested the station staff to re-weigh and allow him to make a note of the shortage, if any. The station staff refused to re-weigh them and allow B to make entries in their books, which, according to them, were incorrect.

Ultimately, the Railway authorities of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, sold the chillies, and, after deducting their charges, offered the balance of the sale-proceeds to B who declined to accept it. B, sued the Great Indian Peninsular Railway for damages:

Held, (1) that the Great Indian Peninsular Railway were not liable to be sued for non-delivery of the goods;

(2) that the only suit that could have been brought was one against the North-Western Railway for non-delivery of goods;

(3) that B, was not entitled to make any entries in the Company's books;

(4) that the Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company, as Agents of North-Western Railway, were entitled to refuse to deliver goods on the condition insisted by B;

The plaintiffs sued the B. B. & C. I. Railway Company, at Agra for compensation for the shortage of goods consigned to them from a station on the B. N. W. Railway to Agra Fort. The plaint however did not mention that the Agra Fort Railway station was under the administration of B. B. & C. I. Railway Company, but it contained an allegation to the effect that the above Company, was bound to deliver the full quantity of goods consigned to the plaintiffs. The defendant Company pleaded that the plaint did not disclose a cause of action against it, inasmuch as it did not contain an explicit averment that the loss, injury or destruction of a portion of the consignment had occurred while it was in transit on the defendant's railway, it further pleaded that, the B. N. W. Railway Company not having been impleaded, the suit was bad in law. The plaintiffs, thereupon, filed a replication alleging that the defendant Company had accepted liability for loss and the conduct of the Company showed that the loss, injury or destruction had taken place on their line.

Held that the plaint and the replication taken together disclosed a cause of action against the defendant Company, and the necessary issue had been fairly raised and ought to have been tried out and the plaint ought not to have been rejected.

Held, further that, under the provisions of S. 80 of the Railways Act, the plaintiff had the option of impleading either the Railway Administration to which the goods were delivered by the consignor or the Railway Administration on whose railway the loss, injury or destruction of a portion of the consignment had occurred. Makhan Lal v. Act I of 1894 (Land Acquisition)—(Continued).

Ordinarily, where a claimant contests before a Civil Court the amount of compensation award under the Land Acquisition Act by a Collector, the burden is upon him to show that the amount so awarded is calculated on a wrong basis; but where such award was made without taking any evidence, that burden becomes very light; the mere ipse dixit of a Collector has very little weight and is not prima facie evidence of the correctness of the award and the Collector has to justify his award under S. 19 (1) (d) of the Act (a).

* Speculation as to the effect which any suggested development may produce on prices must be excluded, except to the extent to which it is shown that such speculations had actually entered into the market price of the land to be acquired at the date of declaration.

Where, therefore, on the date of such declaration, there is a scheme of development of the town and that was known generally, enhancement in the value of the market rates consequent on such development must be taken into account, for determining the market-value of the land to be acquired (b).

Where there are two data available for ascertaining the market-value of the land sought to be acquired, one based on the market value of the neighbouring lands and the other on the classification of lands into agricultural and building sites, it is safer to adopt the former valuation in determining the market-value of the land sought to be acquired and not the latter, as it is an uncertain basis. *Marwadi Padmaji Mlachand v. (11) Ss. 18, 19—Procedure prescribed by Ss. 18 and 19 must be strictly observed—Whether time can be extended on ground of minority.

In this case the award of the Collector was made on 7-6-1912 and a vague petition on unstamped paper was presented to the Collector by all the respondents on 11-7-1912. This petition was returned as unstamped. On 23-7-1912, H, one of the respondents, acting for himself, presented a written objection to the award, but in it he merely asked the Collector to review his award and grant him further compensation. The Collector rejected this application as time-barred. On 3-8-1912, H, filed another petition before the Collector which was also rejected as time-barred. On 14-8-1912, G, another respondent, on his own behalf, applied to the Collector practically for a review of his award. This application was also rejected as time-barred. The other respondents M and A, who were minors, made no application to the Collector after the rejection of the unstamped petition of 11-7-1912, but their mother was acting as their guardian.

The Collector, however, after rejecting the various petitions made to him, directed that the applications be forwarded to the Divisional Judge "to be put up along with the other cases before him." The Divisional Judge apparently regarded this order of the Collector as a reference under Ss. 18 and 19 of the Act and acted on it.

Held that the Divisional Judge had no jurisdiction to deal with the case of the respondents; because (1) there was no application by any of the respondents asking the Collector to take action under S. 18 of the Act; (2) these petitions were time-barred; (3) the Collector rejected the petitions and did not refer them under S. 19 to the Divisional Judge; and (4) so far as minor respondents M and A were concerned, there was no application at all before the Collector after their petition of 11-7-1912 was rejected (a).

Held, also that the procedure prescribed by Ss. 18 and 19 of the Act was laid down in very clear terms and must be strictly observed.

Held further that, under S. 18 of the Act, no extension of time was allowable on the ground

An award purporting to be made under this Act was announced by the Collector on 18-8-1910. On 6-5-1910, i.e., more than 6 weeks from the date of the award, the application was made to the Collector requiring that the matter be referred to the Court, under S. 19 of the Act. The reference was made accordingly, but the Divisional Judge found that the claimant's application was time-barred and dismissed it.

Held, on appeal to the Chief Court, that no appeal lay under S. 54 of the Act, as the Court below made no award at all, but merely dismissed the application as time-barred (a).

Quare:—Whether the Chief Court can deal with the case on the revision side.

In this case the award did not bear the full official signature of the officer making it, but was signed 'A. D. Land Acquisition officer'. Held, this signature was sufficient for the purposes of the Act (b).

The fact that the Collector overlooked that the application before him was time-barred would not mean that he 'waived' the question of limitation and cannot bind the Government, and it is open to the Court to hold that the application to the Collector could not form the basis of a reference under Ss. 18 and 19, inasmuch as it was barred by time (c). *Ghulam Mohy-ud-din v. A Noabad Mehal held under Government implies a hereditary and transferable title in perpetuity, subject to payment of rent for all lands under cultivation.

Where certain properties included in a Noabad Mehal held under the Government were acquired under the Land Acquisition Act:

Held—that the mere fact that the rent was enhanceable did not justify the Court awarding half the compensation money to Government, as Government would not in ordinary course increase the assessment unless the assets of the property also increased.

(17) S. 23—Compensation—Market value of basti land—Principles of assessment of value—Recognised mode—Taking average of prices at recent sales.

Per Maclean, C.J.—In order to ascertain the market-value of property at a certain time, it is an indicium and a valuable indicium as to the value of the property to ascertain what prices have been recently obtained for lands more or less similarly situated in the same neighbourhood. But the circumstances in each case under which the purchases are made must be borne in mind. If the plot be a small plot, a higher price is probably obtained than if it were a large one. The precise situation of the land in each case is often a matter of very considerable importance as either enhancing or lowering the price. Again, a particular person owning an adjoining property or who has some particular object in desiring to acquire some special piece of land would be inclined to pay a higher price. A smaller price would be given for an undivided share with its possible burden of litigation to obtain a partition than for an entire property.

In the case of basti land, in a city like Calcutta, the principle of assessing the amount of compensation to be allowed at so many years' purchase of the rental is not unsound. If twenty years' purchase be arrived at, after considering the future possibilities of the land for building purposes, the situation of the land, the fact that it has been opened out by new roads, that it is near an open space, and matters of that class, it cannot be said that such a principle of valuation was per se wrong or contrary to law.

Per Banerjee, J.—The market-value of land to be acquired should be ascertained, not according to its present disposition, but laid out in the most lucrative and advantageous way in which the owner could dispose of it (a).

There are three recognised modes of determining the market-value; first, by ascertaining the price or prices, at which the whole or any part or parts of the land acquired has or have been sold and purchased in recent years; second by ascertaining the net annual income of the property and by taking a certain number of years' purchase of that income depending upon the nature of that property; and third, by ascertaining the price at which the lands in the vicinity have been sold and purchased, and making all due allowance for situation and the circumstances attending each particular sale (b).

In going by averages, that is, in adopting the third mode mentioned above, the exceptional instances should always be excluded from the computation. The only instances to be taken into consideration are those that are as similar as possible to the one under consideration, similar not only in point of site but also as regards all other intended circumstances. Amrita Lal Basak v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, 24 Ind. Cas. 78.

A piece of bustee land was acquired at the expense of the Corporation of Calcutta, and the Special Land Acquisition Judge on a reference under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, refused to admit evidence relating to the under-tenants and the rents paid by them and disallowed questions put to a value with regard to sales of other lands in the neighbourhood which were not bustee lands :

Held—That cl. (c) of S. 557 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, which amends the Land Acquisition Act, means that, when a land is compulsorily acquired, any use to which the land may be put in future, should not be taken into consideration in determining its value, but the valuation shall be determined according to the market-value then existing of the land or building in the position that the matters then were. That this clause precludes evidence being given of the purposes to which bustee lands can be put in future, and the Land Acquisition Judge rightly refused to admit evidence relating to the under-tenants and the rents paid by them, such matter being not relevant for the purpose of ascertaining the market-value as defined by sub-S. (c) of S. 557.

That the Judge was right in disallowing the questions put to the witness with regard to sales of other lands in the neighbourhood which were not bustee lands, although in ordinary cases under S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act such evidence would have been admissible.

That the presumption under cl. (d) of S. 557 is a rebuttable presumption, and it is only until the contrary is shown that the Court is entitled to presume that twenty-five times the annual value of the property as entered in the Assessment-book is the value of the property within the meaning of sub S. (c). Mainendra Chandra Nandi v. The Secretary of State for India, 18 C. W. N. 884=28 Ind. Cas. 412=41 C. 967.

J. entered into a written agreement for sale of certain sugar as guarantee broker of F. & Co. The agreement contained a clause by which the parties agreed to refer all matters in dispute between them to arbitration. J. failed to sell certain consignments of sugar and became insolvent. F. & Co. proved their claim for damages against J. before the Official Receiver. The amount of damages was subsequently reduced by the Judge. The Receiver then sued to recover from F. & Co. the balance with interest of Rs. 25,000, the guarantee deposit. F. & Co. wanted this suit to be referred to arbitration under the arbitration clause in the agreement.

Held, that the main question in the suit which related to the amount of damages and which had been already decided by the Judge in insolvency proceedings depended upon a difficult question of law (a).

That the main question could now be litigated only with the leave of the Court in view of S. 16 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and that the insolvency proceedings would be sufficient reason why the matter should not be referred to arbitration in the discretion vested in Court by S. 19 of the Arbitration Act. *James Finlay & Co. v. his debts which exceeded Rs. 500. The Court was not satisfied on the evidence in the case that the debtor's debts exceeded his assets and dismissed the application. Held that S. 15 (1) of the Provincial Insolvency Act, which empowers the Court to dismiss the petition for any "sufficient cause," deals entirely with a creditor's petition and does not apply to a debtor's petition, and a debtor whose debts amount to Rs. 500 is entitled on his application to be declared an insolvent under S. 16 (1).

There is nothing in S. 16 (2) (b) of the Provincial Insolvency Act which bars the holder of a mortgage-decree from executing his decree, even after the judgment-debtor is adjudicated an insolvent. Even if he give to the term 'property of the insolvent' so wide a definition as to include an interest in property transferred by way of mortgage, even then the plaintiff could take advantage of the sweeping exception created by S. 16 (5). *H. —(Continued).

'Salary' is 'property' of the insolvent within the meaning of S. 46, sub-S. (2), cl. (a) of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

The statutory law in this country, in making an appropriation of income for the benefit of a creditor, fixes the amount under S. 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with sub-S. (2) of S. 16 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

- A debtor, when arrested in execution of a decree, applied to be adjudged an insolvent. An order for adjudication was made on the 24th August, 1909, in his favour, and he was directed, pending realisation by sale of his assets, existent or suspected, to pay one-fourth of his salary, i.e., Rs. 25 per month into Court until the sum realized from him should equal one third of the family debt for which the creditor had obtained a decree. On the 24th February, 1910, the District Judge recorded an order to the effect that the amount deposited by the insolvent should remain in deposit. On the 11th April 1910, he ordered that, as the insolvent had failed to abide by the condition that he should pay one-fourth of his salary to the Receiver, the order of adjudication should be annulled.

Held, that the order for adjudication was properly made on the 24th August, 1909, but the condition, which was annexed to that order, was imposed without jurisdiction. Such adjudication could not be cancelled, under sub-S. (1) of S. 42 of the Provincial Insolvency Act.

That it was open to the High Court, not only to reverse the order of the 11th April, 1910, but also to consider what direction should be given when the order had been vacated at the instance of the insolvent.

That the District Judge should have directed the Receiver to arrange for payment to him of one half of the salary earned by the insolvent. Ram Chandra Neogi v. Syama Charan Bose, 19 O.L.J. 83=21 Ind. Cas. 950=18 C.W.N. 1052.

(20) Ss. 18, 36, 43 (3)—Power of District Judge to dispossess third persons of property belonging to insolvent—Appeal—Leave to appeal.

S. 18 of the Provincial Insolvency Act empowers a Court, where it appoints a Receiver, to remove any person in whose possession or custody any property of the insolvent is from possession or custody thereof, and put it in charge of the Receiver provided the insolvent had a right to remove him. The Court has also power to enquire whether certain property in possession of a third party is or is not the property of the insolvent.

S. 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not apply to a case where the Court adjudicates certain property, in possession of a third person,

(95) S. 37, sub-Ss. (1) and (2)—Fraudulent preference, how determined—Debtor's intention and motive material—Preference due entirely to pressure from creditor if fraudulent—Creditor if may plead good faith—Onus.

Under S. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, good faith on the part of the creditor affords him no protection where the intention of the debtor to give him preference is established, although sub-S. (2) of the section protects a person who, in good faith and for valuable consideration, has acquired title through or under a creditor of the insolvent.

"Preference" implies an act of free will, and there can be no "preference" where the act is the result of pressure brought to bear on the debtor by the creditor, though there would be fraudulent preference where, notwithstanding that the payment or disposition might never have been made but for the impetuosity of the creditor, it is also a fact that the payment would never have been made but for the desire to prefer.

The presumption of fraudulent intention may be repelled, if it is apparent that the debtor acted in fulfilment of a prior agreement, but it will not suffice to prove that the debtor was moved by a mere sense of honour or a sense of duty or of moral obligation or that he acted from motives of kindness or gratitude. The intention of the debtor is the paramount consideration and if the transaction can be properly referred to some other motive than that of giving the particular creditor a preference over the others, the payment is not fraudulent.

In the determination of the question whether a person is able or unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money, the fact that he has money locked up which at a later period may be available for the payment of his debts is immaterial.

Where an act is impeached as a fraudulent preference, the onus of proof lies on the Receiver, even if the debtor was insolvent at the time of the payment and knew himself to be so, though in such a case the onus may shift. Nripendra Nath Sahu v. Ashutosh Ghose, 19 C.W.N. 157.

Held by the Full Bench that an appeal from an order of an Additional Judge convicting the insolvent of concealing his account books is a civil appeal.

The Bombay Gas Company had laid its gas main of 8 inches along a street known as Babu Khote Street in Bombay, at a level of 2 feet 2½ inches to 2 feet 5 inches below the surface of a road. Towards the end of 1907, the Bombay Electric Supply and Tramways Company laid its electric traction cable along the street in earthen ware troughing diagonally across and over the Gas Company's main; and covered the gas main totally for a distance of 12 feet, and partially for a distance of about 6 feet, leaving only 1½ inches to 3 inches of earth over the gas main. In 1913, the Gas Company were desirous of replacing the 8 inches main by a 4 inches main; but on digging the surface of the street they found that about 36 feet of their main was rendered inaccessible for the purpose of removing the same by reason of the Electric Company's cable. The Gas Company had to effect a diversion in the lay of their new main; and they claimed from the Electric Company the costs incurred in such diversion, under S. 19 of the Electricity Act, 1910. To arbitrate upon the differences between the two Companies, Government appointed arbitrators under S. 53 of the Act.

The arbitration stated a special case under S. 10, cl. (b), of the Arbitration Act, for the opinion of the High Court upon the following questions:—

(a) Whether, upon a true construction of the Electricity Act, the damage claimed to have been suffered by the Gas Company was the subject of compensation under S. 19 of the Act?

(b) Whether, by reason of the Gas Company not having availed themselves of the provisions of S. 14 of the Act, they were entitled to any remedy in respect of the position of the cables?

Held, (1) answering the first question in the affirmative, that the damage claimed to have been suffered lay in the Gas Company having been deprived of access to its own property by acts done by the Electric Company in the exercise of its power.

(2) That S. 14, Electricity Act, was no bar to the claim, for the provisions of the section applied to acts done by the operator or by the owner at his request and expense; whereas in the present case the complaint was that the Gas Company was cut off from access to its own property by acts done in the exercise of its power by the Electric Company and that those acts were not so done as to cause the least damage, detriment or inconvenience to the Gas Company that might be. The Bombay Gas Company and The Bombay Electric Company, Re, 16 Bom. Act XXVII of 1855 (Sonthal Parganas) —(Continued).

the Sonthal Parganas Act, although the same individual may preside over two different Courts. In the trial of civil suits in Courts established under the Bengal Civil Courts Act, the general laws and regulations are to be applied, whereas the trial of suits in the Courts of officers under the Sonthal Parganas Act is removed from the operation of the general laws and regulations and is governed by "Directions" issued by the Lieutenant-Governor.

A tenant whose right is not saleable may, in execution of a decree for rent, be, with the consent of the Deputy Commissioner, evicted and land may then be resettled. The eviction in execution can be effected only by the Court executing the decree.

S. 2 of Reg. II. of 1883 was framed for the protection of the raiyat.

If the execution Court decides in favour of ejectment, the order is not to be carried out until it has been sanctioned by the Deputy Commissioner. The scope of the order as made by the executing Court cannot be widened by the Deputy Commissioner, as a matter of fact. *Darbari Panjara v. When an order allowing a plaintiff to deposit deficit Court-fees has been made and complied with, no question of limitation can be raised. But it is not proper for a Court to extend the period of limitation allowed by law to the prejudice of defendants, by giving the plaintiff time to deposit deficit Court-fees, when there is no question of any mistake, merely to suit the convenience of the plaintiff.

Direct evidence to prove a transaction benami cannot be expected, since the whole object of such a transaction is to suppress evidence of the real facts. The true facts can be proved by circumstantial evidence.

When, on a share of a revenue paying estate, in respect of which a separate account has been opened, being put up for sale, the highest offer does not equal the amount due thereon, and the Collector stops the sale and declares that the entire estate will be put up to sale for arrears, unless the other recorded sharer or sharers or one or more of them shall within 10 days purchase the share in arrear by paying to Government the whole arrear due from the share, and more than one such recorded co-sharer separately make the necessary payment within the time specified, the Collector must recognise as purchaser the depositor who first pays the whole amount, or, if there are more depositors than one, must recognise as joint purchasers those whose payments first amount to the total arrears due.

S. 33 of Act XI of 1859 applies to sales under S. 14, and when the first payer has been declared by the Collector to be the purchaser, a co-sharer who has paid up the arrears subsequently cannot have the sale set aside by suit in the Civil Court, except upon proof of the circumstances specified in S. 33. Such a sale under S. 14 cannot be attacked as a nullity and as such not requiring proof of those circumstances (a).

It is not proper for a Court to extend the period of limitation beyond that allowed by law and to the prejudice of defendants when there is no question of any mistake, merely to suit the convenience of the plaintiff.

Therefore, where a suit was instituted on the last day with a Court-fee of Rs. 800 in defect and the Court allowed two adjournments to put in this money and subsequently the Court was closed for three days and the money was paid on the opening day:

Held, that the order of the Court was quite unjustifiable, but as the order had been complied with, the question of limitation could not be raised.

Direct evidence of a benami transaction cannot be expected. The whole object of such a transaction is to suppress evidence of the real facts. But the true facts can be proved by circumstantial evidence.

As there is no previous reference in S. 14 of the Bengal Revenue Sale Law, 1859, to any sharer, the words "other recorded sharer" must mean "a recorded sharer of a share other than the share exposed for sale." This perhaps would by implication exclude any sharer of the share exposed for sale, even though he himself might have paid his quota of the revenue due on the share exposed for sale. It seems doubtful if the Legislature intended this. It is clear from S. 33 that defaulting proprietors may purchase at sales for arrears of revenue and there is no reason why they should be excluded from sales under S. 14.

The word "other" in S. 14 seems to be share in arrears. The framers of the section did not advert to the possibility of more than one separate account falling into arrears.

Act XI of 1859 (Revenue Sale Law)—(Old.).

S. 14 was intended merely to give co-sharers a chance of saving the estate and to secure the payment of the revenue, and was not at all intended to deprive the rights of the co-sharers inter se.

The purchase is effected by the payment of the arrears. As soon as the payment is made the purchase is complete and there is nothing left for any one else to buy. The Collector is bound, therefore, to recognise the depositor who first pays the whole amount, or if there are more depositors than one, to recognise as joint purchasers those whose payments first amount to the total arrears due.

S. 33 of the Bengal Revenue Sale Law applies to sales under S. 14, and where the plaintiff has suffered no injury, S. 33 is fatal to the suit for setting aside a sale under S. 14 (a).

Where the defendant has been formally declared the purchaser under S. 14, and the land has been delivered into his possession, to take it away from him and to give it to the plaintiff would be a manifest annulment of the sale. Bahuria Sambho Kuer v. Harihar Prasad, 24 Ind. Cas. 276=41 C. 1092.

S. 36 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act, 1859, does not bar a suit for possession of lands as appertaining to a taluk purchased at a revenue sale in the name of a benamidar (a).

The language of the section should be given a restricted interpretation and not extended to cases not manifestly covered by it (b).

The word "purchaser" in S. 37 of the Act does not mean only "a certified purchaser or his heirs or assignees." The real purchaser is a purchaser within the meaning of the section, and is entitled to avoid incumbrances.

In a suit to avoid incumbrances (howlas) under S. 37 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act, 1859, the defendants are bound to prove something more than the existence of the howlas and their long possession, and must establish that the lands in suit actually appertain to the howlas named or that the howlas still exist and that the defendants are owners of them or at least have been in possession of them for a sufficiently long period on assertion of their title under the howlas (c).

entitle a purchaser to annul incumbrances in respect of land in his possession, the benefit of the 4th exception to S. 37 of the Act of 1859 must be limited only to such portions of land as are covered by buildings, tanks, etc., and cannot be extended to cover those lands included in the lease on which no permanent works have been constructed (d). *Mathuranath Ghorhal v. An intermediate landlord is bound to protect his own tenant from all paramount claims, and commits an act of fraud against his under-tenure-holder when he enters into an agreement with another person to get rid of the under-tenure by means of a fraud and fictitious sale for arrears of rent.

A tenure-holder deliberately defaulted to pay the superior landlord his just dues, with the intention that the decree might be obtained against him and his tenure sold, so that the under-tenure might be extinguished, an unencumbered title conveyed to the purchaser and the maximum of benefit conferred upon the defaulter. The plan succeeded; the decree was made under the provisions of the Rent Law and was executed. The purchaser was settled before the sale and the price also was fixed:

Held, that the purchaser was in no better position than a purchaser by a private transfer and his claim for annulment of the under-tenure must be refused. Uma Charan Mandal v. Midnapore Zemindari Co., 20 C.L.J. 11=23 Ind. Cas. 896=19 C.W.N. 270.

Amendment order made under what power—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. VI, r. 18—Amendment made after fifteen days of order, whether bad.

The High Court in an appeal held that the plaint in the suit did not specify correctly the property in respect of which rent was due as it should have done according to S. 47, of the Chota Nagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act of 1879, and acting on an agreement between the parties directed that the description in the plaint should be amended, and ordered that after such amendment had taken place the sale proclamation should be drawn up afresh. The case was remitted to the first Court through the lower appellate Court, but the latter Court allowed an amendment of the plaint and left it to the decree-holder to take further steps:

Held, (1) that the order of amendment made by the High Court was not made under O. VI of the Civ. Pro. Code, but under the power of the Court to order that certain steps should be taken by the parties to enable the differences between them to be properly settled, and, therefore, the amendment is not out of time though not made within fifteen days under O. Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy).

(1) S. 5 (1), (5)—Tenure-holder—Presump-tion, if rebutted—Tenure-holder reserving a portion of land to be cultivated by himself—Land partly cultivated by under-tenant and partly by tenant—Lease, construction of.

A person who has acquired from a proprietor a right to hold land for the purpose of collect-ing rents or bringing it under cultivation by establishing tenants on it is prima facie within the definition of a tenure-holder in S. 5 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, but there may be other persons who are tenure-holders, although they may not have acquired a right to hold land for the purpose of collecting rents or bringing it under cultivation by establishing tenants on it; in other words, it is possible for a person to be a tenure-holder, although a part of the land in his occupation is cultivated by himself, and was intended to be cultivated by himself. The fact that the land has been culti-vated by the under-tenants is perfectly consis-tent with the inference that the tenant is a tenure-holder, although he has reserved a por-tion of the land to be cultivated by himself or by his servants.

The presumption of a tenant being a tenure-holder, arising from holding an area exceed-ing 100 standard bighas, is not rebutted by showing that he has reserved a portion of the land to be cultivated by himself or by his servants.

Where a grant was made in order that the grantees might cultivate the land after making it fit for cultivation at his own expense by his own efforts and the lease also provided that "the grantee may enjoy the land by cultivating it or having it cultivated; and that it will be competent to the grantee to make such other arrangements or adopt such other means as he might consider necessary for cultivating the same and the grantor would not raise any objection thereto."

Held, that the terms of the lease did not negative the statutory presumption under S. 5 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Where the grant was for the purpose of reclamation, and the grantee was expected to reclaim the land at his own expense, and in the lease, there was a period of remission fixed, during which no rent was to be paid on account of the land itself, the rate of rent itself was fixed in perpetuity and a premium was paid by the grantee to the grantor:

Held, that the grant was intended to be that of a tenure. Bibhudendra Mansingh Bhrambar Rai v. Debendra Nath Das, 20 C.L.J. 140.

Certain lands were formed by gradual accretion by recession of a river. These lands were resumed by the Government and were settled with plaintiff on the 9th April, 1903. The land was held by the defendant under a lease granted to him by the plaintiff (who was a co-sharer proprietor to the extent of two thirds share) and her co-sharers, on the 19th February, 1884.

Held, that, in respect of the two-thirds share, the plaintiff was bound by the terms of the contract, that is, she was entitled to realise rent at the rate mentioned in the lease, and in respect of the remaining one-third she was in the position of a stranger and was entitled to realise rent at the rate assessed by the Settlement authorities as payable by the under-tenure-holder of the original estate (a).

That, as in the present case, the Settlement authorities determined the fair rent payable by the actual cultivators of the soil and not by the tenure-holder, the fair rent was assessed under S. 7 of the Bengal Tenancy Act by the High Court acting under S. 103 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy)—(Contd.).

The term "transfer," as used in S. 11 or S. 18 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, includes a lease, as a lease is a transfer of an interest in immoveable property. Therefore, a permanent tenure-holder or a raiyat at a fixed rate of rent is competent to grant a sub-lease of his tenure or holding.

Consequently the sub-lessee may pay money into Court under S. 170, cl. (3), to prevent a sale of the tenure or holding.

The provisions of S. 85 are subject to those of S. 18, in other words, S. 85 has no application to case where S. 18 applies. Hari Mohan v. Atal Krishna Bose, 23 Ind. Cas 925.

- (5) Ss. 12, 63, Sch. II—Permanent tenure, transfer of—Tenant, transferor or transferee—Tender of rent by transferee, coupled with demand of statutory receipt, if valid tender—Landlord if may insist on giving receipt in another form.

The transfer of a permanent tenure under S. 12 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is complete as soon as the document is registered, and a valid transfer under that section operates to discharge the transferor from the liability to pay rent which thereupon passes to the transferee. As a consequence the transferee becomes by operation of law the tenant of the tenure, and the transferor ceases to be the tenant, though he is not thereby necessarily absolved from liability under the terms of the contract between him and the landlord.

Such a transferee when he tenders rent as tenant is entitled under S. 62, Bengal Tenancy Act, to claim a receipt with his name thereon as that of the tenant.

Where the landlord, upon the transferee's demanding it, refused to grant such a receipt and proposed to grant another describing the original tenant as still the tenant of the tenure and the transferee as merely the person in occupation thereof:

Held—that there was a valid tender wrongly refused by the landlord.

A tender is not vitiated because a receipt is asked.

A tenant, who tenders rent with a request for a receipt in the statutory form, does not seek to impose on the landlord any condition on which he is not entitled to insist, and when the landlord refuses to give such a receipt and offers to grant a receipt in a form which would compromise the position of the transferee, there is an improper refusal of a valid tender. *Rup Chand Ghose v. (12) S. 29—Enhancement of rent—Consolidated rent—Partition—Total rent remains unaltered—Distribution of rent by agreement of parties.

The defendant held two separate tenancies under the plaintiff and his co-sharers. In 1866 the holding were amalgamated and the consolidated rent was fixed at Rs. 80. In 1892, there was a partition amongst the superior landlords; the consequence was that the disputed land fell into the share of the plaintiff, and by agreement of parties, Rs. 16-4 was fixed as the fair rent payable in respect thereof. The defendant contended that as, before 1866, Rs. 7 was payable as annual rent in respect of that land, there was an enhancement in contravention of S. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act:

Held, that there was no enhancement at all.

If the total rent remained unaltered, its distribution, by agreement of parties, over different parcels of land, did not constitute enhancement within the meaning of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Rowshan Sircar v. Shyama Charan Chakrabarty, 20 C.L.J. 331.

There was originally a jama held by the defendant and his two brothers. This jama was partitioned by the three, and then the defendant alone executed a fresh kabuliyat on an enhanced rent for an area which included not only the part of the original jama allotted to him on the partition, but also some additional land of which he had taken possession. There was no evidence to show how much of the new holding belonged to the original holding and how much was additional land. The increase in the rent was agreed to in consideration of the landlord's remitting the nazrana usually payable on the settlement of fresh lands with a tenant, and also of his recognizing the sub-division of the original holding:

Held, (1) that the onus of proving that a kabuliat contravenes the provisions of S. 29, cl. (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act is on the tenant (a).

(2) That S. 29, cl. (b) had no application to the circumstances of this case.

(16) Ss. 29, 74, 147-A, 147-B—Compromise decree—Enhancement—Rent in kind—Illegal cess—Record of rights, entry in—Presumption rebutted.

In the record of rights, the rent which was payable in kind was stated to be one half of the produce. In a suit subsequently brought, the landlord claimed more than a half-share of the produce, and the tenant did not resist the claim. In fact, the common case of both the parties was that, for a long series of years, the tenant paid rent to the landlord at the rate alleged, and they jointly prayed that a decree might be drawn up in the terms of the petition of compromise filed by them:

Held, that a decree could be drawn up in accordance with the terms of the compromise, as neither S. 29 nor S. 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act governed the matter.

The quantity of produce in excess of a half share admitted by the tenant, to be payable, was not an illegal cess within the meaning of S. 74 of the Bengal Tenancy Act; it was paid as part of the rent, though the landlord used to pay certain officers their salaries from the excess quantity of produce thus received by him from the tenant.

S. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act deals with the cases of enhancement of money rent of an occupancy raiyat and not of rent in kind.

The defendant originally held a jama of Rs. 24 under the plaintiff which did not include the lands now in dispute. At the settlement in 1897, jama upon that holding was increased to Rs. 29-8. Subsequently the defendant was found in possession of these disputed lands and he agreed to pay Rs. 88-8 for his holding provided that the disputed lands were included in that settlement. The defendant executed a kabuliat and the plaintiff agreed to grant a pattah of all the lands, but, as a matter of fact the pattah which he granted did not include the disputed lands. The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession or in the alternative for Rs. 37-2 as rent and cesses :

Held, (1) that the pattah was invalid under S. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act as well as under S. 113 ;

(2) that the jama stated in the kabuliat was void and not by law recoverable by the plaintiff ;

(3) that nothing more could be given to him in any case as there had been already an illegal enhancement ;

(4) that a go-by must be given to the pattah and the oral settlement before it was given effect to (a) ;

An ordinary holding of an under raiyat from year to year is not in itself heritable, and there is nothing in the Bengal Tenancy Act which makes it heritable. But a leasehold property under the Bengal Tenancy Act or under any other Act, if it is for a term of years, is necessarily heritable, inasmuch as the contract enables the lessee to remain in possession for the full term. An under-raiyati cannot therefore be said to be under no circumstances heritable.

—Proper custody—Interference with discretion as to custody by Appellate Court—Evidence Act, Ss. 13, 43, 90—Assertions of right—Admissibility in evidence.

The presumption of S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not rest upon whether one uniform rate of rent has been paid or not, but upon whether the rent has or has not been changed.

Where a tenure-holder asserted in a rent suit, brought against him more than twenty years before the present suit for rent, that his rent was Rs. 71 sicca, and in the present suit rent was claimed at the same rate, and there was no evidence of a change of rent:

Held, (1) that the fact that in the present suit rent was claimed at the same rate was an admission that the rent of the tenure had remained unaltered for upwards of twenty years and was evidence that there had been no change in the rate of rent from the date of the previous suit;

(2) that the defendants were entitled to the presumption under S. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

Documents containing assertions of the right of a tenure-holder to hold the tenure at a certain rental are admissible under S. 13 of the Evidence Act (a).

Whether the custody of a document is a proper one under S. 90 of the Evidence Act, is a question to be decided upon the circumstances of each case; and an Appellate Court will always be slow to interfere with the discretion of the Court below vested in it under S. 90 in refusing or admitting the document. *Rani Dinamani Chaudhureani v. (37) Ss. 61, 62, Sch. III, Art. (2) (a)—Rent suit for—Limitation—Rent deposited—Deposit, insufficient—Agreement to pay rent in cash and kind—Rent in kind to be changed into one of cash on failure to deliver—Cash in lieu of delivery fixed—Market rate of rent in kind, if can be realised—Oral evidence as to market rate, if admissible.

The period of limitation prescribed in Art. 2, cl. (a) of Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable to a suit for rent whenever rent has been deposited under S. 61, even though the allegation of the tenant that what he had deposited was the full amount due at the time may ultimately prove to be incorrect (a).

S. 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable to a case where the parties agreed that, upon failure, to deliver the rent payable in kind, a fixed sum is to be paid in lieu thereof.

Where the tenants agreed to pay Rs. 9 in cash and to deliver a specified quantity of paddy, that, in default of delivery, they would, year by year, according to the instalments specified, pay Rs. 39 as the value of the paddy, and in a subsequent part of the document it was stated that they would pay Rs. 48 in all to the landlord, namely Rs. 9 in cash and Rs. 39 in lieu of the paddy, if it remained undelivered:

Held, that the tenants were liable to pay Rs. 39 for the paddy undelivered and not its market-value at the date of the suit.

The rights of the parties should be determined upon the terms of the contract, and oral evidence was not admissible to show that the parties really intended to enter into a contract different from what had been entered in the instrument. Saei Bhushan Dey v. Umakant Dey, 20 C.L.J. 153.

The plaintiff sued for rent for the years 1814 to 1816 and for the first half-year of 1817. There was also a prayer for ejectment. Seeing that the plaintiff could not succeed in his prayer for ejectment, as he had sued for rent for the first half of 1817, he prayed in second appeal that he might be permitted to withdraw his claim in respect of 1817:

Held, that the application could not be granted at that stage.

The right to bring a tenure or holding to sale under S. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, exists so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant exists.

- The right to bring a tenure or holding to sale under S. 65 being thus exclusively in the landlord, a person to whom certain rents are due and who obtains a decree therefor after he has parted with the property in which the tenancy is situated has no such right.

The view that either from the nature of the debt being arrears of rent, or the decree being for arrears of rent, the tenure becomes ipso facto hypothecated for the debt is untenable upon a proper construction of S. 65. A stranger to the property cannot avail himself of the special remedy given by that section to the landlord to recover arrears attached to the tenure or holding (a).

The special lien which a subordinate tenure-holder acquires under S. 13 of Reg. VIII of 1919 by depositing the putni rents in arrears for which the putni has been advertised for sale by the zemindar under that Regulation, is not affected by proceeding taken in respect of the putni under the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Putni Regulation being a self-contained Act specially excluded from the operation of the Bengal Tenancy Act by S. 195 of that Act.

Where on an application by a landlord under S. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for settlement of fair rent wherein he claimed enhancement against a tenant who was wrongly entered in the record as korfa, and the purpose of whose tenancy was described as residential, the special Judge enhanced the rent :

Held, that the decision of the Special Judge was without jurisdiction inasmuch as the tenancy was not governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act and the tenant was not estopped from raising this plea.

The provision of S. 103-A of the Tenancy Act that the publication of the record-of-rights shall be conclusive evidence that it has been duly made under the Chapter does not preclude a Court from enquiring as to the correctness of the resultant entry ; it only precludes the Court from going into the question whether the procedure under the Chapter has been followed.

The presumption which arises out of S. 104-J of the Bengal Tenancy Act merely refers to the rate and amount of rent. That rent may be payable by one person at one time and by another person at another time, but the mere fact that a certain rate of rent was found to be payable by the defendant's father to the plaintiff gives rise to no presumption that the sons are the plaintiff's tenants.

Where the defendants were recorded as under-raiyats of the plaintiff in the Settlement Record.

But under S. 103-B, the entries only give rise to a presumption, and neither the defendant's failure to take proceedings for the purpose of annulling or rebutting that presumption nor a decision under S. 105 prior to the enactment of S. 105-A can avail to make them conclusive. *Shashi Bhushan Hazra v. In a suit for rent valued at less than Rs. 100, the question at issue between the parties was the amount of rent annually payable by the tenant. The Lower Appellate Court decided that the plaintiff had not been able to prove his allegation as to the rate of rent, and the result was that the Court awarded the amount of rent annually payable which was admitted by the defendant :

Held, that there was a decision of a question of the amount of rent annually payable by the defendant within the meaning of S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that a second appeal lay.

They were recorded in the Record of Rights as persons in occupation, without payment of rent of lands liable to assessment. The plaintiff, who was the purchaser of one of the estates which were sold for arrears of revenue and which comprised a one-fourth undivided share of the plots included within the various tenancies, sued for settlement of fair rents under S. 105 of the Bengal Tenancy Act :

Held, (1) that the purchaser of an entire estate sold for recovery of arrears due on account of the same was in no sense a representative-in-interest of the defaulting proprietor ;

Where a Special Judge, in a suit under S. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act instituted by the tenants against their landlord for amendment of the Record of Rights as to an entry in respect of rent, finds that the tenants are in occupation of land not originally comprised within their tenancy, but is not able to determine the precise area of such excess land, it is open to him to amend the entry and to add a note to the effect that the tenants are in occupation of excess land. on the question of the quantity of land comprised in the tenancy and is, therefore, appealable (a).

A landlord purchased the holding of his tenant at a sale in execution of a decree for money obtained by him against the tenants. In the sale certificate the area of the holding was 20 bighas in all;

Held, that the statement by the landlord that the tenant held under him 20 bighas of land was not a statement in his own favour but one against his proprietary interest, within the meaning of S. 92 of the Evidence Act and covered by sub-cl. The plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title brought a suit against the defendants for khas possession of certain lands. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendants were tenants under the then plaintiff. In that suit, the defendants filed rent receipts which were believed by the Court, to show that they held the lands at a certain jamma. The plaintiffs subsequently instituted the present suit for settlement of fair and equitable rent for the lands which were the subject-matter of the previous suit, and they stated that the fair rent was in excess of the jamma mentioned in the rent receipts filed in the previous suit. The suit was dismissed as not being maintainable under S. 111 of the Bengal Tenancy Act:

Held, that the statement of the defendants in the previous suit that they held the lands at a certain rent was admissible in evidence; that, although there was no finding in the previous suit as to what rent was payable by the defendant, yet the rent receipts filed by the defendant, in the previous suit to show payment of a particular rent were believed by the Court, and the present suit being for determination of a higher rent was rightly considered as a suit for alteration of the rent; but as three months had already expired from the final

No appeal lies to the High Court under S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, from an order refusing to hear an application under O. XLI, r. 21, of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have an appeal from a decree in a rent suit valued less than Rs. 100, re-heard in the presence of the respondent. the balance was made payable in two equal instalments. The defendants felled and sold the forest trees, but withheld payment of rent, except a sum of Rs. 97 paid in two instalments. In a suit by the plaintiffs to recover the balance with interest :

Held, that the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable to suits for the recovery of arrears of rent would be applicable to such a suit for recovery of money payable in respect of forest rights, and under S. 144 (1) of the Act, the cause of action arose within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Civil Court which would have jurisdiction in a suit for the possession of the trees (a).

That the suit was excepted from the cognizance of the Small Cause Court as what was payable by the defendants to the plaintiffs in respect of forest rights granted to them was in the nature of rent.

That the term 'rent' in Cl. (8) of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is used in a wide sense. Bandi Ali Fakir v. Amud Sarkar, 20 C.L.J. 227.

The petitioner was a usufructuary mortgagee from a co-sharer landlord who was interested in the property to the extent of one-fourth, the opposite parties being entitled to the remaining three-fourths share. The petitioner as usufructuary mortgagee brought a suit for rent against the tenant under S. 148-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act and joined the proprietors of the three-fourths share as also the mortgagor as parties defendants. The co-sharers did not enter appearance and the plaintiff obtained a decree for rent and applied for execution under sub-S. (1) of S. 158-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act, whereupon the co-sharers appeared and objected that the execution could not proceed under S. 158-B. The objection was overruled by the Court of first instance, but the lower appellate Court directed the first Court to hold the sale not under sub-S. (2) of S. 158-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act, but in accordance with the Code of Civil Procedure.

That the co-sharer landlords are the entire body of persons who are entitled to collect rent, and a usufructuary mortgagee from one of the proprietors is in the position of a co-sharer landlord within the meaning of S. 158-B, sub-S. (1), Cl. (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

That the plaintiff having sued for the recovery of what to his information was the whole arrear due, the suit was in essence a suit for rent due to all the co-sharers within the meaning of S. 148-A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the suit as framed was within the scope of that section, and the decree should be executed under S. 158-B, sub-S. (1), Cl. (e) of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

That r. 14 of O. 34 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application to the execution proceedings in the present case.

That the result of the decision of the District Judge was that the Court of first instance had to proceed to sell the tenure in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which it had no jurisdiction to do, and to refuse to sell the tenure in accordance with S. 158-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act which it had jurisdiction to do, and the circumstance that this result followed from an erroneous interpretation of the scope and requirements of Ss. 148-A and 158-B of the Bengal Tenancy Act was clearly no bar to the exercise of the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court. *Brohmanaud Nath Deb Sarkar v. The burden of proving that the plaintiff cannot sue for arrears of rent without her name being registered under the Bengal Land Registration Act is upon the defendant.

The jurisdiction of a District Judge under S. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is of revisional and not of appellate character. Therefore, where a District Judge acting under that section fails to consider whether the primary Court had exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it or had acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity, and treats the matter before him as in substance an appeal from the decree of the primary Court, he, in essence, acts illegally and with material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction, and the High Court will be justified to interfere with his orders. *Surangini Dasi v. The compensation to be given, according to the terms of S. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is for the breach. To determine compensation for the breach of covenant, compare the position of the landlord immediately before the breach with his position after the breach, and the measure of compensation will be the extent to which he has been prejudicially affected by the breach and not the loss of privilege brought into existence by the breach. S. 159, Bengal Tenancy Act, status of purchaser in—Encumbrance, meaning and annulment of.

The plaintiff, who was the purchaser of a putni taluk at a sale held in 1899 in execution of a rent decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act brought suits against the defendants within twelve years from the date of his purchase for declaration of his title to the lands held by them within the putni taluk and for recovery of possession thereof. There was ample evidence on the record that the adverse possession of the defendants and their predecessors commenced before the creation of the putni.

Held—That the suits were barred by limitation and Art. 121, Limitation Act, did not apply to them.

That the plaintiff not having established that the possession of the defendants commenced after the creation of the putni or that the proprietor of the estate was in possession at the time when the putni was granted, the interests acquired by the defendants could not be deemed to be an incumbrance within the meaning of Art. 121, nor was it an incumbrance within the meaning of S. 11, Cl. (1) of Reg. VIII of 1819.

That the cause of action did not arise on the date on which the plaintiff purchased the taluk at the sale held under the Bengal Tenancy Act.

That the adverse possession contemplated in the decisions (a) Naffranchandra v. Rajendra Lal (25 C. 167); Woomsh Chanara Goopta v. Raj Narain Roy (10 W.R. 15); Khanto Momi Dassi v. Bejoy Chandra (19 C. 187) and Karim Khan v. Broja Nath Das (22 C. 244) is possession which commences after the creation of the putni tenure. These cases are founded on the principle laid down in S. 11 of Reg. VIII of 1819, which is, that the purchaser of a putni taluk at a sale held under Reg. VIII of 1819 takes the taluk in the state in which it was initially created, and the judicial decisions above referred to lay down the doctrine that the purchaser takes the property, not free merely of all incumbrances that may have accrued upon the tenure by act of the defaulting proprietor, his representatives or assignees, but also free of the interest acquired by an adverse possessor who has been able to acquire such interest by the action of the defaulting proprietor. This doctrine is plainly limited in its application to cases where the adverse possession commenced after the creation of the putni.

That in a case like the present in which the proprietor of the estate is out of possession, he cannot, merely by the device of the creation of a subordinate taluk, arrest the effect of the adverse possession which has already commenced to run against him, and such possession would be effective not only as against the subordinate tenure-holder but also as against the superior proprietor.

Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy)—(Contd.).

That the plaintiff before he could succeed must prove that the proprietor was in possession when the putni was created.

* That the doctrine that possession follows title has no application to a case like the present.

That as laid down by the Judicial Committee in Runjeet Ram v. Gobordhan Ram (b) (20 W. R. 25 (29)), the Court may, in the decision of the question of limitation if there is conflicting evidence on both sides, presume that possession was with the party whose title has been established, but it does not follow that, when the plaintiff has to establish possession at a particular point of time, he is entitled to call upon the Court to presume that, because his title has been established, possession must be presumed to have been with holder of the title at the specified period of time. This contention is clearly opposed to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Mohima Chandra v. Mohesh Chundra (16 I. A. 23 = 16 C. 473) (c).

That the plaintiff having made his purchase at a sale held in execution of a rent-decree under the Bengal Tenancy Act under S. 159 of the Act, he made his purchase with powers to annul the interests defined as encumbrance in S. 161; encumbrance as used in that section includes a statutory title acquired by a trespasser by adverse possession of the land of the defaulting tenure provided such act of possession commenced after the tenure had been created.

That even if he had succeeded in establishing that such adverse possession commenced after the creation of the putni taluk, before he could succeed, he would have to prove that under sub-S (1) of S. 167 he had annulled the encumbrances by service of notice within one year from the date of the sale or the date on which he first had notice of the encumbrance, and in the present case the plaintiff had failed herein.

Held (as to the contention that the grant of the putni tenure itself was evidence of possession)—That the principle that ancient documents produced from proper custody and by which any right to property purports to have been exercised may rightly be treated as presumptive evidence of possession has no application to the circumstances of the present case. Kalikaiah Mookerjee v. Bipradas Pal Choudry, 19 C.W.N. 18.

Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy)—(Contd.).

The plaintiff who had been dispossessed by his landlord in July 1903 sued in July 1909 for declaration of his title to, and possession of, a piece of land on the allegation that he had a mokarari raiyati right therein.

Held, that the suit was not barred by the special limitation of two years prescribed by Art. 3, Sch. III, of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and made applicable to all classes of *raiya*ts by S. 61 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Amendment Act I (B.O.) of 1907 which was passed and came into operation on 11th May 1907.

That the plaintiff at the time when the Amending Act was passed had a vested right of suit and there is nothing in the Act as amended that demands the construction that the plaintiff was thereby deprived of that right. The law as amended may regulate the procedure in suits in which the plaintiff could comply with its provisions, but cannot govern suits when such compliance was from the first impossible.

The facts in Lala Soniram v. Kanhaiya Lal (a) did not involve the position when a suit cannot be brought after the passing of the amendment, and the decision of the majority in Manjhoori Bibi v. Akel Mahumed (b) so far as it relates to that position, has not been affected by the judgment of the Privy Council in Lala Soniram v. Kanhaiya Lal (a).

A right of suit is a vested right, and it is an established maxim of construction that, though procedure may be regulated by the Act for the time being in force, still the intention to take away a vested right without compensation or any saving is not to be imputed to the Legislature, unless it be expressed in unequivocal terms (c). Gopeshur Pal v. Jiban Chandra Chandra, 18 C.W.N. 804=19 C.L.J. 549=24 Ind. Cas. 37=41 C. 1125 (S.B.).

There is nothing in the Bengal Tenancy Act, confining its operation to agricultural land except the definition of a raiya, which means a person who acquires a right to hold land for the purpose of cultivating it. Thus the law governing *raiya*s must necessarily be concerned only with agricultural land. But the definition of an under-raiya has nothing to do with agriculture, but means merely a tenant who holds under a raiya. If, therefore, a raiya lets his land to an under-tenant for other purposes than cultivation, that does not take the land out of the operation of the Tenancy Rents cannot be enhanced in a settlement made under Reg. VII of 1822 without the express consent of the tenant (a).

A claim for damages does not come within the purview of S. 7 of Act I (B.C.) of 1895, and, therefore, a certificate cannot issue in respect of it.

But where the tenant had notice of the increased demand made by the Settlement Officer, and was liable to a suit for reasonable damages for the use and occupation of certain non-agricultural lands, and it was found that the rate assessed by the Settlement Officer was fair and equitable, being only half the market rate, and this sum was realised by a certificate :

Held, that, as the tenant would be liable to pay damages at this rate, he was not entitled to a refund of the money.

Two holdings, one of agricultural and the other of non-agricultural lands, cannot be amalgamated without the consent of the tenant. Abdul Rahim Chowdhury v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, 22 Ind. Cas. 626.

The operation of S. 228 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, which makes the consolidated rate, as it accrues due from time to time, a first charge on the property (subject to arrears of land revenue) is not controlled by S. 223 of the Act which provides only for the personal liability of the purchaser of the premises to the extent of the arrears for the year immediately prior to his purchase.

The charge under S. 228 cannot be enforced against a bona fide purchaser for value without notice.

It is for the purchaser to plead and prove that he is a bona fide purchaser for value without notice.

The plea that one is a bona fide purchaser without notice is a single defence, the onus of proving which is on him.

A mortgagee of property within the limits of the Calcutta Municipality foreclosing the mortgage acquires title by involuntary alienation.

Nevertheless, as such a person could ascertain the arrears of consolidated rate due, he is in the same position as a purchaser with notice of the arrears. Akhoy Kumar Banerjee v. Corporation of Calcutta, 19 C.W.N. 37.

(3) S. 85—Revision—High Court—Indian High Courts Act, (24 and 25, Vict. O. 104), S. 15—Fair rent, settlement of—Revenue Officer—Appeal, relief by.

The superintendence vested in the High Court by S. 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, can be exercised only over Courts which are subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court. The Court of a Revenue Officer in which a proceeding for settlement of fair rents has been instituted under S. 85 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is not a Court subject to the appellate jurisdiction of the High Court, but is subordinate to the Commissioner.

For the purposes of the application of the power of superintendence vested in the High Court under S. 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, it is not necessary that an appeal should lie to the High Court in the very proceeding in which the power of superintendence is involved; in fact, if the party aggrieved is entitled to relief by way of appeal, it is not necessary for him to invoke the exercise of the power of superintendence.

Act VI of 1914 (Bengal Medical).

Ss. 27, 33—Rules framed under the Act by Local Government if ultra vires—Specific Relief Act, S. 45—Mandamus—Omission of qualified candidate's name from Election Roll—Mistake of returning Officer—Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere.

The petitioner was a Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery of the University of Calcutta and as such was admittedly entitled to be registered under S. 4 of the Bengal Medical Act. The petitioner's name was omitted from the preliminary list of persons qualified to vote at the first elections under the Act published by the Returning Officer appointed by the Local Government. His name was also omitted from the final Election Roll. The Petitioner's application to the Returning Officer to have his name entered was not considered by that Officer. The petitioner applied to the High Court under S. 45 of the Specific Relief Act for an order compelling the Returning Officer to include and publish his name in the final Election Roll.

Held—that the High Court had no jurisdiction to interfere.

Under r. 16 of the rules framed by the Local Government under the Bengal Medical Act, the decision of the Local Government on any question that may arise as to the intention, construction or application of the rules shall be final, and under S. 27 of the Act no suit or other legal proceedings shall lie in respect of any act done in the exercise of any power conferred by the Act on the Local Government or the Council or the Registrar.

The act which is referred to in S. 27 is not one done by the Local Government, but done in exercise of any power, conferred by the Act on the Local Government.

Per Choudhuri J.—It is quite clear that under S. 33 of the Bengal Medical Act the Local Government has power to make rules for the purpose of carrying out the Act and the rules framed and published were not ultra vires.

Per Woodroffe and Coxe, JJ.—Even assuming that the rules were ultra vires the application must fail; for it was based on the assumption that the rules were not ultra vires but that they were valid rules which had not been given effect to in one particular by the Returning Officer. *Narendra Nath Basu v. (2) S. 3—Bhag—Unrecognised sub-division of bhag—Permanent tenant of sub-division before the Act came into force—Alienation of his right by the tenant—Alienation not prohibited under the section—Collector's powers to set aside alienation.

S was a permanent tenant of certain Bhag lands before the passing of the Bhagdari Act in 1862. The lands formed an unrecognised sub-division of a Bhag under the Act. In 1907 S sold his interest in the lands to the plaintiffs. The Collector set aside the alienation in 1909 on the ground that it was void under S. 3 of the Act, and put the defendant (the owner of the entire Bhag) in possession of the lands. The plaintiffs sued to recover possession; but the lower Courts non-suited them on the ground that the Collector's order was proper. The plaintiffs having appealed:

Held, decreeing the plaintiffs' suit, that the alienation by S of his rights as a permanent tenant of the lands to the plaintiffs was not prohibited under S. 3 of the Bhagdari Act and that the Collector was wrong in dispossessing the plaintiffs.

Per Beaman, J.—Where rights are found to have existed before the Bhagdari Act, in persons not themselves Bhagdars or Narwadars, but the locus of whose rights falls within what are called the Bhags or shares in the Bhagdari and Narwadari village, these rights are not "any portion of such Bhags or shares of Bhagdari or Narwadari village" within the meaning of S. 3 of the Act; and the prohibitions against alienations contained in the section have no applicability to the alienation of such rights. *Venidas Narandas v. Act II of 1863 (Summary Settlement).

(1) S. 12—Inam lands—Alienation—Settlement made before the coming into force of the Act—Commutation of service—Payment of Nazarana Reg. 16 of 1827—Hereditary Offices Act (Bom. Act III of 1874)—The Act does not apply to settlement effected under or within the purview of Bom. Act II of 1863—Probate Court—Decision—The decision cannot be destroyed by adjudication in a regular suit.

The Sar Desai of Navalgund was granted an inam by the Peishwas. The services of the Desai as a revenue officer were not made use of during the British rule and he was informed in 1848 that the services would not be required of him. As a result of the investigation regarding claims to inam lands, the Desai was offered the option of commuting his service by payment of an annual sum in the nature of a quit-rent for the lands held by him on service tenure or by occasional payments in the nature of fines. In 1862, the Government passed a resolution sanctioning the treatment of Naval-gund Desai's "potgee" as a personal holding continuable to the holder on the terms of the summary settlement. The Desai accordingly accepted the offer that the commutation payment should be in the nature of an annual Nazarana or quit-rent. The last of the Désais made a will prohibiting his widow from making an adoption and bequeathing the whole of his property to charity. The will was propounded for probate in the District Court and was duly admitted to probate. The grant was confirmed by the High Court. The widow made an adoption and filed the present suit for a declaration that the testator had no power to make the will, as the land which was service land was inalienable and that the adoption was valid.

Held (1) that the settlement made by Government with the Desai in 1862 was a settlement valid and binding upon the Government, under S. 12 of Bom. Act II of 1863.

(2) That the Desai was no longer liable to render any service in respect of the lands held by him and that they were therefore no longer held upon a service tenure.

(3) That the lands in question were not inalienable by reason of family custom (which was not proved).

(4) That the lands were not inalienable by express legislative provision. The lands were not inalienable up to the Reg. XVI of 1827 and the Vatan Act of 1874 did not change their character, for the provisions of the Act did not apply to the settlement of the land in 1862 which was within the purview of Act II of 1863; and the holder under the settlement was no longer a hereditary officer holding for service.

(5) That the lands might be treated as the property of an ordinary Hindu land-owner, subject to the payment of the agreed quit-rent to Government; and in the absence of co-partners, he could dispose of the lands by will.

(6) That it was not competent to the Court to go into the validity of the adoption, since its determination might involve destruction of the conclusion reached by the Probate Court.

In the case of service land, which, in practice at all events, is not usually alienated, it is difficult to establish a family custom, which should have any effect, as distinct from the ordinary incidents of a service tenure, and evidence that land has remained in a family for a long period of years, and descended by the rule of primogeniture where it is service land, is more consistent with the fact of its being held for service than with the theory of any special family custom. Moreover when the service has come to an end, the last holder, if he have no sons or co-sharers, can put an end to a tenure

(1) S. 37—Waste lands—Grant of patta—Confirmation of rights of ownership of possession—Collector not competent under S. 37 as it stood prior to the amendment Act of 1912 to decide question of title—Continuance of possession—Presumption under S. 114, Evidence Act, as to Entry in revenue records behind owner's back does not affect title—Letting out to stranger—Dispossession—Suit for declaration of ownership within 12 years of—No bar—Institution more than one year after Collector's order regarding title—Arts. 141, 142, Limitation Act.

By a patta granted in 1867 to the plaintiff's father, the Collector allowed the father to continue in possession of certain lands, some under cultivation and some not, on payment of a lump sum of money as assessment which was subject to revision when survey and settlement should be made. In 1883, the uncultivated lands were entered in the Revenue records as Government waste, the entry having been made behind the plaintiff's back, and in 1903 the Government let out the lands to others. In 1908, the Collector made an order purporting to be passed under S. 37, Bombay Land Revenue Code, giving occupancy rights in the waste lands to strangers. Plaintiff instituted, more than one year from the date of the said order, a suit against the grantees of the occupancy rights and the Secretary of State for declaration that he was the owner of the lands.

Held that Art. 14 of the Limitation Act did not apply and the suit was in time because the Collector's order was ultra vires and so cannot be called an order 'in his official capacity.'

S. 37 of the Land Revenue Code as it stood in 1908 before it was amended in 1912 gives the Collector power to dispose of ownerless lands, but it does not give him the power to decide whether any land has owner or not. The power to decide questions of title vests in Civil Courts (a).

Held, also, that, under the patta, plaintiff's father was confirmed in his proprietary rights over the lands and that his title was not destroyed by the entry in the Revenue Register made in 1885.

Where evidence about acts of ownership does not exist and cannot reasonably be expected, it is usual to presume that the owner's possession once proved continued till it is shown to have been interrupted. (Vide S. 114, Evidence Act) (b).

the suit. The defendant contested the validity of his resignation and claimed the lands as his. The lower Court held that the resignation was not valid, and that the defendant possessed as before occupancy rights in the lands. The plaintiff having appealed :—

Held (1) that the resignation in question must be regarded as a transfer which was not valid under S. 9 of the Khoti Act, as the consent of all the Khots had not been obtained ;

(2) that the transaction could not be regarded as a resignation under S. 10 of the Act, since it was accompanied by consideration ;

(3) that the foundation of plaintiff's title in 1905 was illegal and the plaintiff was not entitled to estop the defendant from showing the illegality of the title so founded.

Act XX of 1881 (Sind Encumbered Estates).

(1) S. 28—Landholder to whom land was restored—Reference to arbitration—Award and consent decree transferring land to creditor in discharge of debts—Only life-interest transferred—Powers of arbitrator—Transfer under award and decree—Effect—Compensation—Creditor not entitled to—Contract Act, S. 65.

Where a landholder, to whom an estate was restored under the Encumbered Estates Act, empowered certain arbitrators to decide dispute between a creditor and himself, consented to an award being made against him by which certain land was transferred to the creditor in discharge of the debts, and to a decree of Court being passed on the basis of that award :

Held, that the creditor acquired only a life-interest in the land transferred to him.

Per Crouch, A. J. C.—When a person is in possession of property in respect of which his rights of alienation are limited under S. 28 of Act XX of 1881, he cannot, by a reference to arbitration, confer on the arbitrator an authority to alienate a more extensive interest in the land than he himself has. The powers of an arbitrator are strictly limited to the authority which has been duly delegated to him by the parties through the reference. He cannot by his award accomplish a legal act beyond the powers of those from whom he receives his authority. If the award be made a decree of the Court, it does not thereby acquire a wider operation.

An involuntary alienation through the Court could not effectively transfer an interest which the judgment-debtor had no power to transfer.

Act XX of 1881 (Sind Encumbered Estates) —(Concluded).

The dictum in 7 S.L.R. 55, that S. 28, Sind Encumbered Estates Act, does not include an involuntary alienation through the Court, doubted.

Hayward, J.C.—The arbitration proceedings were merely a collusive endeavour to avoid the limitations imposed by law upon the ownership of the land-holder. The alienation, therefore, being an alienation by the land-holder and not an involuntary alienation through the Court, could have no effect on the land after the Zemindar's death, in view of the provisions of S. 28, Encumbered Estates Act.

S. 65 of the Contract Act does not apply to the case and the creditors are not entitled to compensation for the moneys lent by them (a). Mir Mahomed Khan v. Pohumal Motimal, 8 S.L.R. 86.

(1) S. 29-B—Decree against Talukdar—Talukdar's estate under management by Talukdari Settlement Officer—Notice to submit claims—Non-submission of claim owing to pending proceedings of Court—Inability of the creditor—Sufficient cause.

The plaintiff sued the defendant for a decree upon a mortgage; but the Subordinate Judge granted him a personal decree and held that the mortgage was invalid under the provisions of the Gujarat Talukdars' Act. The plaintiff filed an appeal on the 27th September 1905. On the 21st November 1905, the Talukdari Settlement Officer took over the management of the estate. He received notice of the appeal on the 24th idem. He issued, on the 28th December, a notice, under S. 29-B of the Act, calling upon claimants to submit their claims within six months of the date of the notification. On the 14th March 1906, the District Court decided the appeal in favour of the plaintiff, holding that he had a valid mortgage upon the property of the defendants. The Talukdari Settlement Officer appealed against the decree in July 1906; but the appeal failed in August 1907. The plaintiff thereafter applied, under S. 29-B of the Act, for a certificate in order that he might proceed with the execution of the decree. The officer declined to grant the certificate on the ground that as the plaintiff had not submitted his claim within six months of the date of the publication of notice under S. 29-B, his claim was deemed to have been fully discharged. The plaintiff next applied to the Court for execution. The lower Courts dismissed the application as having been barred under S. 29-B (3). The plaintiff having appealed :

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was unable to put forward his real claim at the date of the Notification, and that at the date of the notice he was unable to comply with it within the meaning of S. 29-B (3) of the Gujarat Talukdar's Act, 1888 ;

(2) that the inability of the applicant having continued during the expiration of the six months from the date of the Notification, the plaintiff was not barred by S. 29-B from prosecuting the proceedings in Court.

To recover the arrears of house-tax, a Municipality served upon the plaintiff a bill, which did not specify the time within which an appeal might be preferred, as required by S. 82 (2) (b) (ii) of the District Municipalities Act, 1901. On failure to pay the arrears, the Municipality issued a notice of demand, and followed it up by the issue of a distress warrant. When the warrant was executed, the plaintiff paid up the amount of the arrears. He next filed a suit to recover it back from the Municipality ;—

Held, awarding the claim, that the procedure followed by the Municipality in recovering the amount of arrears was not a legal procedure inasmuch as the bill did not fulfil the statutory requirements of S. 82 (2) (b) (ii) of the Act; and

The plaintiff, who owned a house at Rander applied to the Rander Municipality on the 25th April 1911 for permission to rebuild it. On the 5th June 1911, the Municipality granted her permission on condition, among others, that she should in re-building her house keep an open space of 5 feet 8 inches in front of her house so as to widen an existing road from 8 feet 4 inches to 14 feet. It appeared that the Municipality had not determined any regular line either for the existing street or for the future as contemplated in S. 92 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act, 1901; but the condition in question was prescribed presumably under S. 96 (2) of the Act. The plaintiff disregarded the condition and built upon the space in question. The Municipality having threatened her to pull down the building, the plaintiff filed a suit to restrain the Municipality from doing so. The lower Courts refused to grant the injunction prayed for. The plaintiff appealed:

Held (1) that the power of the Municipality under S. 96 to prescribe the location of the building was given in relation "to any street existing or projected as they think proper," whereas the Municipality had prescribed the location of the building in relation, not to the existing street, but to a street which might come into existence in the future but was not yet projected.

(2) That, if the condition of the permit were complied with, the plaintiff would have to give up or keep vacant and unproductive a considerable portion of her land, and the Municipality would have the opportunity of paying compensation for it at any time they might feel disposed to do so, which would be contrary to the provisions of S. 92 which contemplated that, when a set back was determined upon, compensation should be paid to the owner.

(1) S. 65 A—Joint Hindu family—Certificate of protected status issued in the name of one member of the family—Rights of other members—Effect of the Amending Act of 1898.

P., his brother and nephew formed a joint Hindu family. In 1891 a certificate of protected status under S. 65-A. of the Land Revenue Act was issued in the name of P. The family was joint in mess, residence and estate in 1891, and enjoyed the profits of the thekadari village jointly in that year. In 1905, a village O was purchased in the name of one of P's sons from the savings of the income derived from the thekadari village.

The present suit was for a declaration that P's nephew F had no share in the recently purchased village. Held that the certificate of protected status did not create a new right personal to P alone, and that P's nephew had a share in the village newly purchased.

Held, also that the rights of P or his nephew F were not affected by the Amending Act of 1898. Property which is joint property and enjoyed as such does not cease to be joint property merely because a subsequent statute does not recognize a partition. Fagwa v. Budhram, 10 N.L.R. 64 = 24 Ind. Cas. 855.

Where a mortgage-deed recited that the mortgagor took rupees two hundred, in lieu of which the mortgagor agreed to deliver 20 manis of pisi wheat by instalments of 2 manis each year, the usufruct of the land being taken at 1 mani a year and an additional mani was to be personally delivered by the mortgagor and in default, the instalments were to carry 50 per cent. per annum compound interest.

Held, that the mortgage was one which involved the payment of interest, though it is not easy to determine the rate of interest (a).

The ward 'interest' in S. 33 (2) of the Tenancy Act was not intended to be restricted to a re-payment in cash. It means compensation for the use of money or grain.

The word 'payable' in S. 33 should be construed to be equivalent to 'receivable' by the mortgagee out of the usufruct (b).

Held, also that, in the present case, the question whether notice to landlord under S. 33 (2) is required must be determined with reference to the estimated money value, at the date of the mortgage, of the usufruct of grain. Raghunath v. Ganpat, 10 N.L.R. 21 = 23 Ind. Cas. 213.

The question under that section will be whether a matter was substantially in issue and not whether it was formally in issue. The plea of res judicata or estoppel is available not only as regards the final conclusion of the Court or officer, but also regarding all findings necessary for arriving at that conclusion, whether they are given on formal issues raised in the case or are referable to the points which must have been the basis of the final determination (b). *Muthammal v. The mortgagee is bound to pay, under S 76 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act, the Government revenue accruing due in respect of property other than the mortgaged property included in the same pattah.

Madras Act II of 1864, S. 42, applies to sales for irrigation cesses charged upon land. Irrigation cesses are part of public revenue due on the land. Section 2 of Act VII of 1865 must be treated as superfluous and not as restricting or modifying or repealing the provisions of S. 42 of Act II of 1864 as regards sales for arrears of irrigation cesses.

Where the irrigation of the plaintiff's lands was actually effected by means of the water of a channel passing through two pipes, the second of which had been inserted without the authority or the approval of the Public Works Department, held that the water was 'taken' from an unauthorised source of supply within the meaning of r. 5 of the rules framed under S. 1 of Act VII of 1865 and that the plaintiff was liable to pay the penal water-rate collected from him.

Prima facie, the utilization as seed bed of a reasonable portion of a nanjai holding, is a proper use of the land, and prima facie the ryot will get all he can out of his holding; it lies therefore on the Zamindar to show that the Nathankal plots were wrongly used as such or that the ryot might and ought to have grown a crop to maturity on the same plots after removing the seedlings.

In the absence of such evidence, the Zamindar cannot make out a claim for damages for non-cultivation of the Nathankal plots. Ramakrishnam Pillai v. Robert Fischer, 27 M.L.J. 414.

- (4) S. 69—Second appeal to the High Court—Practice—Civ. Pro. Code, 1892, Ss. 584, 595—Finding of fact in first appeal when not dependent solely on construction of documents.

A second appeal lies to the High Court from a decree of the District Court passed on appeal under S. 69 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act, 1865 (a).

In a summary suit instituted under S. 9 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act, 1865, by a Zemindar against his tenant to enforce the acceptance by the tenant of a patta based on the Asara or produce-sharing system, the sole question was whether the substitution of the Veesabadi (money payment) for the Asara system in Fasli 1283 was permanent.

The Court of First Instance relying on the Muchilikas executed by the tenant since that year and other evidence found that the conversion of the Asara rates into cash payments in Fasli 1283 was a permanent arrangement, and held that the Zemindar was not entitled to impose on his tenant the patta tendered on the Asara basis. That decision was affirmed by the First Appellate Court but the High Court in second appeal relying on the Muchilikas alone held that, on their true construction, the patta tendered on the Asara basis was a proper patta, and that the tenant must accept it.

Held, that the question in issue was a question of fact, with which the first two Courts alone were competent to deal; that the Muchilikas were only a part of the evidence on which those Courts acted in arriving at their conclusions; and that, in view of Ss. 584 and 585 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, the High Court acted without jurisdiction in setting aside the concurrent finding of the Court below (b).

Act I of 1876 (Madras Land Revenue Assessment).

Separate registration—Permanent grantee at favourable rent.

Regulation XXVI of 1802 does not affect the validity of transfers by zemindars but only saves the rights of Government. Prior to Act I of 1876 provision was made in Reg. XXVI only for the separate registration of portions of settled estates sold in Court auction, but no specific legislative provision existed as to how separate registration was to be enforced in other cases.

A permanent lease of a zamindari is not a transfer of proprietary right within the meaning of S. 8 of Reg. XXV of 1802. A permanent grant at a favourable rent of the nature of jodi, kattubadi or poruppu is not a transfer of ownership, and the grantees are not liable to have their lands separately registered under Act I of 1876 and separate assessment imposed on them. *Manya Sultan v. (2) S. 53—Meaning of 'money lender'—Building used for stabling Devasthanam coaches and horses—Whether exempt from tax as used for a public purpose.

The word 'money lender' is not expressly defined in the District Municipalities Act, but a person who casually or intermittently invests his surplus funds on mortgage or on personal security need not necessarily be considered to follow the calling of a money lender. The money lending transactions must be so numerous, continuous and systematic that it might appropriately be called the trade or business of money lending (a).

In this case a building was used for stabling the Tirupathi Devasthanam coaches and horses. Some of the horses were used to carry drums in the temple processions and others were used by respectable pilgrims to whom such an honour was shown by the Mahant. Held that such uses are for public purposes and the building is entitled to be exempted from tax as used for a public purpose. *The Municipal Council of Tirupathi v. No distinction can be drawn between the administrative and judicial duties a District and Sessions Judge has got to perform.

Where the District and Sessions Judge of Cuddalore spent his vacation in Kodaikanal and paid profession tax there, he is not liable to pay profession tax again at Cuddalore and can claim the benefit of S. 60 of the District Municipalities Act. Henry Moberly v The Municipal Council of Cuddalore, (1914) M.W. S. 51 of the Local Boards Act is identical with S. 26 of the District Municipalities Act, and the ruling in 81 M. 111 is clear authority for the proposition that the local body, to which the powers of the Board of Revenue were transferred under S. 51 of the Local Boards Act, is invested with the rights of management as well as superintendence, and that the former include the right to sue for the recovery of the trust property, in the absence of the trustees entitled to sue. *Bhimavarapu Buchi Reddi v. (2) S. 73—Mortgagee with possession—Intermediate landholder—Tenant's right to pay him.

A mortgagee with possession is as much a landholder as any lessee and is intermediate between the proprietor and landlord and his tenants.

'Under-tenure holder' means a person who has acquired from a proprietor a right to hold land for the purpose of collecting rent or establishing tenants on it. This would cover a usufructuary mortgagee also.

Under S. 73 of the Local Boards Act as amended by Act VI of 1900, tenants are entitled to pay the cess to the intermediate landholder. This is irrespective of whether the intermediate landholder is bound to reimburse the proprietor or not.

The rights of parties to a contract are to be judged by their intention at its date and by that law by which they intended or may justly be presumed to have bound themselves. This principle can only affect the parties. It cannot affect strangers to the contract or deprive them of statutory rights.

That judgments in rem or in personam establishing a relation between the parties to them are conclusive even against third parties in the absence of fraud can only apply to adjudications which would be res judicata between the parties to them.

A mortgagee with possession is an intermediate landholder within the meaning of S. 73 of the Local Boards Act and the tenants' right to pay him recognised in that section cannot be abrogated by a contract to which they were not parties.

Tyabji: J.—The liability of the intermediate landholder and tenants is dependent on the amount paid or payable by the landholder. The recovery of half the cess is not dependent on the landholder's liability to pay it.

6.—Madras Acts—(Continued).Act V of 1884 (Madras Local Boards)—(Old.).

The notion of transfer of property is not an ingredient in the notion of an intermediate landholder. The right of the intermediate landholder to collect from the tenant is not dependent on his paying to his landlord; that might form the subject of an express or implied contract.

Quere:—Whether the legislature left no power to the parties to contract so as to bring about a relationship corresponding in other respects to that of an intermediate landholder without annexing to that relationship the rights under S. 73, Local Boards Act. *Jagan-nalkulu v. (13) Ss. 3 (2) (d) and 8—Land forming part of inam village—Waste at the time of grant—No occupancy right acquired by tenant—Tenant holding under lease for a year after expiry of term—Suit for ejectment—Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Courts—Effect of abandonment or surrender.

Plaintiff was the inamdar of the suit village, the inam grant having been made so long ago as 1748. The suit related to 60 acres out of the 300 acres in that village. These 60 acres were lying as immemorial waste at the time of the inam grant to plaintiff's ancestors. These lands were afterwards given by the inamdar for cultivation from time to time to different sets of tenants without occupancy rights. In 1907 plaintiff changed the tenant who was in possession prior to that time and leased the lands in suit to the defendants for only a year. The lease having expired in 1908, this suit was brought to eject the defendants in the Civil Court. Held, that the suit lands formed part of an “Estate” and the suit was cognisable by the Revenue Courts and not by the Civil Courts.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—Where the Government or a Zemindar grants a whole village, some lands in which are lying waste, but most of the lands in which are under cultivation, the usual presumption prevails that the grant of the village in general terms means only the grant of the melwaram in the whole village lands including the waste lands. The inamdar, so far as the waste lands are concerned, cannot be considered to have the kudivaram right in them, though he could create kudivaram interest in a waste land by letting it to a cultivator and could have (before the Estates Land Act) converted it into a private land by cultivating it through his home-farm servants and thus got the kudivaram right vested in himself (a).

If, however, it is proved that, at the time of the grant of a whole village in inam, all the lands in that village were lying waste, or if it is proved that, at the time of the grant of certain defined extent of lands in a village (such a grant being called a minor inam grant), that extent of lands so granted as minor inam was lying waste, the grant might be deemed in either case to be not of the melwaram alone in such waste lands but of the kudivaram also. In such a case, of course, even the whole village so granted will not fall under the definition of "Estate" in S. 3, cl. 2 (d), because that section relates to cases where the grant was of the melwaram alone. Where the entire lands themselves in the village, as they were lying waste, were granted in inam, it cannot, of course, be said to be a grant of the melwaram alone (b).

Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—(Old.).

The plaint lands were ryoti lands and not the private lands of the inamdar landholder at the time of, and immediately after, the inam grant.

When the inamdar afterwards granted the lands for cultivation, without giving the cultivators permanent occupancy rights (but only the rights to occupancy for one year or from year to year or a specified number of years), and when he changed the cultivators from time to time, it cannot be said that thereby the inamdar himself got any permanent occupancy or kudivaram right in the land, if there is no evidence to prove that he let them expressly as his private or home-farm lands.

So far as ryoti lands are concerned, a suit for ejectment of a tenant by a landholder on any ground could be brought only in the Revenue Court (c).

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Till the Legislature makes a departure, Courts are bound to proceed on the assumption that the right in the soil is in the Government. Prima facie the grant of the soil comprises all there is in it. In this view, it must be held that the grant of the village in 1748 included the right to such revenue or rent as the grantor had in the village plus the full rights in those unoccupied portions of the village in which the tenants had no permanent rights of occupancy. Thus in 1748 the grantees acquired both the kudivaram and melwaram rights in the 60 acres, and the rights of the melwaramdar alone in the remaining 240 acres. Even in this view, the village must be held to be an estate under the Estates Land Act.

In order to bring a case within S. 3, cl. 2 (d), all that need be proved is (1) that the entire land revenue or rent which the grantor was entitled to in the village must have been transferred; and (2) the grantees should not have been the owner of the kudivaram of the village as a whole.

Surrender ipso facto is not a mode of acquisition and has not the same effect in conferring rights as transfer or succession. Consequently the word 'otherwise' in S. 8 of the Act will not include a surrender, as it will be obnoxious to the principle of construing words eiusdem generis (d). Yenkata Sastrulu v. Sitaramudu, 26 M.L.J. 585=24 Ind. Cas. 224.

(18) Ss. 3, 6—Widow of landholder—Grantee from widow—Status of tenant introduced by the grantee—Grant of occupancy in waste lands—Presumption—Onus of rebutting.

Where the widow of a Zemindar, who had herself only a life-interest, granted a mokhasa pattah to a certain person for an indefinite period, a tenant introduced into the land by the grantee is a ryot within the meaning of S. 3 (15) of the Act, though the grant may not be binding on the reversioner. The fact that the widow could not have made a grant for a period extending beyond her life does not affect the question whether it is a grant (a).

Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—(Ctd.).

repeated proof of the fact that in zemindaries the prevailing terms of tenancy include the right of permanent occupancy in favour of the tenant, the Courts are in a position to take judicial note of the existence of such terms and to presume that they exist. And so, the burden of proof rests on the person alleging that, in a particular zemindari, the prevailing terms of tenancy do not include the right of permanent occupancy.

- If the presumption (based on conformity with general experience no less than on the policy of law and the history of land tenures) is that a ryot who comes into possession of land ready for cultivation is let in on terms of permanent occupancy, then the presumption would be stronger in the case of one who is let in on the understanding that he will make waste lands cultivable which were previously incapable of being cultivated. In such a case principles of even wider applicability form the support of the presumption. Brundavanachandra Horis-chandra Raja v. Ramayya, 26 M.L.J. 600.

(19-a) Ss. 3 and 8, 185—Ryoti land when becomes private land—Proof—Speeches in the Legislative Council—Construction of S. 185—Proviso an exception to S. 8.

Speeches made in the Legislative Council during the passing of the Bill cannot be looked to interpret a section. What the Court has to see is "whether the wording of the section bears the interpretation."

Retrospective enactments must be strictly construed.

Actual conversion of ryoti into private land should be proved by very clear and satisfactory evidence. The burden is on the Zemindar to show that the suit lands come within the definition of S. 3 of the Estates Land Act as forming part of his domain or home-farm lands. Once it is shown that the lands were ryoti down to a certain date, the effect of S. 8 of the Estates Land Act is that, even if the Zemindar subsequently acquired the kudivaram right, that would not of itself convert it into private land. Neither calling the lands kamattam and letting them on terms which negative occupancy right with a view to prevent the assertion of such rights is sufficient to convert them into private land within the meaning of the definition. A private land must have that character from prior to the Permanent Settlement except in certain cases.

Act I of 1908 (Madras Estates Land)—²(Ctd.).

The first part of S. 185 deals with the determination of the question whether a particular field is ryoti or kamattam where nothing is known about its origin; if it was originally ryoti the rule of evidence contained in the first part of S. 185 can have no application, because that would practically abrogate the principle enunciated in S. 8, cls. 1 and 3. The proviso to S. 185 is really an exception to S. 8, cl. 3. The object of the proviso is to enable the landlord to say that, although the land was seti, he has by his own servants or by hired labour cultivated the lands for 12 years preceding the Act, and that consequently it should be regarded as his home-farm land. An irrebuttable presumption is to be drawn from such a conduct. Zemindar of Chellapalli v. Rajalapati Somayya, 16 M.L.T. 576=27 M.L.J. 718=(1915) M.W.N. 1.

(20) S. 4—Scope—Landlord's right to collect rent for all land in ryot's occupation—Amount of rent payable—Intention of parties—Basis of calculation—Rent charged on extent cultivated prior to Act—Whether liable to alteration—Chap. III of the Act.

S. 4, Madras Estates Land Act, says that the landlord is entitled to collect rent in respect of all ryoti land in the occupation of a ryot. Prima facie, it is so, but if the evidence shows that it was the intention of the parties that he should collect rent only in respect of the land in fact cultivated by ryot, of course, the intention of the parties overrides the provisions of the Act. This section merely lays down the general rule which can be displaced by evidence as to what the parties meant and intended (Per White, C.J.).

Per Tyabji, J.—S. 4 gives the right to the landholder to collect rent in respect of all the ryoti land in the occupation of a ryot. That section by itself does not suffice for the determination of the total amount of rent that has to be collected. The way in which the rate of rent is to be calculated is fixed by Chap. III of the Act. The provisions of that chapter lay down explicitly that the basis on which the rate of rent is to be determined is to be presumed to be the same as that on which it has been recovered by the landlord in the previous Faslis.

If the mode in which the amount payable was determined in the past was by reference not to the extent of all the land in the occupation of the tenant but the extent of land cultivated, there is nothing in the Act which makes it necessary to alter this method of determining the rent payable. Nor does the Act provide that the landholder may exact a higher rent from the tenant for the same piece of land, because he is entitled to obtain rent in respect of all the land in occupation of the ryot. Saga.

- Landlord and tenant—Landlord purchasing tenant's right—No occupancy right acquired by the landlord—Ryot in possession acquires such right.*

Where the landlord bought the tenants' interest at a rent sale in 1878, the land continues to be ryoti land under S. 8 of the Estates Land Act, and a person in possession at the time the new Act was passed acquires occupancy rights under S. 6 of the Act. Markappuli Reddler v. - Purchase of tenant's interest by landlord for arrears of rent—Tenant continuing in possession at the time of the passing of the Act—Tenant whether can claim occupancy right and liable to be ejected—Right to Kudivaram interest as between rival claimants whether affected by S. 6 (1).

Defendants were tenants of the plaintiff, a Zemindar. Plaintiff purchased not only the Zemindari from the former Zemindar but he also purchased the Kudivaram right in the plaintiff ryoti lands which the former Zemindar had purchased in rent auction-sale of 1900. Plaintiff sued for ejecting the defendants as purchaser of the Kudivaram right from the rent auction-purchaser. Defendants continued in possession, at the date of the passing of the Act, notwithstanding the auction sale.

Held, that the defendants in this case were ryots in possession of ryoti land not being old waste, continued in possession of such land at the commencement of the Act, and that, therefore, according to S. 6 (1) of the Act, they obtained a permanent right of occupancy in such holding and they could not be evicted.

The rights to the Kudivaram interest as between rival claimants thereto (other than the landlord who is debarred by S. 8 from claiming such interest) are not intended to be affected

- Tenant on an in-am having no occupancy right—Presumptive—Land not an 'estate'—Eviction of tenant in Civil Court—Meaning of 'acquire' in S. 8—Meaning of 'admitted as ryot' in S. 163—Non-occupancy ryots of old waste holding under expired leases—Right of landlord—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.*

Per Miller, J.—When it is found that a tenant has no occupancy right in his holding, and the land is not private land, the presumption is that the occupancy right is in the landholder either by the original grant or by prior or subsequent acquisition. It need not be shown that the landholder acquired the occupancy right in some particular way (a). In either case the land is not an 'estate' and the tenant is liable to eviction in a Civil Court.

The word 'acquire' in the exception to S. 8 of the Act includes acquisition by surrender or abandonment. The meaning of the word should not be restricted when the context does not compel us to do so (b).

Per Spencer, J.—The proviso to S. 153 of the Act has the effect of taking the case of non-occupancy ryots holding under an expired lease granted before the Act out of the jurisdiction of the Collector's Court, and the landlord can enforce his rights against them in the Civil Courts.

S. 153 is not exhaustive of all possible cases of eviction.

S. 157 is designed to prevent tenants of old waste from contracting themselves out of their right to remain in possession so long as they have not given cause under other provisions of the Act to their landholder to eject them (c).

S. 157 does not nullify the proviso to S. 153. It only prohibits a tenant of old waste being elected 'as such,' even if he has signed an agreement to quit.

The meaning of admitting a person to the possession of ryoti land appears from the explanation to S. 6 of the Act to mean the acceptance by the landholder of any portion of the rent fixed for such land. Ponnusamy Padayachi v. Karupudayan, 26 M.L.J. 285 = 15 M.L.T. 299 = 24 Ind. Cas. 217.

Under S. 8, cl. (3), Madras Estates Land Act, merger of the occupancy right by transfer or succession under cls. (1) and (2) has not the effect of converting ryoti land into private land. But under cl. (4), in cases where such merger takes place by transfer for valuable consideration before the passing of the Act, the landholder has the right of admitting any person to the possession of land on terms that may be agreed upon between them.

But tenants who were not let into possession after the Act was passed, but were admittedly in possession before and at that time, do not come within the provisions of S. 8, cl. 4.

Therefore a suit for rent against such tenants by a landholder, who had purchased the kudivaram right before the Act, can be instituted only in Revenue Courts.

To such cases S. 19 does not, and Ss. 77 (1) and 189 do apply. A. S. F. L. V. Veerappa Chetty v. Mudali, 26 M.L.J. 373=24 Ind. Cas. 375.

(38) S. 52, cls. 2 and 3 and S. 143—S. 143 applies only to contract for more than one year—Road-cess at one anna not claimable—Mamool presents.

Cls. 2 and 3 of S. 52 of the Madras Estates Land Act make it clear that the object of the Legislature was that, where there has been a consolidated contract for more than a year, there should be no sudden change in the relationship of the parties and there should be a year of grace before the new conditions come into force.

Where in a patta the landlord claimed one anna as road-cess instead of the half anna statutorily allowed, it cannot be considered to be part of the rent payable by the tenant and so must be disallowed. Where it is stipulated that the rent on the land shall be the first charge on the produce, it cannot be allowed if it is meant to take more than what is given to the landlord by S. 5, cl. (1) of the Act.

Where a patta stipulated for some mamool presents to be made to the landlord, such a thing cannot be considered as rent and must be disallowed. Even if it is part of the rent and so lawfully payable under the contract between the landlord and the tenant, it is rendered unlawful by S. 143 of the Madras Estates Land Act. Yaddadi Jagunnadh Bhupathi Deo Garu v. The general principle of the legislation is that, in suits for rent, the landlord is not bound to tender a patta before he sues to recover it. But if he wants to adopt the exceptional remedy of distraint, in which he takes upon himself the functions of the Court, although he has to conduct the proceedings with the assistance of the Revenue Officials, he must have tendered a patta in order that the Revenue Officials may have some tangible proof of the landlord's claim.

The defendant was a non-occupancy tenant under the plaintiff. In 1908 the defendant executed a kabuliat and the plaintiff's mokhtear-i-am a lease for 10 years. The former was, while the latter was not, registered.

In 1909 the plaintiff sued, under S. 58 of Act II of 1901, to eject the defendant. The defendant resisted the suit by setting up the said lease and kabuliat, the execution of both of which the plaintiff did not challenge, but said that those documents were executed without his knowledge and consent and that his mukhtear-i-am had no authority to grant a lease or accept a kabuliat for ten years. The Assistant Collector rejected the lease as unregistered, but acting on the kabuliat dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the ground that the term of the lease had not expired. This decision was upheld by the Commissioner on appeal. In 1912 the plaintiff sued in the Civil Court for declaration that the said lease and kabuliat were null and void as having been granted by his mukhtear-i-am without the plaintiff's knowledge, consent or authority. In bar of the plaintiff's suit the defendant relied on Ss. 95, 167 of Act II of 1901, S. 11 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act:

Held, per Rafique, J. (Piggott J., dissenting),

(1) that, as the relief now claimed by the plaintiff could not be sought in a Revenue Court under S. 56 or 95 of the Tenancy Act, it could not be said that the plaintiff's present suit was of such a nature as to be exclusively within the jurisdiction of a Revenue Court;

(2) that the question of the authority of the mukhtear-i-am to grant a ten years' lease could not be decided and was not directly decided by the Revenue Court (a);

(3) that as the authority of the mukhtear-i-am was neither in issue in the Revenue Court nor was that Court competent to try that question, any incidental expression of opinion on the point would not operate as res judicata and that the suit was, therefore, maintainable. Ram Singh v. Rao Gिरराज Singh, 23 Ind. Cas. 705.

There was a dispute between a zemindar and his tenants as to the nature of the tenancy in a certain holding; the tenancy claimed to be fixed rate tenants while the zemindar asserted that they were occupancy tenants. Proceedings were taken under S. 95 of the Agra Tenancy Act, to ascertain the real nature of the tenancy. The parties compromised:

Held, that the compromise was not illegal. It was binding on the successors-in-interest of the zemindar. Babu Kesho Das v. Doolar Ram, 22 Ind. Cas. 124.

(14) Ss. 95, 167—Suit for ejectment of tenant from year to year—Dismissed as the tenant held under lease—Suit in Civil Court to set aside lease—Res judicata.

Plaintiffs sued the defendant in the Revenue Court for ejectment on the ground that he was non-occupancy tenant from year to year. The defendant set up a lease which the plaintiffs said was given by their Karinda without any authority. The Revenue Court went into the question and held that the lease was given by the Karinda who had authority to do so and dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs brought this suit in the Civil Court for a declaration that the lease was given without authority and did not bind them. Held, that the Revenue Court in a case of ejectment had jurisdiction to go into the question of validity or invalidity of the lease, that the Court must have regard to the substance of the relief and not merely to the form of the suit and that the present suit was not maintainable. *Ram Singh v. A Civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for arrears of rent assigned to the plaintiff by certain occupancy tenants to whom it is payable. Such a suit is purely and simply a suit to recover from the defendant a sum of money which is alleged to be due on account of the rent of his holding and is a suit of the nature contemplated by Sch. IV of the Tenancy Act. Under S. 167 of the Act only the Revenue Court can take cognizance of it.

(25) Ss. 196 and 197—Landlord and tenant—Suit for ejectment—Jurisdiction—Defendant an agricultural tenant—Civil Court—Denial of tenancy.

An agricultural lease can only be determined by the lessor taking proceedings under the Tenancy Act. A Civil Court has no jurisdiction to eject an agricultural tenant as a trespasser.

When a Statute confers jurisdiction upon a tribunal of limited authority and statutory origin, the conditions and qualifications annexed to the grant must be strictly complied with.

Held, that Civil Courts are invested with jurisdiction of a two-fold character in respect of objections relating to title which have been put forward in the Revenue Court within the time specified in the proclamation. In the case specified in cls. (a) and (b) of sub-S. 1 of S. 111 of the Land Revenue Act, the jurisdiction conferred is original.

In cases under cl. (a) there is no rule of limitation other than that which would apply under the ordinary law relating to civil suits.

In cases under cl. (b) the jurisdiction must be invoked within the period of 3 months from the date upon which the objector is referred to the Civil Court. In cases under cl. (c) the Civil Court has an appellate jurisdiction only.

Held further, that the jurisdiction being conferred on the Civil Court by Statute and not by the Revenue Court order, the Civil Courts when their jurisdiction is invoked must satisfy themselves that all the conditions and qualifications annexed to the grant of jurisdiction have been strictly complied with. Mukhtar Ahmed v. Where, in a mutation proceeding, the parties had filed a petition of compromise whereby the plaintiffs agreed to the substitution of the defendants' names in respect of a certain property :

Held, that the petition did not estop the plaintiffs from subsequently suing the defendants for recovery of possession of the property, because it did not purport to convey any title to the defendants or to induce them to alter their position on the strength of the mutation proceeding (a).

* There might be a withdrawal of any gratuitous admission, unless there is some obligation not to withdraw it, and a mere consent to the entry of the name of another in the revenue papers does not create any such obligation (b).

A Revenue Court being competent under S. 111 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act to decide a question of title raised in the course of a partition proceeding, its decision upon such question, on becoming final, operates as a bar to the re-opening of the same matter in the Civil Court. The mere fact that the Revenue Court did not adopt the procedure, as laid down in the said section, does not detract from its value as a decision of a competent Court (c).

A Revenue Court acting under S. 114 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act is not precluded from dealing with an objection filed beyond the time fixed by it for filing objections, if it has not up to that time taken any action under that section (d).

A complete partition has the effect in law of vesting title in the party in whose favour partition has been carried out, and a Civil Court has no jurisdiction to go behind it (e).

Where a Revenue Court disallowed an objection raising a question of title merely on the ground that the opposite party was a recorded co-sharer in possession.

Held, that the order was appealable to the District Judge or to the Judicial Commissioner, although it did not specifically deal with the question of title in the right spirit (f). Kall Pershad v Thakur Del, 23 Ind. Cas. 965.

(17) S. 233 (k)—Plots wrongly entered in Khasra—Mistake not known—Suit instituted on discovery of mistake—Estoppel.

In a perfect partition of a village, two Mahals D and G were prepared and D was assigned to plaintiffs. Certain plots which were subsequently numbered as 981 belonging to Mahal D and 797 belonging to Mahal G were marked in the Map in the right places, but by some mistake in the Khasra 797 was shown as being in D and 981 in G. The parties were not aware of the mistake. The plaintiff afterwards obtained a proprietary right to a part of Mahal G. R, a co-sharer, in the Mahal, applied for partition of Mahal G and made the plaintiff a party. The Revenue Court made a division of the Mahal on the basis of the entries in the Khaara and assigned 981 to the defendant. The defendant took proceedings against the tenants of 981 whereupon the mistake was discovered. The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit for declaration that No. 981 belonged to his Mahal and that the proceedings instituted by R did not affect his rights. Held that, on the application of R, the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction to partition any property situate in the Mahal other than the one for the partition of which an application was made. It had, therefore, no jurisdiction to divide the property situate in Mahal D and the present suit was not barred by S. 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act (2).

Held also, that the plaintiff was not estopped from setting up his right in the present case. Dharam Singh v. Ram Dial Singh, 12 A.L.J. 1126.

(1) List No. 6—Award and relinquishment, construction of—Performance of one's part under arrangement made impossible, effect of—Status quo ante—Entry of name of only one of two brothers, effect of—Hindu Law—Joint family partition—Separation of Hindu father from sons remaining joint, unusual—Objection as to right to sue as sole plaintiff, not by interested but by uninterested defendants, effect of—Interest—Penalty.

An award stated that A and B both were owners of equal shares, that B was to remain in possession of the whole property and collect rents but pay a certain sum to A as profits. Subsequently, by a deed A relinquished to B, every right except that to the sum of profits. It was, therefore, contended that A surrendered his title to the property:

Held, that, putting the award and the relinquishment at their highest, A at most consented to limit his claim to that particular sum in respect of profits and also not to alienate his share so long as he was paid that sum.

A person, who, by his own action, makes it impossible for himself to carry out his part under an arrangement, must allow the other person bound by it to return to the state of affairs existing before it.

Where the name of only A out of the two brothers, A and B, appeared in List No. 6 of grantees under Act I of 1869, while the names of both of them were all along recorded in the khewat as owners of equal shares:

Held, that the omission of A's name in the list proved merely that B's name was entered in his capacity as managing member of the family, and did not affect A's right.

The separation of a Hindu father while leaving his sons united is a most unusual thing.

When the right of a plaintiff to sue alone was not questioned by those defendants who had an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, but by those subsequently found as having no interest in it.

Held, that such an objection, as coming from persons not in a position to plead it, must be disregarded (a). Interest at an enhanced of rate Re. 1 per cent. per mensem is penal (b). Chhote Lal v. Badli Singh, 22 Ind. Cas. 129.

Held, that the words “portion of the produce of land” in the definition of rent as given in S. 2, cl. 5, Oudh Rent Act, mean a portion of what the land has actually produced and not a portion of what it might have produced. They cannot be held to be a portion of the produce which ought to have been grown upon the field.

Where a tenant deliberately omits to cultivate a holding the rent of which is payable in kind, no arrears of rent can be held to exist and the landlord's remedy is to sue in the proper Court for damages for breach of the contract which such a tenant is implied to have made to cultivate the holding as well as his capacities and resources permit.

Held, further, that Ss. 124-C and 124-D apply only when the suit has been instituted in a wrong Court and not when the plaintiff has sued in the right Court upon a cause of action upon which he cannot succeed. Sri Krishna Lal v. Subhanl Sheikh Ghulam, 17 O.C. 55=23 Ind. Cas. 460.

The defendant was a co-sharer in a village. His share was sold by auction and was purchased by the plaintiff. At the time of the auction sale he was cultivating some land and he continued to cultivate the same thereafter without payment of any rent. Held, that the right of the landlord to claim rent for the use and occupation of the land came into existence for the first time after the sale was confirmed and as no consent was given by him at that time or afterwards he is entitled to have the rent determined under S. 127 and claim its recovery under S. 108, Rent Act, in one and the same suit. *Lattu Singh v. Plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 1,450 principal and interest on a bond, and obtained a decree for the principal amount, Rs. 1,258, payable by half-yearly instalments of Rs. 50 each. On his memorandum of appeal to the Divisional Court, plaintiff affixed a Court-fee stamp of Rs. 25, calculating the amount as follows: (1) Rs. 15 on account of ad valorem Court-fee payable on Rs. 192, interest which was disallowed by the first Court, and (2) Rs. 10 in respect of the prayer for the cancelment of that part of the decree which related to instalments. The Divisional Judge, however, ordered plaintiff to pay ad valorem Court-fee on Rs. 975 instead of the fixed fee of Rs. 10. The plaintiff failing to pay the required Court-fee his appeal was rejected under O. VII, r. 11 (b), read with S. 107 (2) of the Civ. Pro. Code.

On further appeal to the Chief Court.

(3) S. 8—Mausa Ganga, Tahsil Sirsa—Tenants breaking up waste—Acquisition of occupancy rights—Test.

Mr. Thorburn's decision in Case No. 406 of 1897-98 did not establish a new principle of law conferring occupancy rights under S. 8 on all tenants in the old Sirsa District who had broken up waste prior to 1882. It merely provided a new criterion by which each claim put forward by such persons to the establishment of such rights might equitably be decided. The application of the criterion depends upon the particular facts of each case, and the question at issue in every such case is one of fact whether the circumstances, and in particular the rate of rent paid, point to the conclusion that, at the time when the waste was broken up, tenants were so scarce as to be in a position to dictate their own terms. In cases where the breaking up of the waste took place prior to 1882, the probability that tenants were so scarce as to be in a position to dictate their own terms is greater than in cases where it took place later. But the probability is not to be taken as a certainty, in any case, and all the circumstances must be examined. Nawab Ali z. Lal Singh, 6 P.R. 1914 (Rev.).

(4) Ss. 38, 59 (1) (b) (c)—Rights of widow in an occupancy tenancy—Abandonment by widow—Effect—Rights of male collaterals.

The rights of a widow in an occupancy tenancy are very strictly limited by law. She cannot transfer the right by sale, gift or mortgage or even by sub-lease for a term exceeding one year.

Abandonment by a widow, like ejectment, terminates the rights of the widow, and the right of occupancy at once devolves upon the next claimant. At the very moment that the widow completed the period required to bring S. 38 of the Punjab Tenancy Act into operation she ceased to be the 'tenant having the right of occupancy' by the operation of S. 59 (1) (b) of that Act.

In order to establish the conditions contemplated by S. 38, the tenant, whose abandonment of his tenancy is alleged, must have been at some time in possession of the tenancy in question. Rugha v. Mughli, 2 P.R. 1914 (Rev.).

(5) Ss. 45 (1) and 84 (5)—Landlord and tenant—Notice of ejectment—Inclusion of field from which tenant was held not liable to ejectment—Suit by tenants to contest notice—Decree ex parte—Setting aside ex parte decree—Dismissal for default on restoration—Revision—Limits of revision by Financial Commissioner.

The landlords, N and others, caused a notice of ejectment under S. 45 (1) of the Punjab Tenancy Act to be served upon the tenants, H and others, in respect of certain land, and the notice included also a field bearing No. 743 which had been held in previous judicial proceedings to be a part of the land from which the tenants were not liable to be ejected. The tenants sued to contest their liability to ejectment and obtained an ex parte decree in their favour which was however set aside on the application of the landlords. The tenants absented themselves when the suit came on for hearing and it was dismissed for default. In passing orders, the Court did not direct the ejectment of the tenants in accordance with S. 45 (6) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, but the landlords obtained possession in execution of the decree.

Held that the fact that ejectment proceedings were twice in succession decided otherwise than upon the merits did not justify interference upon the revision side, in the absence of any indication of material irregularity.

Held, however, that the careless inclusion of field No. 743 in the notice of ejectment and the subsequent delivery of possession of field No. 743 was a material irregularity, and that possession of that field should be directed to be restored to the tenants.

Where there is on the part of two Courts a definite finding supported by the Revenue records of facts which give jurisdiction to the Revenue Courts and render the plaintiffs liable to ejectment, held, that the Financial Commissioner should not, as a Court of revision, interfere with such a finding of fact.

It has always been recognized that the Financial Commissioner, acting under S. 84 (5) of the Punjab Tenancy Act, has, within the limits prescribed for the revisional jurisdiction of the Chief Court, an absolute discretion to determine whether his intervention is expedient. The broad principle to follow is to interfere only when a refusal to interfere would result in injustice or failure of justice (a).

The circumstances which would justify the Court of the Financial Commissioner, on its revision side, in holding that a subordinate Court had acted either without jurisdiction or illegally or with material irregularity, when on the facts found by that Court there is no such lack of jurisdiction and no illegality or material irregularity, would have to be of a very exceptional kind, though absolute perversity in the finding or a serious misapplication of the law of evidence in arriving at it, might justify such interference. *Mahan Singh v. But the decision that S. 11 of the Civ. Pro. Code has no application to the partition orders of Revenue Officers does not connote a decision that such orders will henceforth have no legal finality. Act II of 1905 (Punjab Pre-emption).

(1) Punjab Alienation of Land Act (XIII of 1900)—Right to realize arrears of rent for agricultural land, not land—Objection as to omission of portion of property sold taken at late stage not entertainable—Amendment of plaint—Estoppel.

Held, that the right to realize arrears of rent of agricultural land, is not agricultural land within the meaning of the Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905), and the omission to include that right in a suit for pre-emption in respect of the land with which the said right is sold is not fatal to the suit.

'A right to receive rent,' which is included in the definition of 'land' as given in the Alienation of Land Act, means a right to receive rent which would become payable in future. It does not mean a right to realize arrears of rent which have already accrued due and are recoverable as a liquidated sum.

Held, also, that an objection taken by the vendee as to the omission in a pre-emption suit of a portion of the property sold, after the evidence of both parties has been recorded and on the date fixed for arguments in the case, is raised at too late a stage and should not be entertained by the Court. The Court, however, would be perfectly right in allowing amendment of the plaint, if it ever entertains the objection.

Held, further, that the Court will not draw vague and general inferences as to estoppel by conduct against a pre-emptor from the mere fact that a large number of the residents of the village in which the land in dispute is situate attempted to purchase it but failed before the sale in dispute took place. Shankar Lal v. Dallu, 132 P.W.R. 1914=280 P.L.R. 1914.

(2) S. 11, proviso—Vendee—Acquisition of new status as member of agricultural tribe after sale—Effect on pre-emptor's right—Suit for pre-emption—Land in dispute—Value for jurisdiction purpose below Rs. 250—Pre-emptive price above that sum—Further appeal—Whether lies.

On the 23rd October, 1906, an Arora sold agricultural land to a Kureshi of the same village who was an agriculturist and a co-sharer in the Khota which comprised the land sold. On the 12th April 1907 by a Government notification, the Kureshis were declared to be members of an agricultural tribe. In October, 1907, the plaintiff, an Arora, who was a member of the vendor's tribe and also a co-sharer in the Khota comprising the land sold, brought the present suit for pre-emption, alleging that he fulfilled the conditions of the proviso to S. 11 of the Pre-emption Act. The purchaser contended that, inasmuch as he became a member of an agricultural tribe before the date of suit, he acquired a right of pre-emption at least equal to that of the plaintiff whose suit must therefore fail.

Held, by the Chief Court on further appeal, that the plaintiff must succeed by reason of the superiority of his position at the date of sale and his retention of the status on which his suit was based (a).

Held, also, that, where, though the value of the land in dispute, at thirty years' Government revenue, was less than Rs. 250, the pre-emptive price was found to be Rs. 800, a further appeal lay to the Chief Court (b). *Amir Shah and Kamir Shah v. Held, that, neither a mother, nor a widow, who obtains possession of property left by her son or husband for enjoyment during her life or any shorter period, can be regarded as an 'heir' to that property within the meaning of Customary Law, and she could not claim 'pre-emption under sub-clause 'thirdly.' As a co-sharer she could claim only under sub-clause 'fourthly' of cls. (b) (a).

of vicinity. The custom of pre-emption was not found established and the claim was dismissed. Further appeal was admitted under S. 70 (1) (b) of the Punjab Courts Act on the ground of custom. A preliminary objection was taken that the appeal did not lie.

Held, that the objection must prevail, for it was immaterial whether the custom of pre-emption existed or not. The plaintiff's house was contiguous only to the shop and the baithak which was used for residential purposes, and this did not confer any right on the plaintiff and the right if it existed could not extend to the other house (a).

That, though the appeal had been admitted on the question of custom, it was not maintainable, for it was unnecessary to go into the question of custom to decide the case. Sirdar Ragbir Singh v. Amir Bakshah, 58 P.L.R. 1914=22 Ind. Cas. 960=93 P.W.R. 1914.

The fact that U was a proprietor in two of the three pattis in which the land sold was situate, cannot give him a preferential right of pre-emption over a rival pre-emptor so far as the land in the pattis in which the said rival pre-emptor is a proprietor is concerned.

S. 14 (c) of the Pre-emption Act, applied to the case and the statement of the vendors in their pleadings that, if they had any choice, they would prefer the land to go to U would not bring the case within the purview of cl. (e), of S. 14 of the Pre-emption Act.

Administration.

(1) Surety for an administrator of estate, if may be discharged or substituted—Surety, creating charge on his immoveable property, release of charge—Surety bond, discharge of and substitution—Administration account, if may be examined by Court.

Letters of administration were granted to the estate of the deceased K, a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga Law, to R, one of his first cousins, who for purposes of such administration was also appointed guardian of deceased's infant son, and R's two brothers stood surety for the administrator. The estate being a very large one, the Court required the sureties to charge their immoveable properties in the surety bond besides making them personally liable. The infant having died without issue and intestate, his paternal grandmother succeeded to the estate as his heir. R thereupon applied to Court stating that he had rendered an account of the estate as administered by him to the lady, and that she had the same examined by her constituted attorneys and that they were satisfied with the account and that the residue of the estate had been made over to her, and prayed that the sureties be discharged and the charge on their immoveable property be also discharged.

Administration—(Concluded).

The Court ordered that, on the lady's constituted attorneys filing a verified certificate together with the account or abstract thereof stating that they had examined and found it correct, and on the administrator filing the receipts for the debts paid to the satisfaction of the Registrar, the surety bond creating a charge on the immoveable properties of the sureties would be discharged, conditional upon the sureties executing a fresh security bond making themselves personally liable for the administration of the estate by the petitioner (a).

Administrator.

(1) Administrator pendente lite, commission by way of remuneration that may be properly charged—Assets in his hands, meaning of—Negotiable securities endorsed over to banks for loans obtained by deceased, assets to what extent—Such securities, if pledges in the hands of bank and bank if holders for value thereof to the extent of loan—Lien of bank for loan on negotiable securities—Contract Act, Ss. 172, 176—Account of administrator pendente lite passed, if amount to settled account and if any bar to recovery of monies retained by him to which he is not entitled—Fiduciary.

Administrator—(Continued).

position of such administrator—Estoppel—Laches—Acquiescence—Partition suit between Hindu sons—Mother's share, if ascertained before decree—Limitation, error of procedure, rectification within time, delay in completion of order and recording the representation of plaintiff—Limitation of suits against persons in fiduciary position.

Where Government securities are endorsed in bank or endorsed in favour of a bank and given to the bank as security for loans obtained, the bank would be not merely a pledgee but a holder for value of the negotiable instruments to the extent of the sum for which it had a lien. The delivery of securities so endorsed passed to the bank a legal and not a mere equitable title (a).

Where such Government securities were, after the debtor's death, sold by the bank through a firm of brokers nominated by the administrator pendente lite to the debtor's estate;

Held—That the bank did not sell as the agent of the administrator pendente lite and that so much of the sale-proceeds as the bank applied to the discharge of debts due to it were not assets that came into the hands of the administrator pendente lite and the latter was not justified in charging commission on the whole of the sale-proceeds of the Government securities but only on the balance that came into his hands after satisfaction of the lien of the bank.

Where the accounts of the administrator pendente lite were passed by Court, including the charge of commission on the whole of the sale-proceeds mentioned above, and the heirs had full knowledge of it through their agents and solicitor and the solicitor also expressed an opinion that commission so charged was properly charged, no estoppel arose to debar the heirs from suing the administrator for refund of the commission to which he was not legally entitled.

That this was not a case of opening a settled account but one of enforcing a claim against a fiduciary agent on the ground that he had retained more of the estate than he was entitled to under the order of Court authorising his remuneration, and the alleged acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff would be no defence to the suit.

The suit being also within the statutory period of limitation, the defence of laches could not prevail.

Where there was no evidence that the plaintiff knew that the facts as represented in the accounts were incorrect or that they did not rely on that representation, the inference was that they did so rely on the representation (b).

When one of four brothers governed by the Bengal School of Hindu Law sued for partition and their mother was made party and an administrator pendente lite was appointed to represent the interests of a deceased brother before partition was actually effected, such administrator was entitled to charge commission on $\frac{1}{4}$ th share of the whole estate and not on the $\frac{1}{5}$ th share as mother's share was a mere charge for maintenance and could not be declared before partition actually took place.

Where the administrator pendente lite charged commission on the whole estate when it came into his hands, he could not charge any commission on the sale-proceeds of any portion of it.

Where, on leave being asked for in the plaint under cl. 12 of the Charter, the Registrar on the Original Side of the High Court, under a misapprehension of the change in procedure, with regard to the filing of plaints, gave such leave but on discovery of the fact that the Registrar had no authority to grant such leave, the plaint was withdrawn on the 15th August 1907 and was immediately after presented before a Judge sitting on the Original Side who gave the leave and endorsed on the plaint "presented 15th August 1907," but there was delay in the office in completing the order and stamps were supplied upon requisition from the office on the 14th December 1907, and it was recorded in the office and also re-endorsed on the plaint that the plaint was re-registered and filed on the 18th December 1907; on objection being taken by the defendant that the suit was barred by limitation:

(2) Administration—Trust—Representation of estate by one of three administrators—Compromise by him—Effect on sale—Rights of bona fide auction purchaser—Limitation to set aside sale.

Where a testator died in 1866 leaving 7 sons and 4 daughters and executed a will containing a clause directing that the suit house along with four other houses be kept in trust and that the rents realised therefrom be divided equally among the whole of the children and their heirs respectively for their support and maintenance, and no trustees were appointed for the purpose and the executors did not do anything to carry out the terms, and in 1877 the 6th and 7th sons and one married daughter obtained letters of administration with the will annexed; held that a valid trust has been created and the trust is not void as infringing the rule against perpetuities because the estate given to the sons and daughters was an absolute estate. Held also that the administrators were bound to give the annual income of the house to the sons and daughters of the testator until they put them in possession, and till they did so the trust could not come to an end and the legatees would be entitled to institute a suit for administration with a view to get possession of their shares in the house.

Adverse Possession.

- (1) Ex propriety tenancy—Whether can be acquired by adverse possession—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901).

It is possible to acquire by adverse possession a right, short of full proprietorship. Where, therefore, on the death of a Hindu widow, her husband's brother S, as his next reversioner, took possession of a certain mahal owned by the deceased, litigation followed between him and his brother's sons, and by a decree on an award by the arbitrators the entire mahal was allotted to I, the son of a third brother, formal possession was given to I, in 1891, but S, and after him his heir, the defendant, remained in possession of certain plots of sir land appertaining to the mahal for over twelve years; held, that the defendant acquired by adverse possession the status of an ex-proprietary tenant. *Ulfat Rai v. - (2) Adverse possession—Enclosing neighbour's land—Auction purchaser—Symbolical delivery.

Where one of two owners of neighbouring lands encloses with his own a portion of the other's lands, the act is a most unequivocal assertion of the intention to appropriate it. In the absence of any circumstances to show that the occupation was permissive, such possession must be held to be adverse.

Where the land purchased at a sale in execution is in the adverse possession of a third person, symbolical delivery to the auction-purchaser is not effective in saving limitation. Rompicherla v. Shaik Ismael Saheb, 21 Ind. Cas. 765.

- (3) Adverse possession—Entry into possession as limited heir—Daughter-in-law succeeding to mother-in-law's stridhan property—Prescription—Acquisition of title—Only limited interest—Absolute title—Evidence to show acquisition of—Nature of.

C, a Hindu widow governed by the Benares school of Hindu law, owned the suit property as her stridhan. In 1889, C died leaving behind a daughter, the present defendant and her daughter-in-law, P. On C's death, P. entered into possession claiming title as C's daughter-in-law and remained in possession till her death in 1908. Plaintiffs, the reversioners of the husband of C, now sued to recover possession as being the nearest pendapas of P's husband.

Held, that P's possession was adverse to the defendant, that she acquired by prescription only a daughter-in-law's limited interest which came to an end on her death, and that the defendant came in again as her mother C's heir.

When a person enters on land under a title as heir which is necessarily a limited title, as in the present case, very cogent evidence is

CHATTERJEA and TEUNON, JJ.

- (5) Gramanatham—Storing straw ricks—Possession and enjoyment whether adverse—Madras Act III of 1905.

Spencer, J.—Storing straw ricks upon a part of the gramanatham will not give any title to any person as against Government by adverse possession, for such possession must be adequate in continuity, publicity and extent (a).

Occupation of a fugitive and temporary nature or temporary use as vacant house site or back-yard is not sufficient to create a title (b).

When the property concerned is land which, even before the introduction of Act III of 1905, was universally recognised as being the property of the State, a person who executes documents purporting to transfer ownership in it does so at his own risk, as he should know that the efficacy of the transfer is liable to be repudiated.

The animus possidendi of parties to such transactions must necessarily be of an inconsequential character.

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The Government's right to a natham poramboke site for residential purposes provided it is not already owned and possessed, is indisputable.

But a plaintiff who comes into Court in ejectment, though claiming under a grant from Government, ought to prove that the site was not owned and possessed by the defendant at the time of the grant to the plaintiff by the Revenue authorities.

In determining what right adverse possession would confer on the holder, the animus possidendi is the decisive factor. The character in which possession is held must determine the right which the possession would confer. Storing hayricks on a piece of waste land when the title to that land vests in another will not ordinarily raise a presumption that the act of possession is accompanied with the intention to assert an ownership title over it in denial of the title of the real owner (c).

But where the defendant has let an oral and documentary evidence to the effect that the defendant's ancestor sold the site to a stranger several years ago and that his family repurchased from that stranger in 1879, it is difficult to hold that a person who has sold and repurchased a site did not intend to assert an ownership title in himself.

If the animus to assert a right in himself and to deny a title in anybody else could be inferred from these acts of sale and re-purchase, the acts of enjoyment like putting up hayricks will constitute adverse possession against the true owner though, without the proof of such an animus, those acts may be merely treated as permissive and not as adverse possession. Putloer Boyanna v. - (6) Grant of land under Darkhast rules—Rules not complied with—Jurisdiction—Adverse possession—Presumption—Confined to spot actually in possession.

The fact that a Divisional Officer contravened certain rules framed for his guidance does not affect his jurisdiction to cancel a grant made by a Tahsildar.

The ordinary presumption that a person having title has possession over the whole if he exercises acts of ownership only over a portion leaving the rest as waste, does not arise in the case of a trespasser whose adverse possession will be restricted to the particular portions in his possession. Karla Kownden alias Arunachalla Kownden v. - (7) Adverse possession—Burden of proof—Presumption—Limitation.

In a suit for the recovery of a house, the plaintiffs alleged that the defendant had unlawfully and without any right taken possession of it ten years before suit and after the death of the plaintiffs' ancestor. The defendant pleaded more than twelve years' adverse possession. The Court found that the death of plaintiff's ancestor took place more than twelve years prior to the institution of the suit.

Held, under the circumstances, (1) that no presumption as to continuation of the plaintiff's possession could be made in his favour;

(2) that it was for the plaintiff to prove by prima facie evidence that he had been in possession of the house within twelve years. Musamat Hulaso v. Salamat Khan, 23 Ind. Cas. 521.

RAFIQUE, J.

- (8) Hindu joint family—Possession of one coparcener, nature of—Alienation by such coparcener—Effect—Alienee's possession, whether adverse.

Plaintiffs and defendants 1 and 2 were coparceners jointly interested in the plaint property. Defendants 1 and 2 were in possession of the property and they sold it to the 5th defendant in 1890. The alienee claimed to have derived title to the whole property from defendants 1 and 2, contending that the whole of it, and not merely the rights of the defendants 1 and 2 therein, was purported to be sold to him, and he also claimed to have asserted a title in himself adverse to the plaintiffs since 1890 and that his title had become perfected by 12 years' adverse possession. There was no evidence that plaintiffs had knowledge of the fact that the defendants 1 and 2 or the 5th defendant ever asserted a title adverse to the plaintiffs.

Held that the plaintiffs' rights to the property in question was not barred by adverse possession.

A co-parcener holds property under conditions one of which for the present purposes may be described as the disability to claim that his possession is adverse to that of the other coparceners, unless they have notice of his purporting so to hold the property. It is difficult to understand how a person holding property with limitations can pass to a transferee a title free from those limitations. Muthukrishna Iyengar v. - (9) Adverse possession—Suit against Government—Projection in front of house—Public pathway—Portion thereof—Proof of possession for over 12 years—No acts of possession by Government or plaintiff proved prior to 12 years—Government not bound to prove possession within 60 years—Presumption of possession on Government's behalf—Art. 149, Limitation Act, 1908—Limitation.

Where the plaintiff built a projection in front of a house in 1868 and thus remained in possession of a portion of a public pathway since that date, and there was no evidence as to any acts of possession by the plaintiff or the Government prior to 1868.

Held that, in the case of a public pathway, the presumption is that the public have been using every portion of it unless some one had encroached upon it and obstructed their user, and that it must follow that prior to 1868 the public, as beneficiaries of the Government who have set apart the property for their use, have been in enjoyment, and that the suit against Government was therefore rightly dismissed.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Where a private person proves that he has been in possession for over 12 years, the onus is on the Government to show that they had some possession within 60 years (a).

Per Kumarasami Sastri, J.—It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that, in a suit against the Government for recovery of possession of immovable property and damages for trespass, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed merely by showing possession for over twelve years before suit, unless the Government can show possession or title within 60 years. All that the cases decide is that, when possession whose origin cannot be definitely fixed has been proved against the Government for a long series of years (not less than twelve), it is reasonable to presume that such possession commenced at a period over sixty years ago, so as to throw on the Government the onus of showing either a subsisting title or possession within 60 years (b). Sambasiva Mudaliar v. (12) Adverse possession—Revenue records—Entry in—Recorded owner not in possession—Title—Burden of proof—Boundary dispute—Decision when not binding on parties.

The plaintiffs, who were proprietors in the village of Musapur in Jullundur District, sued for possession of two plots of land of which they claimed to be owners. The defendants, who were proprietors in the village of Domeli in the Kapurthala State, pleaded that the land in suit had for the last 50 years formed part of their village and had been in their possession as owners. They also pleaded that, if the plaintiffs were proved to have been the owners of the land, they had lost their ownership by reason of adverse possession on the part of the defendants. Between the two villages flowed a stream and the lands on both sides of it were subject to the action of the water.

It appeared that the defendants had been in possession of the land ever since it was brought under cultivation, i.e., for a period of between 20 to 30 years and in the settlement record of the years 1871—1873 and 1891-92 of the Kapurthala State the defendants were recorded as owners of the land. In the Settlement of 1850-51 of the Jullundur District both the plots were apparently entered as part of the Musapur Estate, but in the revised Settlement of 1884-85 one of the plots was not so shown and of the other plot one half was shown as banjar and belonging to the proprietors of Musapur, but the possession of the cultivated portion always remained with the defendants. The plaintiffs relied also on the boundary line of the two villages demarcated by the Revenue officers of the two estates. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit, but the Divisional Judge decreed the claim holding that the plots in dispute had gone over to the Domeli side as the result of avulsion and the plaintiffs were entitled to their possession as owners.

Held, that the burden of proving superior title lay on the plaintiffs, and they had failed to prove it. It was abundantly proved that the possession had all along remained with the defendants.

That as to demarcation of boundary line it was not quite clear on what data the decision of the Revenue Officers was based and what authority they had for coming to a decision so as to settle the question of title to the land which had been debatable ground for a long series of years. Amar Singh v. Bhola, 240 P. L. R. 1914.

(13) Adverse possession—Proof of—Practice—Pleadings—Suit for redemption—Plaintiff's failure to prove mortgage—Plaintiff's possession through mortgagees proved—Decree in plaintiff's favour—Issue remitted by High Court—New case.

This was a suit for redemption against certain persons alleged to be mortgagees and the appellant who had purchased the property in execution of a decree against other persons who were not its owners. The relief the plaintiffs asked for was redemption against the mortgagees and ejectment of the trespasser. The mortgagees admitted the title of the plaintiffs but the defendant-appellant denied the mortgage and the right of the plaintiffs. The lower appellate Court finding that the mortgage was not proved dismissed the suit. On an issue being referred by a single Judge of the High Court, it further found that the persons whom the plaintiffs called their mortgagees were in possession. The single Judge on this finding decreed the suit.

Held, by Richards, C.J.—That the lower appellate Court having found that no mortgage was proved, the single Judge was not justified in sending down an issue to enquire whether the plaintiffs or any one on their behalf was in possession within 12 years next before the institution of the suit. The plaintiffs having failed to prove the case set up by them the suit was rightly dismissed.

Held by Banerji, J.—That the failure of the plaintiffs to prove as against the appellant the mortgage alleged by them would not make the possession of the mortgagees or their successors adverse to them. Possession in order to be adverse must be coupled with an express or implied claim of right and in this case the mortgagees, who were found, on an issue remitted to the Court below, to be in possession, never having denied the right of the plaintiffs, the latter were entitled to possession (a). Asad Ali v. Where possession can be referred to a legal right, there is no acquisition of title by prescription.

When one of several heirs takes possession of an inheritance, his possession is not adverse to his co-heirs (a).

If the possession of a person can be traced to a lawful title, possession will be referred to such title and would not be treated as the possession of a trespasser.

Plaintiffs were the purchasers of $\frac{2}{3}$ share of certain lands which belonged to A. A's widow

B died in 1895 leaving one grandson M by one daughter and 3 grandsons by the other daughter. Prima facie each grandson got $\frac{1}{4}$ share as reversioner of A. The 3 grandsons other than M sold their $\frac{3}{4}$ share in 1899 to plaintiffs. M, the other grandson, however claimed the whole property under a deed of gift from his grandmother B executed in 1895 shortly before B's death, and he sold it in 1899 to defendant. Plaintiffs sued in 1909 for possession of the $\frac{3}{4}$ share purchased by them. The lower Courts dismissed the suit as barred by limitation on the ground that M enjoyed the property from 1895 till 1899 when he sold it to defendant and defendant enjoyed it from 1899 (from ten years before suit) and the two periods together made up more than 12 years.

Held, on appeal, that, as M's possession on B's death could be traced to his lawful title as one of the reversioners after B's death, M's possession on B's death should be treated as the possession of one of the lawful heirs, and not as that of a person who held under the title created by B's gift deed which was invalid beyond her life. M's possession, therefore, between 1895 and 1899 was not adverse to plaintiff's vendors, and the period of his possession between B's death and the sale deed to defendant in 1899 cannot be tacked on to the possession of the defendant after 1899; and that the suit was not barred. Ponnusawmy Iyer v. Agraharamdars.

Agraharamdars—Suit to eject tenants—Jurisdiction of Civil or Revenue Court—Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), Ss. 3 (2), 6 (1), 8—Presumption—Land revenue alone granted—Terms of grant—Evidence—Tenants, whether affected—Meaning of "acquired" in exception to S. 8.

A suit brought by an agraharamdar to eject tenants from the lands granted to him as a surva inam must be brought in a Revenue Court alone, as such an inamdar merely holds an "estate" within the meaning of S. 3 (2) of the Estates Land Act.

Sadasiva Iyer, J.—No distinction should be made between an inamdar and seminadar as to the presumption to be raised in respect of the kudivaram right in the land of which the inamdar or the seminadar is the proprietor.

The presumption ought to be that the seminadar or the inamdar is not owner of the kudivaram (a).

The same presumption should be raised in order to determine the jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

An inamdar cannot be said to "acquire" the kudivaram interest in the land within the meaning of the exception to S. 8 of the Estates Land Act, if the tenant either abandons or surrenders the land (b).

Agraharamdars—(Continued).

Spencer, J.—The mere use of the words "enjoy the produce of the land" in an inam grant does not connote anything more than an alienation of the revenue (c).

• Where there is nothing to show what was granted at the commencement of a tenancy, it must be presumed to be co-extensive with the duration of the tenure of the landlord (d).

The presumption is the same whether the grant was made by Government or by certain Reddi rulers.

• The correct rule to be applied by the Courts in India, in construing grants by former Governments, is the rule of English Law as to construction of grants to subjects by the Crown (e).

The presumption of occupancy rights in the tenants in zemindaris was established by a long course of decisions before the introduction of the Madras Estates Land Act (f).

As regards inams and agraharams, if the agraharamdar or inamdar does not own the kudivaram right, they will fall under S. 3, cl. (2), of the Estates Land Act.

The Estates Land Act has, in this respect, essentially altered the position as to inams (g).

There is no presumption that an inam grant includes both melvaram and kudivaram rights; the inamdar is bound to prove his title to eject (h).

In the absence of conclusive evidence one way or the other, and when neither side is in a position to show where the jurisdiction lies, the natural presumption, which Courts have recognised about grants from the Crown being grants of revenue, comes into play and will have the effect of shifting the onus to the party to whom it is disadvantageous (i).

The principle applies even to minor inams in an agraharam (j).

Where minor inamdars sue to eject tenants, they must show that they let in the tenants at the beginning of their occupation (k).

The word "acquired" used in the exception to S. 8 of the Estates Land Act must be construed so as to include cases of surrender or relinquishment, but that must be read in conjunction with S. 6, cl. (1), and S. 3, cl. (7), so as to apply to cases where the land so "acquired" was in the possession of the inamdar for ten years, a period necessary to extinguish the right of a cultivator to claim that the land may be given to him for cultivation. *Aduumuli Suryanarayana v. Agreement.

(1) Agreements to stifle prosecution in respect of an offence of a public nature, validity of—Compromise in respect of offences of a public nature but involving civil liability to an injured party, validity of.

An agreement to stifle a prosecution in respect of an offence of a public nature is against public policy and illegal. Agreements of that class being founded upon the suppression of criminal offences have a tendency to subvert public justice and it is a well recognised rule that a person who has a public duty to perform should not be allowed to cause public injury in order to make a profit for himself. But there is no obligation on a person to forego his private rights and in all offences which involve damages to an injured party for which he may maintain an action, it is competent for him, notwithstanding they are of a public nature, to compromise or settle his private damage in any way he may think fit.

Where the consideration for a promise is to abstain from or withdraw a criminal prosecution for a non-compoundable offence, the promise cannot be enforced. But in cases like those of criminal breach of trust or embezzlement, where there is always a civil liability, a bond can be taken in acknowledgment of that civil liability, provided the stifling of the prosecution forms no part of the consideration. Lachman Das v. Narain, 17 O.C. 213.

drugs was acquired in the name of the plaintiff after that agreement had been made, held, that the agreement was not illegal.

Held further, that the rules on the subject which have the force of law lay down no more than that the Government refuses to recognize any person for the purposes of management of the realisation of the Government demand other than the person or persons named as lessees. There is nothing in the rules to prevent a lessee agreeing to transfer a portion of the profits or losses resulting from the lease, to a third party (a).

Held, also, that under O. XX, r. 15, Civ. Pro. Code, it is within the discretion of a Court either to pass or not to pass a preliminary decree and a Court would make an improper use of this discretion if it passed a preliminary decree for the determination of points on which the parties had already agreed. *Merha Mussamat v. (4) Revision—Plaint—Amendment—Full Bench of Presidency Court of Small Causes—Jurisdiction to direct amendment of plaint—Amendment altering nature of suit.

The Full Bench of the Presidency Court of Small Causes may, on an application for a new trial, allow a plaint to be amended, even though the suit was decided by a single Judge. An amendment of a plaint, even if it changes the nature of the cause of action and the suit, can, though unusual, be permitted when its effect is an avoidance of a multiplicity of suits, and a determination in the suit itself of the questions at issue between the parties.

The real restriction on the power of amendment of pleadings is that the parties should not be prejudicially affected. If the prejudice is such as can be compensated for by the payment of costs, then the Courts ought not to hesitate to permit the amendment if the ends of justice require it.

The High Court should only interfere with an order of a Small Cause Court where interference is necessary for the ends of justice. Gangi Sait v. Ahmed Hussain Sait, 22 Ind. Cas. 241.

in the mortgage-deed that, if the mortgagees could not obtain possession of the plots, or if their possession was disturbed, they would be entitled to recover their money by sale of the mortgaged plots, or, by sale of the zemindari share to which these plots appertained or from the person and other property of the judgment-debtor. The suit was brought on the last day of limitation for sale of the specified plots. It appeared at a later stage that the plots in suit had changed hands in the meantime and for certain reasons could not be sold and the plaintiff applied for amendment of the plaint and asked for sale of the zemindari share. The Court below allowed the amendment.

Held that the cause of action for sale of the zemindari having become barred by limitation, the Court had no power to allow amendment of the plaint by introducing a new cause of action (a).

Held, further that, when a plaintiff does not bring a suit upon his mortgage for so long a time as seventeen years, the Court is entitled to draw an inference adverse to him either as to the passing of consideration or as to payment of interest (b). Balkaran Upadhyaya v. A Court can, by virtue of its inherent power provided by S. 151, or by the power vested in it under S. 152 of the Code, alter or vary the order and the decree passed by it, although the decree is apparently not inconsistent with the order in the judgment, when it finds that the language of the ordering portion of the judgment is elliptical and ambiguous, and the order and the decree do not correctly state what was actually decided (a).

A suit was contested both in the Court of first instance and in the appellate Court by one among several defendants, and the appeal by the plaintiff was allowed and "the suit decreed with costs," and the decree prepared in the appellate Court gave costs against all the defendants. On an application for amendment of the decree for costs made by some of the non-contesting defendants.

Held, upon a consideration of the whole judgment passed in appeal, that the Court in deciding the case did not really intend to saddle all the defendants with costs, and as such the decree should be amended. And the Court, acting ex proprio motu, further directed that the order in favour of the applicants should also be extended to the cases of other defendants, although they did not join in the application for amendment of the decree.

(1) Limitation—Appeal—Failure to file copy of the decree—Further time allowed for an appeal—Sufficient cause—S. 5 of Act IX of 1908—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XLI, r. 1.

Held, that failure to present a copy of the decree appealed against within the time allowed for an appeal amounts to not filing the appeal at all, and time cannot be extended for the purpose of making up the deficiency, particularly when the appellant has already lost the opportunity once granted to him for doing so. *Achhar Singh v. (2) Pauper—Application for leave to appeal as—Presentation of unstamped appeal memorandum along with it—Rejection of application—Subsequent stamping of memorandum of appeal—Expiry of period of limitation at date of stamping—Bar of limitation—Poverty not sufficient cause—Limitation Act, s. 5—Mistake of counsel—Failure of Court Officers to inform—Refund of Court-fee—Not allowed.

An unstamped memorandum of appeal was along with the appellant's application to be allowed to appeal as a pauper, filed before the period of limitation expired. But, the application for leave to appeal as a pauper having been rejected, the memorandum of appeal was stamped afterwards, by which time the period of limitation for filing the appeal expired.

Held, that it was only when it was duly stamped that the memorandum of appeal became one that could be acted on by the Court, and that it became time-barred when it was received by the Court duly stamped.

Held, also, that poverty was not a sufficient cause within the meaning of S. 5 of the Limitation Act for admitting an appeal after the ordinary period of limitation prescribed therefor has expired.

Where the counsel for the appellant applied for the refund of the Court-fee paid on the appeal on the ground that he was misled by the practice of the Court and that the clerk of the Court failed to inform him and to decline to receive the fee.

Held that it was not obligatory on the Court Clerk to have informed him and that the refund could not be ordered, because counsel could not have been legally heard at all on the question of limitation if he had not presented a duly stamped memorandum. S. Pro. Code, 1882, s. 592-A—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, S. 149.

The defendants in a suit upon a mortgage appealed against the order absolute. The appeal was lodged in time, but upon the memorandum of appeal a Court-fee of 8 annas only was attached. Exception was taken at the office whereupon the Judge held that ad valorem Court-fees must be paid. The appellants were granted time and the deficit Court-fee was paid. When the appeal was taken up for disposal, the District Judge held that the appeal was not filed in time as it must be deemed to have been presented on the day when the deficit Court-fee was paid. The appeal was, consequently, dismissed as barred:

Held, that the appellants by mistake treated the order as made in course of proceedings in execution of the preliminary decree and presented the appeal as a miscellaneous appeal against an order in execution proceedings; that, as there was no reason to hold that the appellants deliberately did not pay the Court-fee in the first instance, the appeal should have been treated as presented in time. *Hari Charan Dey v. - (4) Question of law raised for first time in appeal, when may be allowed to be taken.

When a question of law is raised for the first time in a Court of last resort, upon the construction of a document, or upon the facts either admitted or proved beyond controversy, it is not only competent but expedient, in the interests of justice, to entertain the plea. The expediency of adopting that course may be doubted when the plea cannot be disposed of without deciding nice questions of fact, in considering which the Court of ultimate review is placed in a much less advantageous position than the Courts below. But the course ought not in any case to be followed unless the Court is satisfied that the evidence establishes beyond doubt that the facts, if fully investigated, would have supported the new plea. *Basi Mohan Malaker v. - (9) Admission of appeal presented after time—Discretion of Court—Discretion must be legal and regular—Presentation of appeal to a wrong Court not sufficient cause—Ss. 5, 14, Limitation Act (1908).

Discretion when applied to a Court of law means discretion guided by law. It must not be arbitrary, vague and fanciful, but legal and regular.

The presentation of an appeal to a wrong Court through a mistake in or ignorance of law is not a sufficient cause for admitting an appeal after time.

In an appeal filed after its time, the appellant should file his memorandum of appeal and state in it the grounds on which he asks the Court to admit it after time. Nga Po Kan v. Nga Shwe Dat, 7 Bur. L.T. 250.

—2.—Second Appeal.(1) Findings of fact, when to be questioned—Value of evidence.

The findings of fact cannot be disturbed by the second appellate Court, unless the appellant succeeds in showing that the Court below committed some error of law in arriving at its conclusions.

The question of what value should be attached to the evidence produced by the parties respectively is not a matter to be decided in second appeal. Dulare Singh v. Sumer Singh, 21 Ind. Cas. 95.

LINDSAY, J.C.

(2) Material irregularity—Second appeal on the ground of the lower Court refusing to take whole evidence—Party closing his case—Practice.

Held, that, where the first Court has recorded that a party has closed his case, that party cannot successfully urge in appeal that the Court refused to receive the whole of his evidence without proving conclusively that the record is wrong, specially when the objector is represented by counsel in the lower Court.

Held, also that the lower appellate Court ought specifically to dispose of the grounds of appeal urged before it. Bhiwani v. Das Jhanda Ram, 3 P.W.R. 1914=27 P.L.R. 1914=23 Ind. Cas. 352.

REID, C.J.

(3) Second appeal—Necessity—Previous mortgage—Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by Act IV of 1912, S. 40.

Held, that, where the lower appellate Court has found as a fact, after discussing each item of consideration, that no necessity has been proved, the Chief Court would not interfere with those findings on second appeal.

Held, also that the fact that a previous mortgage is more than 12 years old is of no importance when it is not shown that mutation with regard to it was effected more than 12 years

SCOTT-SMITH, J.

(4) Second appeal—Lower Appellate Court's duty in reversing judgment.

The lower appellate Court is not bound to dispose seriatim of all the reasons given by the first Court, if it gave special reasons of its own for coming to an opposite conclusion. Jatra Mohan Nandi v. Pitambar Mistri, 19 C.L.J. 385.

(5) Second Appeal—Court ignoring important evidence—Good ground of appeal—Pre-emption—Absence of good faith—Market value where to be allowed—Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by the Punjab Acts I and IV of 1912, S. 40.

Held, that, it is a good ground for, and a finding of fact is liable to be set aside in, a second appeal, where the lower appellate Court decides a question of fact by too exclusive attention to one particular piece of evidence, ignoring other important proof relating thereto (a).

Held, also, that, where in a pre-emption suit a ridiculously high price of the pre-empted property is alleged to have been paid and the circumstances also show that it has been inflated, the Court is justified in concluding that it has not been fixed in good faith and allowing only its market value. Gobind Ram v. Hakim, 76 P.W.R. 1914=174 P.L.R. 1914=24 Ind. Cas. 880.

(6) Second appeal—Judgment—Meaning not clear.

The High Court set aside the judgment of the lower Court, not on the ground that it was erroneous, but on the ground of not knowing what it meant. Debendra Nath Chowdhry v. Annada Hadl, 19 C.L.J. 545.

JENKINS, C.J., and MOOKERJEE, J.

(7) Second appeal—Decision based on evidence not on the record—Admission by pleader in another suit—Weight to be attached.

In second appeal, the High Court reversed the judgment of the lower appellate Court based on evidence not on the record.

If a plaintiff relies upon any statement by the defendant or his pleader made in a previous litigation between the parties, that statement must be regularly proved. On proof of such statement, question arises as to the weight to be attached to it. Moni Lal v. Uma Charan, 19 C.L.J. 541.

Appeal—(Continued).—2.—Second Appeal—(Continued).*(8) Second appeal—Mixed question of fact and law—Ownership.

The defendants purchased the disputed land in execution of a money-decree against one B. Subsequently the predecessor of the plaintiffs purchased a half share of the said property from one G, who claimed to be co-sharer of B. In a question between the parties whether G had any interest in the property :

Held, that the mere fact that the cousins G and B, who were Mahomedans, lived together on the land, would not indicate that they were joint owners thereof.

That it was necessary to consider whether G was in possession of the land ; if so, what was the nature of that possession ? Was he in possession in his own right or by sufferance ? Did he ever cultivate the land ? Did he ever pay rent in respect thereof ? Radha Kristo Saha v. Umesh Chunder Chuckerbutty, 19 C.L.J. 539.

(2) Concurrent findings of fact by Courts in India—Ordinary presumption therefrom—Question relating thereto—Not a substantial question of Law S. 110, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908.

Where, from certain facts proved, two Courts arrived at a concurrent finding of fact, viz., that the appellant authorised a certain person to pledge certain jewels on her behalf, and where the appellant sought to obtain leave to appeal to the Privy Council,

Held, that the question whether the Courts were entitled to draw this very ordinary presumption does not involve a substantial question of law and that leave ought to be refused.

A question which only arises if the concurrent findings of fact of the Courts in India are disregarded, a question which never can arise so long as the Privy Council maintains those concurrent findings of fact, is not a substantial question of law which the appeal to the Privy Council involves (a). (Vide S. 110 Civ. Pro. Code 1908). Thein Noo v. Ramasawmy Chetty, 7 L.B.R. 103.

Arbitration.

- (1) Arbitration—Submission—Contract that parties or their witnesses shall be heard or not as arbitrators chose—When valid—Parties' power to restrict or exclude evidence—How far exercisable—Failure to pay a claim—Whether a 'matter in difference.'

A mere failure to pay a claim constitutes a matter in difference (a).

Where the reference provides for the arbitrators hearing the parties or their witnesses or not as they chose, held that the submission is not necessarily invalid qua a submission under the Indian Arbitration Act.

Where there are alternative methods of performing an agreement one of which is legal and the other illegal, the Court will presume that the parties intended to carry it out in the legal rather than in the illegal manner (b).

Parties are allowed to contract to curtail an inquiry before arbitrators by agreeing to rest their case on documentary evidence alone, provided it is sufficient to enable the arbitrators to really exercise a judicial discretion and not to decide haphazard or by chance (c). *Basrio Fadhoo Attorney of H. - (3) Reference to arbitration—Scope of words of reference—Joint Hindu family—Reference by manager whether binds other members of the family.

Held that the words "debts whether due in virtue of mortgage bonds or other deeds or not" in a reference to arbitration were wide enough to cover a lease or usufructuary mortgage, the consideration of which was old debts.

The father or manager fully represents the family and a reference to arbitration by the father or manager will, in the absence of fraud or collusion, be binding on the other members of the family. What we have to look to is whether the reference was for the benefit of the family. To seek an adjudication on a claim disputed or liable to be disputed, in the cheapest way possible, would be the act of a prudent manager, especially if he believes that part of the claim is irrecoverable in law or in regard to the debtor's ability to pay (a). *Ramdayal v. Assignment.

- (1) Assignment—Mortgagee assigning his rights to stranger—Communication of fact of assignment to debtor—No suit to set aside assignment afterwards—Payments to assignee—Validity.

V, the plaintiff, obtained a mortgage from S. the 1st defendant and assigned it in October 1897 in favour of D. S got a notice in November 1897 from V, that the assignment in favour of D was obtained by coercion and undue influence. S paid a portion of the mortgage debt to D before he got the notice from V and had the balance of the debt paid by A, who obtained a second usufructuary mortgage of the properties from S, after he got the notice.

Held, that payments made to the plaintiff's assignee before any suit to set aside the assignment was brought were binding on the plaintiff (a).

Payments made by a third person, who is the owner of a land and who treated the assignees of a mortgagee over the land as the mortgagees entitled to receive the mortgage amount, before the assignment was set aside by the assignor through the instrumentality of the decision of a Court of Justice, could not be questioned by the assignor as payment made to a person who had no right to receive such payments.

Where, therefore, a plaintiff attaches property of the judgment-debtor before judgment, and after obtaining the decree, applies for his arrest, but allows the application to be dismissed for default, the attachment is not thereby dissolved but continues effective.

Where a decree-holder applies in another execution petition to be allowed to share rateably in the proceeds of the sale of the property attached by him before judgment, but which is proposed to be brought to sale by another decree-holder, who had also attached it in execution of his decree, it cannot be said

The rules of the High Court make no special provision for the disciplinary procedure of the Court. The English procedure in its entirety cannot be adopted.

Attorney—(Concluded).

When the alleged misconduct of an attorney is the subject of consideration it is expedient to initiate proceedings by a rule, or motion or notice, calling on the attorney to answer the matter in the affidavits of the applicant. Service should be personal, a copy of the affidavits should be served with the rule or notice of motion, and the returnable date should allow sufficient time for an answer to be put in. Ordinarily ten days should suffice.

Disciplinary action against an attorney rests on the principle that the Court deems him an unfit person to act as an attorney, and not by way of punishment.

Anybody is entitled to inform the Court of the misconduct of an attorney (a).

A verification is a matter of great importance as possessing the security of being made under the sanction of a solemn declaration, for which the person making it would be liable to the penalties attaching to the crime of giving false evidence, if the declaration were false to his knowledge (b).

Even a strong case of suspicion is not enough to justify the disciplinary action on a summary proceeding, especially when there is a positive sworn denial and repudiation of the misconduct imputed. In re an Attorney, 14 Cr.L.J. 305=19 Ind. Cas. 993=41 C. 113 (S.B.)

(1) Arbitration without intervention of Court—Award—Order filing award, if appealable after decree in accordance with award—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 104, cl. (f), Sch. II, S. 21.

An appeal lies against an order filing an award made upon an arbitration without the intervention of the Court, even after a decree is passed upon the award.

The decree based upon the award is no doubt final, if it is in accordance with the award, but the validity of the decree depends upon the validity of the order directing the award to be filed, and if the latter is set aside, the decree must be declared inoperative. *Khettra Nath Gangopadhyay v. Award—(Continued).

- (2) Joint family business—Dissolution and accounts—Private arbitration—Award, operation of, on moneys realised by member on behalf of family—“Cash,” meaning of—Equitable set-off—Order made before remand, if binds Court at final hearing.

The members of a joint family business referred their disputes (in view of dissolution), to an arbitrator before whom on 31st July 1895 they stated inter alia that they had divided amongst themselves all the moveables consisting of cash and kind, etc., that a sum of Rs. 5,650 was payable to one of them B; that they had understood the accounts among themselves and that “now no co-sharer has any right to demand accounts from another,” and the arbitrator made his award on 5th August, 1895. At the date of the award there was an undischarged usufructuary mortgage executed on 16th June 1883, for 14 years, by one M., in favour of B as representing the family, to be discharged by receipt of the usufruct:

Held, that the terms and intent of the award precluded the other co-sharers from asking for an account of moneys realised previous to the date of the award.

The word “cash” referred to all moneys received by the parties before the statement was made to the arbitrator.

Held, further, that in the circumstances of the case, the Court of the Judicial Commissioner was right in allowing the defendant's plea of equitable set-off at the final hearing after a remand it had ordered for certain inquiries, although at the previous hearing it had upheld the decision of the lower Court rejecting the plea. *Thakur Sheo Narain Singh v. Held, that, a decree based on a private award filed in Court is not open to revision under S. 70 of Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by Act IV of 1912, particularly when there is no prima facie material irregularity or illegality in the award.

Held, also, that an award is not defective simply because that a finding therein is not based on any evidence; all that the Court has to see is the bona fides of the arbitrator (a).

Held, also, that a mere clerical error can be put right by a Court under the powers conferred on it by S. 151 of Civ. Pro. Code (1908). Thakardas v. Ramdas, 13 P.W.R. 1914 = 114 P.L.R. 1914 = 23 Ind. Cas. 950.

The petitioner to the rule claimed Rs. 6,000 odd as the balance due to him on various transactions from the opposite party. The latter, on the other hand, claimed that there was a balance of Rs. 5,000 odd due to him on the transaction. The dispute was referred to an arbitrator without the intervention of the Court, and the arbitrator eventually awarded Rs. 2,005 as due to the opposite party from the petitioner:

Held, that, by reason of the application to have the award in his favour filed in Court, the opposite party was to be regarded as a plaintiff suing for the amount of the award, that is, for Rs. 2,005, and an appeal against an order allowing the application of the opposite party by the Subordinate Judge lay to the District Judge and not to the High Court. *Mohes Chunder Kundu v. - (6) Arbitrator's award—Misconduct—Irregularity of procedure precluding proper inquiry—Corruption and partiality—Proof—Onus—Partition of property—Arbitrator, not assisted by parties seeking information as to valuation from outsider—Failure to keep notes of proceedings, not objected to, till after award—Examination of arbitrator as witness—Statements obtained as bearing on charge of corruption if admissible to question award on the merits—Arbitrator holding property claimed to be exclusive, as joint—Decision if binds owner—Error in subh decision if vitiates award—Property subject to mortgage, allotment of, to me with direction that all co-sharers should pay proportionately—Decision if vitiates award, apart from corrupt motive.

When a separable portion of an award is bad, the remainder, if good, can be maintained.

Award—(Continued).

If irregularities in procedure can be proved which would amount to no proper hearing of the matters in dispute, that would be misconduct sufficient to vitiate the award, without any imputation on the honesty or impartiality of the arbitrator.

The burden of proving that there had been no proper enquiry by the arbitrator is on the person who alleges it.

It is generally desirable that an arbitrator should make and retain for subsequent use, if necessary, notes of proceedings before him; but there is no warrant for holding that, in the absence of such notes, an award should be set aside at the instance of one of the parties who must be held to have known the general course of procedure and who did not make any protest until after the making of the award with the terms of which he was not satisfied.

An arbitrator selected by the parties comes within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence, and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made, any relevant evidence which he can give is properly admissible. But evidence so admitted as relevant on a charge of dishonesty or partiality cannot be used to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and on which his decision is final, e.g., to criticise methods adopted by him in determining the quantum of his valuations, for purposes of partition—a matter within his discretion (a).

Apart from examining its bearing on the charge of corruption, it is beyond the competency of the Court to scrutinise the estimate of value appearing on the face of the award.

An arbitrator appointed by the parties to partition their joint estate decided that a house claimed by one of the parties to be exclusively hers was in fact joint and allotted it to one of the other parties.

Held—that the decision whether right or wrong did not in this case support the inference that he was actuated by dishonest motive. If he was wrong, the allottees would suffer as the award could have no effect whatever in defeating the title of the true owner.

The arbitrator allotted to one of the parties properties subject to a heavy charge, but at the same time provided that the mortgage-debt and interest should be a charge on the entire property and each co-sharer was to be liable to pay in proportion to his share and should pay that share to the mortgagee as soon as possible:

Held—that it was not within the province of the Court to decide whether this provision gave full protection to the allottee. The matter having been considered by the arbitrator, his decision could not be questioned by the Court unless the charge of corruption or misconduct was established. Musammam Amir Begam v. Where the arbitrator gives no notice to the parties of his intention to enter upon the reference or of the time or place of his doing so and he otherwise acts irregularly in the discharge of his duties, he is guilty of legal misconduct (as distinguished from moral misconduct in the case of corruption, partiality, etc.) and the award must be set aside, and the Court has the power to remit the award to the arbitrator for re-consideration.

Where the award is bad on the face of it, where there has been misconduct on the part of the arbitrator, where there has been an admitted mistake and the arbitrator himself asks that the matter may be remitted, and where additional evidence has been discovered after the making of the award, the award could be remitted to the arbitrator for re-consideration (a).

(8) Award—Decree—Payment to defendant directed to be made within a time and thereafter after ejectment of defendant—Executory and not declaratory—Nature of decrees.

The plaintiff was directed by an award decree to pay the defendant a sum of Rs. 500 and odd within three months and thereon to eject the defendant from a certain house.

Held, that the decree was executory and not merely declaratory, and that the plaintiff was directed absolutely to make the payment of Rs. 500 within 3 months and thereon the defendant was to be absolutely ejected from the house.

Neither the payment nor the ejectment has been made dependant on any uncertain future events (a).

Held, also that, under the decree, payment was permitted to be made voluntarily at any time within 3 months, but thereafter would be enforceable by execution. Similarly there was to be no forcible ejectment before payment, but after payment ejectment should be enforceable by execution through Court. Heendragmal Chatomal v. - (9) Appeal—Award—Decree—Not appealable—Revision by High Court—Not ordinarily competent.

No question can arise as to the regularity of arbitration proceedings in pending litigation, because the agreement to refer and the application to the Court must have the concurrence of all parties and the actual reference is the order of the Court. No appeal on the ground that the award was void ab initio would lie. Where a decree based on an award is in question, the decreeing Court is made the sole Judge of its propriety and no appeal lies. In such a case O. XXXIII, r. 3, Civ. Pro. Code, has no application. The High Court will not also ordinarily interfere with such a decree in revision. *Nidamurthi Krishnamurthi v. According to the terms of a deposit receipt issued by a private banker, the deposit money was payable on the production of the receipt. The receipt, being stolen from the depositor, was presented to the banker, by a cooly who, according to the banker, was paid the whole of the money due under it without any inquiry as to how he came by the receipt:

Held, on depositor suing the banker for recovery of his money, that, even if the banker paid anything to that cooly who produced the receipt, it was not in the bona fide belief that the cooly was authorised by the depositor to receive it.

Benami Transactions.

(1) Benamidar and real owner—Transaction entered into by benamidar alleged to be unauthorized by real owner—Effect—Estoppel by fraud.

Where property is held benami and the ostensible owner assents to its being disposed of to the prejudice of the real owner, the latter cannot be allowed to object, the fraud being a consequence of his own act: So if the property is purchased in the name of a benamidar, and the indicia of ownership are placed in his hands, the true owner can only get rid of the effects of an alienation by showing that it was made without his acquiescence and that the purchaser took with notice of that fact.

The consideration of Rs. 650 of the conveyance of the 12th May 1903, whereby the 1st defendant purported to purchase the land in suit, proceeded from the former owner; this conveyance was in his possession and showed him to be the purchaser and he was recorded as in possession in the Revenue registers. The only fact which can be alleged as existing which should have put plaintiff on enquiry is the 2nd defendant's claim that he was in possession of the land; but as at that season, the 12th June, probably agricultural operations had not commenced, it may be doubted whether he or any one was in actual occupation of the land.

Held that the plaintiff cannot be fixed with constructive notice of the alleged defect in his mortgagor's title and that accordingly the mortgage was good. Maung Kya v. Y.P.L. Y.N. Firm, 7 Bur. L.T. 8 = 23 Ind. Cas. 368.

intended fraud was wholly inoperative—Burden of proof—Real owner to prove that fraud was inoperative.

The respondents sought to recover some land which they alleged they had transferred benami to the appellant and another by a registered deed in order to defeat the claims of their creditors. The first Court dismissed their suit, but the Divisional Court granted them possession, without, however, ordering the cancellation of the sale deed which they also asked for, on the ground that the fraud contemplated was wholly inoperative.

Held that, if this be so, they are entitled to recover the land under the Privy Council Ruling in T.P. Pethepermal Chetty v. R. Muniamby Siva.

As to the question upon whom the burden of proof on the point lay, held that it lay upon the plaintiff to prove that no part of the intended fraud had in fact been carried out; that as the plaintiff was alleging an intended fraud on his own part and seeking to escape the consequences of it, he was bound to allege and to prove that the intended fraud was in fact wholly inoperative; and further that, unless he alleged and proved that fact, his suit must fail, and therefore the burden lies on him to prove it. *Sweydall v. (3) Criterion—Source of purchase-money—Onus probandi—Party alleging benami to prove it—Father of infant vendee paying purchase money—Not necessarily benami transaction.

The real criterion of determining whether or not a given transaction of sale and purchase of property is benami is to see the source from which the purchase-money comes.

The onus of proving that the vendee mentioned as such in a deed of sale is only benamidar and not the real purchaser lies upon the party alleging it.

The fact that the father of an infant vendee paid the purchase-money entered in sale-deed executed in favour of the infant is not sufficient of itself to shew that the infant was a benamidar only. Habibullah Khan v. Musammat Nayab Khanam, 74 P.L.R. 1914=22 Ind. Cas. 536.

(6) Benami transactions—Resulting trust—Presumption when property purchased in name of wife and daughter—Gift—Presumption, how rebutted—Muhammadan law—Gift of undivided share.

A benami purchase is in the nature of resulting trust in favour of the person from whose funds the purchase is made.

Where a Muhammadan purchased properties in the name of his wife and daughters, there is a strong presumption that they were intended as gifts to them, and the burden of proving the contrary lies on the person who asserts it. Where it is proved that the funds out of which the properties were purchased were all his and that he treated all the properties and the income derived therefrom as his own by entering them in his own accounts and ostensibly appeared towards the public as the owner, the presumption of a gift arising from the title-deeds is rebutted.

There cannot be, under the Muhammadan law, a gift of undivided share in immovable property, as such share is not capable of actual physical possession. Abdul Rahiman Nachiyal v. Mirathayar Ammal, 24 Ind. Cas. 10.

Berar Land Revenue Code.

(1) S. 69—Sale in Berar—Document creating occupancy rights—Registration—Registered occupant relinquishing right of occupancy—Effect—S. 64, Transfer of Property Act.

Berar Land Revenue Code—(Concluded).

The Transfer of Property Act was made applicable to Berar by Notification dated 16th May 1907. Since then, a sale as such in Berar, the consideration for which is above Rs. 100, can only be effected by a registered instrument.

Under S. 69 of the Berar Land Revenue Code, 1896, a registered occupant may, by giving a notice in writing to the Tabsildar, relinquish the occupancy either absolutely or in favour of a specified person. S. 69 of the Berar Land Revenue Code has not been abrogated by the Transfer of Property Act by implication.

The Transfer of Property Act merely lays down that a particular kind of transfer—a sale—can only be created by observing certain forms, but it does not say that results somewhat similar to those flowing from such a transfer cannot be attained under the authority of another Act without observing the forms laid down by the Transfer of Property Act.

The relinquishment in favour of a specified person does not carry with it all the incidents of a sale under the Transfer of Property Act. The person in whose favour the relinquishment has been made must take the holding subject to the prior mortgages validly created.

The procedure laid down by the Berar Land Revenue Code seems to be exhaustive and does not contemplate the registration of any document for the creation of occupancy rights under the Government. Zingu v. Gosawi, 10 N.L.R. 78=24 Ind. Cas. 868.

Bill of exchange—Shah Jog Hundi—Payment of forged Hundi—Rights of person who makes payment—Payee bound to refund.

According to the well-established custom among shroffs relating to Shah Jog Hundi.

Bill of Exchange—(Concluded).

the Shah who obtains payment of a Shah Jog-Hundi is, in the event of the Hundi turning out to be a false, fraudulent, stolen or forged Hundi, bound to refund the amount of the Hundi with interest, unless he produces the actual drawer, or the person who committed the fraud.

The Shah does not guarantee the solvency of the drawer, he guarantees the genuineness of the Hundi. A drawee will not pay a Hundi unless he has funds in his hands belonging to the drawer, or is willing to give him credit. And he will not pay on presentation of a Shah Jog-Hundi to a Shah unless he is satisfied as to the respectability of the Shah, as he looks to him in case of anything afterwards going wrong with the Hundi. The respectability of the Shah is a matter only for the drawee to consider, as it is difficult to conceive that a defendant would repudiate his liability to refund on the ground that he was not a respectable person.

The claim to a refund against a Shah who has received payment of a Hundi on the ground that the Hundi is a forgery must be made as soon as possible after the forgery has been discovered so as to enable the Shah to protect himself. Bansidhar Lachhminarayan v. Jwalaprasad Gayaprasad, 16 Bom. L.R. 434.

MACLEOD, J.

Bill of Lading.

Failure to produce it on the part of the consignee—Does it justify the carrying Company in refusing delivery of goods or exempt it from liability for not delivering the goods?

Where the consignee, having lost the bill of lading, was unable to produce it and where the carrying Company consequently refused to deliver the goods although the Company's manifest clearly showed the shipment of those goods to the consignee.

Held that, under the circumstances, the Company was bound to deliver the goods for their price after making certain that the loss of the bill of lading was a bona fide one. Eng Leong & Co. v. B I S N. & Co., 7 Bur. L.T. 92=24 Ind. Cas. 70.

Birt Jijmani.

Sweepers—Jarobakshi—Birt Jijmani, a well known form of tenure—How proved.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants for ownership and possession of birt jijmani to perform the services of sweepers in a particular locality. The defendants pleaded that they themselves were birt-dars and had been performing the services of jarob-kshi for more than sixty years.

Held, that jijmani birts are a well-known form of tenure in this country (a).

Held further, that where a claim to birt jijmani is put forward, plaintiff must prove either a grant or else some custom or such long continued possession as raises the presumption of a lost grant (b). Khushya v. Mangala, 12 A.L.J. 267=22 Ind. Cas. 957.
